During questioning Meade reported that the city was third in line for loan repayment behind MARAD and the state. He emphasized that only economic development funds would be used to cover the loan and that no social programs, such as housing, would be affected.

Meade also disputed Harold's claim that the loan would hurt the city's credit rating with HUD, saying he expected a top recommendation.

Solicitor McGrath confirmed the city's "tertiary position" in terms of loan repayment but said the city was "asserting any and all of its legal rights" and that Mayor Sheets would keep the council informed.

McGrath also said MARAD has expressed "very serious interest" in working with Quincy and wants development at the site. "We're trying to determine from MARAD what procedures they require," McGrath said. "We hope to get some direction immediately."

Under questioning from Councillor Daniel Raymond, McGrath said that the City Council and Mayor could legally serve as a redevelopment authority for the city.

After the updates, Councillor McCauley commented on the shipyard, saying he wanted to speak his piece and put the divisive issue behind him. He blamed Mayor Sheets for a "serious error in judgment" for ignoring the warnings of shipyard experts, government officials, and media reports, and especially the missed payment deadlines from MHI. He took issue with the mayor's defense of Emmanouil and his statement that he would do it all over again, likening it to the captain of the Titanic ramming the iceberg for a second time.

McCauley charged Emmanouil with benefiting greatly from the shipyard and then "taking a powder" by running a shipyard in Greece while Fore River failed. "He just washed his hands of it," McCauley said. "A modern day Pontius Pilate. Is this the man the mayor thinks so highly of?"

McCauley had high praise for Harold, saying, "He saw through this scheme from the very beginning."

President Harold made no bones about his lack of respect for Emmanouil. He said the dealings of the MHI owner at Fore River Shipyard would be known as "The Lying Game" and called Emmanouil "an operator who appears able to fool all the people all the time."

Emmanouil, Harold said, had lied to Quincy, Braintree, the state, the federal government, and others during the last five years. "This was no more than a plan to enhance a real estate deal," Harold said. "There was never any intention to build ships by this man."

Harold said that over 99 percent of funding for the shipyard came from the public sector.

Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary, took exception to Harold's comments. "I hope 'The Lying Game' doesn't apply to this city's chief executive, who has shown nothing but integrity during the whole process," Keenan said. "The shipyard stood idle for years until this mayor put a plan together. They're not building ships but it isn't sitting idle."

Harold confirmed his lying comments were reserved solely for Emmanouil but added that Sheets had displayed, "the poorest judgment that many of us have seen in many years and possibly for years to come."

Other councillors, including Raymond, spoke in defense of the shipyard, pointing out the tangible improvements to the area and that support for shipbuilding came from as high as Senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry and even President Clinton.

Harold's EDIC Proposal Rejected By Council

Council President Paul Harold's Home Rule Petition to create a separate redevelopment authority for the Fore River Shipyard was rejected Monday night by councillors in a 6-3 vote.

The measure, tabled at the last council session, lost an earlier 7-2 vote to move into committee.

Harold proposed the idea as a way to speed development of the Fore River Shipyard, now controlled by the federal Maritime Administration (MARAD) since the default of owner MHL.

Opponents saw it as redundant and a challenge to the existing and well-established Quincy 2000.

Councillor Daniel Raymond was the lead spokesman against the creation of an Economic and Industrial Corporation (EDIC), calling the petition "re-inventing the wheel" because, he argued, the council and the mayor already act as a redevelopment authority with the help of the Planning Department and the public/private Quincy 2000.

The new entity, he said, would only place an extra burden on taxpayers while duplicating services.

Raymond also objected to the plan's apparent lack of input from Quincy Point residents who live near the shipyard and the makeup of its board. "This is a silly proposal," Raymond said. "This document is fatally flawed. It makes no sense and we should kill it tonight."

Councillor Patrick McDermott also voted against the EDIC, arguing that Quincy 2000 was already in place and could do an excellent job advocating for the city's interests. It was more useful, McDermott said, to concentrate on the possible expansion and re-evaluation of Quincy 2000 powers than the creation of a new organization.

saying that his call for an EDIC came at the suggestion of MARAD officials and individuals in marine real estate. "At some point somewhere we will be asked to move forward," Harold said. "We cannot sit at the table until we have some corporate entity."

Harold rejected the idea that the EDIC would cost money, emphasizing that the organization would not exist until there was a specific piece of property to act upon, namely the shipyard. He also pointed out that Quincy 2000 has no jurisdiction in Braintree (where a part of the shipyard is located), has no capacity to float revenue bonds, and has no role for the City Council.

Harold resigned from the Quincy 2000 board of directors Friday to remove any appearance of conflict of interest. Harold said his letter made clear that he intended to resign only while the EDIC matter was pending.

Teens Lose Weight For Free During Nutrition Month

Did you know that one in five children is overweight enough to be considered obese? That statistic comes from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which defines obesity as being 20% or more overweight.

To help put an end to this problem, Weight Watchers is offering teens free Weight Watchers membership in the month of March, which, incidentally, is National Nutrition Month.

"The best time for people to learn healthy eating habits is when they're young," says Florine Mark, president and CEO of The WW Group, Inc., the largest franchise of Weight Watchers International. "That way, they won't have to unlearn bad habits later on in life, after much of the damage to their bodies has already been done."

Weight Watchers' Teen program is designed specifically for youngsters ages 10 through 18, which means it works for youngsters on the run, who would prefer to avoid the hassles normally associated with dieting.

"Kids don't want to have to stop and weigh their food or count calories," says Mark. "With 1.2.3 SUCCESS, kids can still eat all the foods they love, like pizza, burgers and fries."

During the month of March, anyone 10-18 years of age may join Weight Watchers for free with a paying adult throughout the month of March. These teens may continue free as long as they attend with a paying adult consecutively. A one-time fee of $15 will be charged to cover costs of printed materials. Teens will also receive a free Dining Out Companion to help them make wise choices when eating away from home.

Health experts say childhood obesity can be attributed to a combination of genetics, overeating, high-fat diet, lack of exercise, or too much sedentary time. During teen years, adolescents need nutritious, well-balanced meals to perform their best in school. Proper nutrition has a direct effect on growth, weight and energy level. Occasional fast-foods aren't necessarily harmful but they shouldn't become a daily meal staple. Thankfully, many fast food restaurants have expanded menus to include health-conscious choices.

Mark says National Nutrition Month is the best time for parents to educate their children about the benefits of healthy nutrition.

"The best gift parents can give to their children is the gift of good eating habits," says Mark. "The goal is to stop them from eating too many sweets and fatty foods before they do damage to their bodies, and before they're hooked on them."

WHAT ABOUT THAT PAIN IN THE NECK?

We've all heard the expression, "You give me a pain in the neck," meaning that stress can affect us in a painful way, especially if there is weakness in one's neck.

The neck is the most delicate part of the spine and the most easily injured. It is comprised of seven separate bones that are loosely connected together by ligaments and muscles. The structure of the neck allows for great mobility, but also predisposes it to injury. Poor posture, occupation, falling asleep in a chair or on the couch, car accidents, falls, twists and strain take their toll on the neck (cervical spine).

The part of the nervous system housed within the bones of the neck is an extension of the brain. Displacements or misalignments of the neck bones may cause pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves commonly referred to as "pinched nerves." Some of the symptoms seen most often with pinched nerves in the neck are: headaches, sinusitis, dizziness, neck pain, shoulder pain, and pain, numbness and/or tingling into the arm, hand or fingers.

One should always consult a chiropractor after a motor vehicle accident, fall or strain, even if you do not think you are hurt.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Somerset Sinks North Girls, 77-59

By CHRIS POISSON

Before last Wednesday's tournament game, North Quincy coach Doug MacFarlane said Somerset was basically a perimeter team.

The good news: his scouting report said its outside game was like a golfer's short game gone astray — it can't find the net.

Well, let's just say, the Lady Raiders found their Tiger-esque stroke that left MacFarlane thunderstruck after watching his seventh-seeded Red Raiders (13-8) fall, 77-59, at home in the first round of Division 1 South sectional play, snapping a five-game winning streak.

"We ran into a barnstorm," he said. "My scouting report said they didn't have a very good outside shooting game. Wow. Holy Cow. They shot really well. I would love to see their shooting chart."

The chart reads a blistering 68% to 37% in favor of Somerset. Ouch. The 10th-seeded Lady Raiders (14-9) started hot with a 7-0 spurt and then decided to heat up. In a span of five minutes that began late in the first half and spilled into the second, they went on a tide-turning, 21-4 run that turned a two-point deficit into a 15-point advantage.

"That stuff hurts," said MacFarlane, whose team went 4:41 between field goals. "I was hoping that wouldn't happen. That's been a problem with us all year. We go into little spells where we give up 7, 8, 9 points and now we're behind the eight ball. We've been lucky this year in that we've fought back in a lot of games and ended up winning the games. But this time it didn't happen."

North Quincy, led by junior point guard Casey Ridge, battled back to pull within seven points. After sitting out most of the first half with three fouls, Ridge sparked the Red Raiders' fast-break attack and finished with 12 points, all in the second half.

"She had three fouls early and that hurt," MacFarlane said. "She's the key to our offense. She's the key to our running game. In the second half she just took over."

"She'll take it to the basket. That's what I like about her. She dishes. We've had to work hard with her to look more for her own shot. She loves to pass the ball."

North Quincy couldn't climb over the hill, though. Each time it made a run, Somerset answered with a heartbreaking hoop. On three straight possessions, Somerset scored off an offensive rebound. Freshman forward Rachel Smith (12 points) had two of the daggers.

"We didn't box out very well," MacFarlane said. "Those were key baskets that she got on the rebounds. Those hurt. Every time we scored, boom, she came back and grabbed the rebound and laid it back in. We just couldn't stop her."

After Smith's second putback, Ridge hit a layup to make it 62-55. But sophomore Alisha Pieroni drilled a trey and senior captain Kate Ariagno scored a layup after a timeout to lock up the win. Somerset hit 8 of 10 free throws in the final 1:15 to close out the game.

In the first half, North Quincy fell behind 7-0 and then outscored Somerset, 23-14, to grab a short-lived, 23-

21 lead. Senior sharpshooter Jill Nicholson, a two-time OCL all-star, was absolutely on fire. She buried four first-half bombs and came up with some steals that led to easy transition buckets. She finished with 19 points, 14 in the first 16 minutes.

"Jill Nicholson is one of the best shooters I've ever coached," MacFarlane said. "Those 3-pointers she hit were big. It kept us in the game in the first half. She had one that had to have been an NBA three."

Sophomore guard Lauren Sleeth, an OCL all-star, slipped in 11 points for North Quincy and junior forward Jen Conley added 8.

Junior captains Jess Gaffney (18) and Katie Hart (16) powered Somerset's offense, while sophomore Nadia Norman contributed 11 points, including three 3-pointers.

"It's disappointing to have to end the season this way," MacFarlane said. "We had a great year. We have nothing to be ashamed of. Thirteen wins in the league we play in is decent. We have a good future here. We're going to be back in the tournament."

Four Local Wrestlers League All-Stars

Four local wrestlers were recently named to the Old Colony League All-Star teams.

Sophomore Mike Murphy (112) of Quincy made the 1st Team, while teammates Joe Hern (sophomore, 145) and Rory Lydon (junior, 215) earned 2nd Team honors.

North Quincy's Charlie Action (119) made the 2nd Team. North Quincy also picked up the Team Sportsmanship Award, voted on by the coaches.

HITCH UP YOUR BELTS

Rubber belts under the hood of your automobile connect key components to the engine's drive shaft. Working with the aid of pulleys, they are responsible for operating the engine fan, water pump, air-conditioning compressor, power-steering system and the alternator. This all-important latter component provides electrical power and charges the battery while the engine is running. Thus, it is vitally important that the engine belts be inspected regularly for cracks and looseness. Generally, there should not be more than about a half-inch "play" in the belt when you press down on it in a center position between two pulleys. Loose belts should be tightened, while cracked and frayed ones need to be replaced.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is very proud of our ASE Certified Technicians and of the equipment on hand to properly service every system of your car. Springfield Snaps Jr. Rangers 5-Game Winning Streak

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy Junior Rangers are finally commanding respect in their inaugural ride through the Interstate Junior Hockey League.

The first-year club hasn't had a smooth sail, but it has turned things around the past three weeks by engineering a five-game winning streak.

The Rangers carried that winning streak, their longest of the season, into Quincy Youth Arena Sunday night when they clashed with the league's top dog, the Springfield Junior Pies.

Springfield, which is loaded with talent, boasts three of the top five scorers and goalies in the league, where it has compiled a 28-6 record.

Quincy (13-35-3 overall) outplayed the heavyweights for two periods, but blew a 2-0 lead in the final 11 minutes of the game to fall, 3-2.

The Rangers got on the board first when forward Mike Mulligan took a pass from forward Ryan Sweeney and beat goalie Matt Porter top shelf at 12:52 of the first.

Quincy extended the lead to 2-0 when forward Mark DiGiovanni flipped a shot past Porter from the left circle at 14:18 of the second.

Springfield switched goalies to start the third period as Ben Conway replaced Porter between the pipes. Nearly four minutes into the game, he came up with a sensational save as he stoned Pat O'Sullivan.

At 8:58, Springfield finally found the net when forward Dan Nelson redirected defenseman Tom Waterhouse's blast past goalie Kyle Bunstein. Springfield evened the score when forward Jeff Urban netted his 46 goal of the season at 15:24.

Waterhouse scored the game-winner at 17:19, rifling a power-play shot past Bunstein from the left point.

After pulling Bunstein for the extra skater, the Rangers had several chances to tie the game in the final seconds, but Chris Holt and Mulligan couldn't punch the puck home.

High School Hockey Tournament Presidents Fall To Formidable Archies

By CHRIS POISSON

Quincy coach Bob Sylvia knew what his hockey team was running up against when it drew Archbishop Williams in the first round of the Division I South Sectional tournament.

He boldly stated, "If we're not ready to play, we could easily lose 15-1."

Guess what? No. 7 Quincy (10-7-2) wasn't ready to play as No. 10 AW (10-6-4) whipped them, 9-1, Friday night at Stoneham. Although Quincy had the higher seed, it was clearly the underdog and it showed.

"Archies is a tough draw," Sylvia said. "They're an extremely good team. In my opinion, they're as good as any team in the Super 8 tournament. They were just too good for us."

"I think Archies might be the best team in the tournament. I don't see them losing. They deserve to win it."

Mike Sullivan got AW on the board just 1:20 into the game. Quincy kept it close in the first period with sophomore Bill McKeon's 19th goal of the season. But it was lucky to be tied at 1 as it was outshot, 18-5.

It was all Bishops in the second period. They beat goalie Ryan Kruegar seven times, including a five-goal flurry in about a two-minute span.

"They have some real sharpshooters," Sylvia said. "They have a lot of firepower and they exploited our weaknesses."

Sylvia pulled his senior netminder in the third and let sophomores Tom Shruhan and Shaun Flaherty split the period. AW scored one goal to account for the final score.

The Presidents were a talented team that never reached its potential this season because of their off-ice behavior. As the season rolled along, they watched their preseason goals—league championship and quarterfinals—slip out of their hands.

Quincy had its moments with a five-game winning streak and wins over Franklin, North Quincy and Barnstable, but the off-ice incidents were too much of a distraction — and it cost them.

"As a team, what we talked about in early December didn't come through in March," Sylvia said. "We were a team that didn't reach our potential because we didn't commit to school work."

Although Quincy graduates seven seniors, Sylvia believes the team can rebound next year if the younger players learn from the upperclassmen's mistakes.

"The good news is we have a bunch of young kids," Sylvia said. "Have the younger kids learned from the mistakes of the older kids? Hopefully they have learned a lesson. Hopefully they realize they have to make an educational commitment along with athletics. Make sure you go to school, go to your classes and earn respect from the teachers."

"Now the question is to take the experience and the good things from this year and overcome the negative things, and I think we can be back next year."

Red Raiders Done In By Hingham's Depth

The fact that the North Quincy hockey team even laced up the skates for a tournament game this season is a remarkable feat itself.

Graduation hit the Red Raiders harder than McGwire's, Sosa's, or Griffey's bat hits a baseball — and they sure felt it with the loss of a 100-point line.

And after stumbling to just two wins in their first eight games, no one thought the young squad would make it to Ground Hog's Day, let alone March.

But North Quincy overcame all that and its doubters when it earned the right to face Independent league champs Hingham in the first round of the Division I South sectionals.

Unfortunately, the Harbormen's depth was one thing the Red Raiders couldn't overcome as No. 6 Hingham (14-7-3) cruised to a 4-0 victory over No. 11 North Quincy (10-10-1) Friday night at a packed house at UMass-Boston.

Hingham beat Barnstable to advance to yesterday's (Wednesday's) semifinal showdown against No. 10 Archbishop Williams.

"The bottom line is Hingham had more depth," said coach Bob Doyle. "Our first line matched well with their first line. But their next three lines were stronger than ours."

"I tip my hat to Hingham."

They were well-coached and came ready to play. They were very disciplined. I knew they were a strong opponent; I just didn't know how strong."

Hingham dominated all aspects of the game and it jumped out to a 2-0 first-period lead after a 10-3 advantage in shots. Jim Hanlon and Tony Forgiore tallied for Hingham.

Early in the second period, Hingham's Tony Morash beat goalie Matt Gregory (23 saves) to put his team up 3-0.

"That really sealed our fate," said Doyle of the third goal. "But Matt Gregory played phenomenal. That was no surprise. He has played that way all year. He kept us in the game. He gave us a chance."

North Quincy couldn't muster anything offensively, recording just 16 shots on goalie Kevin McGowan.

"They definitely controlled the play," Doyle said. "But my guys didn't quite. It was a lesson learned. We'll just have to work harder for next season. There's no shame. I told the kids in the locker room to be proud of themselves."

Hanley Resolve For 6th QPD Captain Sent To Committee

Councillor Gregory Hanley's resolution requesting the hiring of a sixth Quincy Police captain was sent to committee for study by an 8-1 vote.

The new captain, Hanley said, would be responsible for Community Policing and would address certain community issues in the Houghs Neck area.

Councillor Frank McCauley was the lone vote against, arguing that the mayor could simply appoint a new fifth captain to replace recently retired Capt. Donald Riley and put the new captain in charge of Community Policing.

According to McCauley, a 6th captain would cost the city $120,736 a year.

The Future Of Education Reform

tract the highest quality teachers, modernize school buildings and technology in the classroom, and increase the federal investment in school districts across the nation. By enacting these proposals, we can move closer to our goal of a quality education for every child in America and a genuine opportunity to succeed.

In recent year, we have set the stage for major education reforms, helping states put high standards and more effective accountability in place. We know we can do more to bring these reforms to life in every classroom across the country. The need is urgent, and we can't stop now.

Alternatives that call for block grants and aid to private schools are the wrong direction for the future of education. They undermine the current productive federal-state-local partnership. They break our commitment to parents and communities to do all we can to help improve public schools and help all children do well in those schools.

We want to work with parents and communities to improve public schools. Uncle Sam must not stand on the sidelines and watch schools fail, when we can do so much to help parents, teachers, and communities achieve better results for their children and their schools.

We want to create new partnerships with states, communities, schools, and parents across the country to improve the achievement of all children. Their urgent needs are out national priorities.

We can help schools put a qualified teacher in every classroom, and provide every new teacher with a qualified mentor.

We can help reduce class size, so that students get the individual attention they need and teachers can maintain better discipline.

We can help communities modernize their schools, so that all students can learn up-to-date technologies.

We can help communities make schools safer, and expand after-school opportunities to keep children out of trouble, and provide extra help with their studies.

We can increase the federal investment in education to help states and communities rescue failing schools, deal with rising enrollments, and achieve higher standards.

We can do more to help schools close the achievement gap between minority and non-minority students--between poor and non-poor students--and between English-speaking students and those with limited proficiency in English.

We can give parents and the general public better information about the quality of their schools and the program being made by their schools in meeting realistic goals for students achievements. To achieve maximum effectiveness in these reforms, we will ask states and schools to use proven effective strategies in spending federal funds. In ways like these, the federal government can be a strong helping hand for the schools, parents, and children of Quincy.

It's the right direction for education, and the right direction for the nation.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

WHEN TO SEEK TREATMENT

Podiatrists specialize in the treatment of common foot and ankle problems. Several warning signs warrant a visit to the podiatrist. Your heel hurts, particularly after lying down. A toenail has become thickened or discolored. You have growths that look like calluses with black dots in the center, which could be plantar warts. An ingrown toenail has become red, swollen and painful - signs of infection. Your toe joints are overlapped and bent or misshapen with growths. You have diabetes. Your toe joints are stiff, enlarged and painful or your ankles are unstable and "give way" often. Your toes feel numb or burn, or you have pain in the ball of your foot. A podiatrist can help with any of these conditions. We offer preventive care, medical intervention and surgical treatment services for a full range of foot concerns. We are committed to providing uncompromising excellence in diagnosis and treatment of your foot and ankle problem, as well as in advising you on how to keep your feet healthy. PRIME TRAVELER

As heard on WJDA Radio, 1300 AM every Thursday at 11:00am!
BETTER BARGAINING
In the United States, residents negotiate prices for cars, houses, flea market items and antiques. In other countries, particularly the Middle and Far East, prices for almost everything can be debated. In Israel, people even bargain for taxicab rides. When traveling to a land where bargaining is customary, take advantage of the practice. Begin by offering about half of the requested price and be willing to walk away if you are not satisfied. Many owners will call you back to make a deal. When you purchase something for more than $50, use a credit card to give you an accurate, official proof of purchase. Also ask for a receipt with a full description of the item purchased. The best bargains are those in which everybody wins. That's why coming to PRIME TRAVEL for travel planning is such a bargain - you get extraordinary travel services and you'll keep coming back to us whenever you need to make travel plans. From the biggest decision in travel plans - where to the little extras that will make your trip truly memorable, you've got a friend here at 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay. PH: 617-472-3697.

Coalition Files New Appeal On Lot 23

The Coalition for Lot 23 has filed a new appeal to block construction of 136 luxury condominiums on that lot in Marina Bay.

The Coalition, made up of citizens from Quincy, Boston and Milton, along with the Neponset River Watershed Association, the Quincy Citizens Association and the Friends of the Neponset Estuary filed a notice of appeal in Norfolk Superior Court.

"Our goal all along has been to have the property purchased as open space," said Ian Cooke, Executive Director of the Neponset River Watershed Association, "but it has been incredibly frustrating to work with Mayor Sheets' office which has never been willing to work seriously on an open space effort. If Lot 23 is to be saved, it will require aggressive and effective leadership from Quincy's local elected officials."

The Coalition contends that the state erred in issuing a permit to build on Lot 23 under the state Wetlands Protection Act. The lot, including the proposed building location, is a type of coastal wetland known as "Land Subject to Coastal Storm Flooding." Last year the state Department of Environmental Protection issued the developer a permit to build, citing the fact that the agency has no regulations protecting this particular type of wetland. The Coalition for Lot 23 argues that even though no regulations have been adopted, the law itself clearly requires protection of all wetlands.

"There are really two issues at stake here," said Bryan Stevens, attorney for the Coalition. "First is the question of what can legally be built at Lot 23. The second issue is perhaps more important and that is the precedent that this case sets. The Department of Environmental Protection has outlined a policy that will effectively eliminate the existing protection for wildlife habitat in coastal areas. What's really at stake is the protection of wildlife habitat in coastal floodplains across the state."

The Coalition hopes of protecting Lot 23 were buoyed last fall when an impressive 78 percent of voters across Quincy cast their ballots in favor of having the City purchase Lot 23 for open space by eminent domain. However, with a few notable exceptions, response to the vote by city officials has been muted. The Mayor's office has been studying acquisition options at the City Council's request. While no official action has been taken yet, the City has secured state grant funds to purchase a nearby property known as the Dickinson Parcel, but Dickinson has not yet agreed to sell his property to the City.

PAUL DAMORE of the DPW prepares 1998 composted leaves for use on city ballfields. There was a substantial increase in leaf collection in 1999.

Quincy recycled 5,243 tons of paper, plastic, glass, and metal in 1999, up from 4,053 tons recycled in 1998, according to figures released by the Recycling Commission.

Unrecycled trash sent to the SEMASS incinerator in Rochester, MA, was 34,699 tons, 204 tons less than in 1998.

"We are thrilled with the 30 percent increase in tons recycled and the reduction in incinerated solid waste," said Michael Hurley, chair of the Recycling Commission.

"The increase in recycling and the reduction in solid waste incinerated translated into direct cost savings to the city," said Rosemary Nolan, project manager, DPW. "We paid roughly $50 per ton to incinerate our trash while we received $8 per ton from the state for all materials we recycled."

The Commission also noted a dramatic increase in the number of compost bins sold: 107 bins were sold in 1999, up from 17 sold in 1998. "Quincy residents are increasingly realizing that composting food waste, grass clippings, and leaves at home is great for the environment and creates 'black gold' for their yards and gardens," said Sally Owen, former chair of the commission.

Household Hazardous Waste Day was well attended with 1826 residents participating. "In order to increase convenience for residents, we will be holding six household hazardous waste days this year, including three on Wednesday afternoon and early evening," said Nolan.

The first date will be Saturday, May 6, and will include a collection of TV and computer monitors and keyboards which contain lead.

The Recycling Commission thanked residents of Quincy for the positive impact they've had on the environment through their recycling efforts.

According to figures from the Dept. of Environmental Protection, it takes 95 percent less energy to make aluminum from recycled cans (recycling 1 can saves enough energy to run a TV for three hours) and there is 95 percent less air pollution than manufacturing a can from virgin materials. Recycling one ton of paper saves 17 trees, 6953 gallons of water, 463 gallons of oil, 60 pounds of air pollutants, and 4077 kWh of energy. Recycling 1 glass bottle saves enough electricity to light a 100 watt bulb four hours.

For information on what to recycle in Quincy, how to compost, buying recycled in Quincy, safe disposal of hazardous waste, and organizations that will reuse items no longer wanted, call 770-BINS or visit the DPW at 55 Sea St.

Compost bins may be purchased from the DPW for $22 by calling in advance. A video on how to compost entitled "Turning Your Spoils to Soil" can be borrowed from the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Blue recycling bins are available for pick-up by city residents at the DPW between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

For additional information, contact Sally Owen of the Recycling Commission at 472-0799.

those two races were not known at press-time with the vote throughout the district incomplete.

On the Democratic site, Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti and Bernice Mader, administrative aide to Mayor James Sheets, were re-elected unopposed to the state committee seats. Bellotti received 99.24 percent or 8,188 votes; Mader polled 99.00 percent or 7,290 votes.

There were 63 write-ins and 2,064 blanks in the Democratic state committeeman race; and 74 write-ins and 2,951 blanks in the Democratic state committeewoman ballot.

McCain took four of the possible five New England primaries during Super Tuesday voting.

McCain defeated Bush handily in Massachusetts and also notched victories in Vermont, Connecticut, and Rhode Island.

McCain had previously won the New Hampshire primary in early February.

Bush's sole New England victory came in Maine.

As of press time, Vice President Al Gore had made a clean sweep of the Super Tuesday primaries, with 10 states reporting.

City Loses $11,180 For Each Person Not Counted $ Millions Ride On Census Returns

The U.S. Census 2000 forms are arriving in the mail with potential millions of dollars for the city in federal funds at stake.

For each person not counted, the city will lose $1,118 a year for the next 10 years when the next federal census will be taken.

Over 10 years that adds up to $11,180 per person who ignores the census and does not fill out and return the form.

It has been estimated that there has been as many as 10,000 people undercounted in Quincy in the past for not responding to the census.

That would make a loss of $11,180,000 a year or $111,800,000 over the 10-year period in federal funds for education, health, highways, housing, environment, senior citizen and other community programs.

Mayor James Sheets, Congressman William Delahunt, City Clerk Joseph Shea and Dr. Peter Capernaros, director of U.S. Census Regional Office in Randolph, this week joined in a don't-let-Quincy-down plea.

MHI Files For Chapter 11 Still Wants To Build Ships

By CRAIG SALTERS

In the latest development at the Fore River Shipyard, both Massachusetts Heavy Industries, Inc., and MHI Shipbuilding LLC filed Monday for Chapter 11 protection in US Bankruptcy Court.

As a result of the filing, creditors will be unable to liquidate company assets at the yard, which was seized by U.S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) officials Feb. 25.

MHI officials insist the move is to allow them time to reorganize and obtain financing for the troubled yard and that they still intend to build ships on the site.

MHI defaulted on loan payments on a $55 million loan to Fleet Bank. MARAD paid the loan in full and took control of the yard, which is estimated to be 80 percent complete.

Mayor James Sheets said

Cellucci To Take Part In Ceremony Groundbreaking For Concourse Today--At Last

After several delays, groundbreaking ceremonies for Phase I of the Quincy Concourse will take place today (Thursday) at 10:30 at the Parkingway near the Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center.

Mayor James Sheets will welcome Governor Paul Cellucci, who is scheduled to make remarks at 10:45.

State Secretary of Transportation Kevin Sullivan is also scheduled to attend, as are members of the Quincy legislative delegation and members of the city council.

Delays in the groundbreaking, Sheets said, were caused by the various agencies involved in the project, as well as the governor, trying to agree on a date all could attend.

The $5.3 million project will construct a two-lane, two-way road connecting Burgin Parkway to Hancock St. by crossing over the MBTA railroad tracks.

Sheets has promoted the concourse as a catalyst for downtown development because it will provide a direct connection to Hancock St.

Sheets has cited Outback Steakhouse's recent interest in renovating and locating at the former MediaOne site, corner of School St. and Parkingway, as evidence that the project is already bearing fruit.

Construction on the project has been underway for almost two months.

Phase II of the project, which involves connecting Hancock St. to the intersection of McGrath Highway and Southern Artery to ultimately provide major east-west access to Quincy Center, is independent from Phase I and has no set timetable or funding.

RED CROSS MONTH has been proclaimed during March in Quincy by Mayor James Sheets. he was informed of the bankruptcy filing Monday afternoon by James Dunkel, chief financial officer of MHI Shipbuilding LLC.

Sheets made clear he was not privy to the business decisions of MHI but did say that Chapter 11 filing had always been an option open to the company. "Generally, Chapter 11 allows an owner to reorganize and eventually present a financial plan to a federal judge," explained.

Sheets did not think MHI's bankruptcy affected the shipyard's timetable. "Either process (Chapter 11 or MARAD) would have taken time," Sheets said. "This doesn't change the timing at all."

Board Gives Go-Ahead For Steakhouse Restaurant

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board voted unanimously Tuesday in favor of a new restaurant - the Outback Steakhouse at 223 Parking Way.

The 8,000 square foot restaurant is at the site of the former MediaOne on School Street and will seat 246 persons.

Chairman Joseph Shea read a letter from City Engineer Jack Gillan who said there was adequate parking and said there would be "no impact" on the area.

Shea said he had met successfully with Fr. Peter Quinn, pastor of St. John's Church whose concerns revolved around the church parking lot and was assured that it would not be used by restaurant patrons.

Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott said he toured the area of the restaurant and gave his "full support" adding as chairman of the Economic Development, that the restaurant would be a "positive addition and fantastic opportunities to the neighbors."

The restaurant would not be open for lunch, but for dinners every night of the week. It will have an Australian theme and use various herbs in their preparation of food.

The menu will include uniquely -seasoned steaks, prime rib, chops, ribs, chicken seafood and pasta.

Kevin Herron, who will manage the restaurant assured Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue and McDermott, that the eatery would not use a wood fired grill and that emission from odors would be minimal.

According to Atty. Robert Fleming, plans for a June opening of the restaurant is predicted.

Shea said the proposal will now go to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) for approval.

Auto Body Shop Draws Neighbors' Ire

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Karl's Auto Body came under fire at Tuesday's License Board meeting as board members heard complaints from neighbors and Ward 3 Councillor Pat McDermott.

After a lengthy discussion on the unsightly conditions at the establishment on 65 Holbrook Rd., including unlicensed vehicles and large trucks parked on the sidewalk and street, the board voted to continue the hearing until March 28.

Neighbor Greg Newton, president of the Wollaston/Montclair Neighborhood Association said he thought the owner Alan LeBrun had "moved in the right direction" in trying to clean up the area of late, but showed pictures taken earlier Tuesday depicting the conditions.

Before they voted to continue, McDermott spoke of obstruction of the sidewalks, and called the situation "unacceptable".

McDermott added that car parts, bolts and nuts are "all over the place," so if anyone was walking near the area, they would certainly step on some debris.

Chairman Joseph Shea said complaints about operating at night and the parking of a big boat which some likened to the "titanic" were brought to his attention.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the impact of the neighborhood and their "Quality of life" has suffered because cars parked on the sidewalks have forced persons to walk on the street to get by.

At one point, after Gorman noted a lot of companies who repair cars, turn out to be junk yards as well adding it was a "poor way to do business."

When LeBrun attempted to personalize the situation by mentioning a relative of Gorman's Shea told him to "talk to the issue" and said the license board "is lenient," but to stick to the subject and not personalize any member of the board.

LeBrun apologized and told the board that in order to move some of the cars, they all have to have titles and some of them cannot be moved until they do.

He added that it cost $100 a mile to move the boat, but nonetheless promised the board that all cars, trucks and the boats would be removed.

Police Chief Thomas Frane said he didn't want to wait until March 28 to have the sidewalks cleaned, but ordered LeBrun to clear the street now, get the cars "out of there" and to make sure that access and egress had to be cleaned up.

FIRE DEPARTMENT PROMOTIONS — City Clerk Joseph Shea swears in Michael Orseno to the rank of captain and Michael Connors to lieutenant at a ceremony at City Hall. License Board Agenda For March 28, April 18

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting announced the agenda for March 28 and April 18 meetings.

The March 28 agenda:
•A request from Ward 4 Councillor Mike D'Amico regarding the salvage license held by Sugarman's 299 Centre St.

•A request from Home Depot on Willard St., West

Quincy to open a half hour earlier in the summer months.

•Complaints about BFI and the debris in the area.

•The recent shooting incident behind the VFW Bryan Post, 24 Broad St.

•On April 18, the board will conduct a disciplinary hearing resulting in a sting operation conducted March 2 by Det. Lieut. Robert M.

Perchard, liquor inspector and license board agent involving 19 establishments.

Chairman Joseph Shea said in the years since he has been a member of the license board, he had never seen such "terrific work done all in one night," and with Police Chief Thomas

Frane echoing "excellent job."

3 Wounded, Four Arrested Police Still Seek Gunman In Shooting

An early morning shooting Sunday outside the Bryan VFW Post on Broad St. has left four people under arrest -- three of them wounded-- and police still searching for a missing gunman.

Quincy Police believe the incident was gang-related.

The License Board has the shooting on the agenda for its March 28 meeting and will consider how to prevent such occurrences in the future.

The incident took place after midnight as a "sweet sixteen" party, attended by an estimated 200 to 300 people, broke up early after someone had purchased a drink for a minor.

Two gunmen walked up to a car carrying three young men and began shooting, hitting each man in the leg. One of the passengers allegedly fired back once before his gun jammed.

One of the shooters, Edgar P. Monteiro, 26, of Dorchester, was arrested Mon-

Regulations Require Recycling Of TVs, Computer Monitors

Beginning April 1, the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) will prohibit the disposal, or transfer for disposal, of cathode ray tubes (CRTs) at all Massachusetts landfills.

CRTs are the glass picture tubes found in televisions, computer monitors, and video games that protect users against radiation. The average CRT contains about five pounds of lead.

Instead of placing these items curbside for trash collection, Quincy residents can dispose of the materials at any of the six household hazardous waste drop-off collections that will be held this year at the Department of Public Works facility.

This year the DPW will increase household hazardous waste collections from the traditional, once a year event, to the following six dates: Saturday, May 6, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.; Wednesday, June 7, 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Wednesday, July 12, 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Wednesday, August 16, 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Saturday, Sept. 30, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.; and Saturday, October 28, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

The program is for residents only, not for commercial use. A citywide mailing with these dates will also go out toward the end of March so that residents may have the information readily at hand for this and other events throughout the year. Anyone who does not receive the mailing may call 770-BINS and leave their name and address so that a flyer may be sent to them immediately. For questions on the electronics recycling, household hazardous products, curbside recycling, or trash collection, the DPW has a 24-hour hotline for residents to call at their convenience. They will receive a call back with the requested information either that same day or the next business day.

Businesses and institutions with CRT's to recycle should consult the Recycling Services Directory published by the Department of Environmental Protection to locate a recycling company. The Recycling Services Directory is available from the DEP website at: www.state.dept.ma/dep/recycle or the DEP Infoline at (617) 338-2255.

The DEP is taking this regulatory action for the following reasons:

- Continued disposal of bulky electronic components in landfills will unnecessarily accelerate the pace at which the few remaining landfills will run out of space.
- Incineration of these items carries a potential health risk. Metals from electronics can be emitted into the air or end up concentrated in the incinerator ash.

- The waste ban will promote the reuse of unwanted computers through charitable organizations, as well as the recycling of lead and leaded glass contained in the CRT.

- Each year, the state throws out about 25,000 tons of CRT electronics. Recycling and repairing those items could create up to 1100 new jobs.

- Electronics recycling reduces the need for mining of copper, gold, silver, and lead.

Children's Reading Hour, Book Fair At Manet Health

The Manet Community Health Center will present a Reading Hour for 2 to 7 year olds and a Spring Book Fair, Saturday, March 25.

The event will be from 10 a.m. to noon at the Manet

Special guest for the children's reading hour will be Raspberry Rose.

Gillis Gives Weymouth A Hand

Former City Clerk John Gillis has been helping Weymouth ease into its new form of city government.

Gillis is working as a consultant to Town Clerk Frank Fryer's office and the new town council.

He's advising them on setting up ordinances, council committees, council rules and regulations, budget, etc.

"It's interesting seeing close-up Weymouth's transition from a long-time town government to a new city form," he says.

He sees a lot of enthusiasm in Weymouth for the town operating like a city. But Weymouth, larger than 13 Massachusetts cities, is remaining a town.

There are still a lot of people opposed to the change and wanting to be convinced Weymouth has taken the right government route.

Weymouth went to the right man for help.

Gillis, a City Hall legend, was in the Quincy clerk's office 37 years--two as assistant clerk under the late Allan Cole and 35 as city clerk. He knows that field inside out.

Gillis retired in 1992 and started his own political career, running for and being elected a Norfolk County commissioner, a post he currently holds.

"Weymouth's government will be similar to Quincy's but there are differences," says Gillis.

It has an 11-member council instead of the nine-member council Quincy has. Five of the 11 serve at-large and six as district councillors.

The mayoral term in Weymouth is four years instead of the two-year term Quincy has.

Gillis says he prefers Quincy's two-year term.

"I don't think a mayor really needs a four-year term," Gillis says. "If he is doing a good job, the voters will give him another term after two years. Two year terms make it more accountable."

Weymouth's first mayor, David Madden, who is on leave from his fire chief's job, has a Quincy connection. His brother, Kevin, is Quincy's personnel director.

And Weymouth's town council has a Quincy link. Atty. Pamela Jonah, one of the councillors, is a former Quincy Point resident and Quincy High School graduate.

"I think the voters of Weymouth made the right decision going to the city form of government because of its size," says Gillis.

He thinks eventually most of the Doubting Thomases will come to see the government change as the right move.

QUINCY'S RON KAUFMAN who is playing a major role in Texas Gov. George Bush's Presidential campaign, must have been disappointed to say the least in last week's Republican primary results here in his hometown. Arizona Senator John McCain, who since has halted his campaign, trounced Bush here 65 to 29 percent.

KAUFMAN

Two Quincy Residents Earn Doctorates

The University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign announces that two Quincy residents, Kevin Spencer and Eve Valera, graduated from the school in 1999. Both graduated with Ph.D. degrees in October.

Kaufman was on President George Bush's election team and served as an assistant to him at the White House.

Kaufman recently appeared on CNN's "Cross-Fire" as a Republican strategist pushing for George W.

Kaufman got interested in politics as a student at Quincy College. His teacher was Jim Sheets. When Sheets decided to run for the Ward 4 city council seat in 1972, Kaufman was one of his key campaign workers.

The two, Republican and Democrat, have remained close friends.

A NOTE FROM Don Uvanitte, Quincy civic leader and vice president of Allied American Insurance on the passing of legendary Quincy banker Don Gohl:

"Your Sunbeams column on Don Gohl was a well deserved tribute. Many times, Don would come into my office with a senior citizen and assist him in paying a bill or handling the paperwork involving a transfer of vehicle. He was truly a great human being and touched the lives of many."

"While he lived in Weymouth, I will always think of him as one of Quincy's 'favorite sons.' A person like Don Gohl only comes along once in a life-time. We'll miss him."

Incidentally, tributes are streaming into the Gohl family for the memory book Remembering Don Gohl they are planning.

If you have a special remembrance of Don and would like to submit it for inclusion in the book, send it to his wife, Helen Gohl at 176 Academy Ave., Weymouth, MA 02188.

SALGIARRATANI, who probably could make the Guinness Book of Records for writing "Letters to the Editor" is branching out.

He now has a weekly show he calls the Boomer Show Monday nights at 5:30 p.m. on a community radio station called Allston-Brighton Free Radio.

It's 1580 on the A.M. dial and Sal says folks in Quincy might be able to pick it up any windy Monday night -- if the wind is blowing toward Quincy.

Sal, who lives on Atlantic St. and is a member of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association board of directors, keeps a close eye on what's going on in Quincy.

And, in his letters, isn't shy about telling you how he sees an issue, regardless of how hot it might be.

Only trouble, Sal, the letters are on the I-o-n-g side. How about trying a few Reader's Digest versions?

Scenes From Yesterday

Swedish Lutheran Church, Quincy, Mass.

THIS IS AN early 1900's postcard view of what is now known as the Faith Lutheran Church on Granite Street near Quincy Center. Sometimes known as "The Church on the Rock" it was organized in 1889 as the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Salems Church. The first pastor and church members quarried granite from the ledge to build the church building on it. The quarry workers were available because there was a general strike at all the Quincy quarries at the time. The church was completed in 1894 and the total cost including the land was $8000. A vestry wing was added in 1914. Granite walls were built and filled with soil to allow grass, shrubs and trees to grow on the ledge. For many years the church parsonage was located on Cottage Street in Quincy Center, which is now part of the Hancock parking lot.

The Shipyard Dream Becomes A Nightmare

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
A tale of Three Wise Men. It is unfortunate that the dream of reviving our shipyard has turned out to be a nightmare. Tragically for those of us who hoped shipbuilding would return to Quincy with the good paying and highly interesting jobs creating sea vessels.

It is also unfortunate that so many of our politicians, here and in Washington, were so gullible as to waste so many millions of tax payers' dollars on a project which by any logical reasoning had such little chance of success.

Three Wise Men, one from the East, stand out in the yard controversy over the past five years. Two were Quincy City Councillors. Attorney Paul Harold who intelligently studied the plans and pointed out from the start that the proposal was doomed to failure. Banker Frank McCauley who analyzed the situation from a businessman's perspective and predicted a flop.

And the Third Wise Man? Sotirios Emmanouil, who journeyed from the East to Yankee land and persuaded so many politicians to loan millions of tax payers' dollars without researching all facets of the idea; and then when it was obvious to anyone with brains the ship was not only sinking, but had sunk, headed back to his home months ago and got a job at a shipyard there.

Now what is needed is a team of impartial auditors to find out what happened to all of the tax payers' dollars spent to date.

For those of us who like really long odds, some practical business genius and favorable circumstances will result in a phoenix-like recovery and the yard will become productive, but do not bet on it.

Wollaston Manor Residents Respond

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
We, the residents of Wollaston Manor would like to respond to a letter written by Patrick Smyth of Wollaston Manor dated March 2, 2000. The caption on his letter was "Concerned about Wollaston Manor."

We the tenants of the building wish to clarify the real feeling that exists. Without the information supplied by Virginia Kelly and the Mass Alliance of HUD Tenants, we would be in the dark. She and Steve Meachum alerted us to the plight that we live under if our building is sold and the units go to market rents.

Each meeting thereafter gave us more insight as to what we as individuals can do. We formed the Wollaston Manor Tenant Association and have made much progress since then. For example, the non-binding referendum supporting Bill S-1946, "The Enabling Act Bill." We are in a constant positive move forward now.

As I stated before, without the knowledge given to us by sincere leadership, we never would have reached this status. Mr. Smyth does not speak for all of the Wollaston Manor residents, he speaks for one person:

himself.

Says Man Who Shot John Wilkes Booth Not Buried Here

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
With respect to a query that was printed in the Feb. 17 issue of The Quincy Sun, I wish to advise readers that I have searched both Hancock Cemetery in Quincy Center and the Fenno Street Burial Grounds for the grave of Sgt. Boston Corbett, who killed John Wilkes Booth on April 26, 1865, but to no avail. My most determined research efforts committed to locating Sgt. Boston Corbett's grave in a Quincy cemetery have yielded nothing.

The latest research findings would indicate that Sgt. Boston Corbett may have been buried with his wife (Maria McNamee) in Milford's St. Mary Cemetery when he died in the mid-1890's. I would logically conclude. A review of the professional literature on Sgt. Corbett's complicated and quizzical mid-1800's existence would indicate that 13 writers of historical articles provided erroneous information on Corbett's marital situation. Most of them either misidentified his place of marriage or his time of marriage, I would allege.

A great deal of interest has been generated in Corbett's quizzical existence by the discovery of a silver trove of 286 artifact medallions on a construction ditch on a site in Boston's South Cove that was formerly occupied by Corbett for the time period 1847-1852. Many of the strange artifact medallions had strange human facial configurations etched on them with some faces that had two or three sets of human eyes to one face. Other artifact medallions had little crucifixes inscribed on them, thus denoting the profound religious proclivities of the person who crafted them, namely Sgt. Boston Corbett, I would allege.

I wish to thank all readers of The Quincy Sun who responded to my appeal for cemetery information on Sgt. Boston Corbett.

The 1918 Red Sox World Series Winner Historical Society Topic

The Quincy Historical Society will present a look at the 1918 Red Sox, the last Red Sox team to win the World Series, Thursday, March 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Mel Springer, co-author of the recently highly regarded book "The Year the Red Sox Won the Series," will speak about that season, recount the exploits of Babe

Ruth and of the team's other stars, and discuss the lively press coverage and public enthusiasm in an era when baseball was the unquestioned national pastime.

The year 1918 was also a controversial one for major league baseball as the season was played out in counterpoint to news from the war in Europe. The story of the season is a mix of baseball lore and wider history, blending relevance and nostalgia. It is the story of Harry Frazee, who sold Babe Ruth to the Yankees, a state of the art Fenway Park, and a Sox franchise which had never lost a series.

Following the presentation, Springer will have copies of his book available for purchase and autographing.

The public is welcome. There is no admission charge.

SENIOR LIVING

by Laura Andrus, Director of Marketing

THE VALUE OF LOVING CHILDREN

A pioneering 13-year study suggests that a close, affectionate relationship with middle-aged children prolongs the survival of their elderly parents. While previous research has shown that the elderly tend to live longer if they receive practical aid (help at home) from their children, the new study shows that loving ties with middle-aged children do more to lengthen life than any functional support. The report went on to say that elderly parents who felt close to their children were least likely to become depressed or disabled. Those who felt an above average closeness with their children were 40 percent less likely to die over the course of the 13-year study than those below average in closeness with their kids.

Staying close to family members makes a real difference in one's quality of life, and that's true for us all. We make every effort to support your efforts to stay in touch with those who love you. At MARINA PLACE, a senior living residence, we urge you to come have a tour of our campus which includes 110 private apartments. We offer both assisted and independent living as well as a special program for those with dementia and early-stage Alzheimer's. For more information, call 617-770-3264. We're just nearby at Four Seaport Drive.

P.S. There is evidence to suggest that feeling loved can stimulate hormones that strengthen the immune system.

Have A (Healthy) Heart

By ALAN BERRICK, MD
Cardiologist, Quincy Medical Center

February was American Heart Month, so this is a good time to be thinking about ways you can reduce your risk for developing heart disease by modifying your risk factors and adopting a healthier lifestyle. By reducing "controllable" risk factors — those that you can change — you may prevent the development of heart disease or even a heart attack.

Healthy Eating

When it comes to the health of your heart, eating well-balanced, healthy meals may be one of the easiest ways to reduce your risk for heart disease. Here are three ways to develop better eating habits:

Reduce saturated fat and cholesterol: Saturated fat and cholesterol are the two biggest threats to your heart. Do your heart a favor and choose low-fat, low-cholesterol foods — like fresh fruits and vegetables, whole grain breads, non fat milk, and fish, chicken, and turkey — whenever possible.

Reduce salt and sugar: For some people, salt can lead to high blood pressure and sugar can increase the risk of heart disease. To find out how much salt or sugar is in the food you eat, read the food labels and check the list of ingredients. The items listed at the beginning are found in higher amounts in the food.

Eat more fiber: A high fiber diet can help reduce high cholesterol. Foods rich in fiber include fruits, vegetables and cereals.

Exercise

Making exercise a regular part of life is a good idea for a lot of reasons, but one of the most important reasons is because it is good for the health of your heart. Regular exercise makes your muscles, including your heart muscle, stronger. It can also help you manage other heart disease risk factors such as high cholesterol, excess weight and stress. Activities often recommended by doctors for improving cardiovascular fitness include walking, jogging, bicycling and swimming. Make sure you check with your doctor before beginning any exercise program.

Lose weight

Being overweight can cause high cholesterol and high blood pressure — two risk factor for heart disease. Being overweight also makes your heart work harder than it should. You can lose weight by eating healthy and making exercise a regular part of your lifestyle.

Manage stress

Stress can increase your blood pressure and your heart rate. This can damage the artery walls and lead to plaque buildup. Stress can also lead you to engage in bad habits like smoking and overeating. The good news is there are ways to relieve some of the stress in your life. They include exercising, avoiding alcohol and caffeine, getting enough sleep, cutting out nicotine and other drugs, learning relaxation techniques, performing deep breathing exercises and initiating positive self talk.

Quincy Smoking

Everybody knows that smoking is bad for your health, but when most people think of its adverse effects on health, they think of lung disease or cancer. But the nicotine and carbon monoxide in cigarettes can also be very damaging to the heart. Smoking increases your risk for heart disease by damaging the walls of your arteries, reducing the amount of oxygen in your blood, and raising your heart rate and blood pressure. No matter how much or how long you've smoked, when you quit smoking your risk of heart disease decreases.

So, now that you know ways you can control your risk for developing heart disease or even heart attacks, you can begin to take responsibility for your own life and health. Remember, it pays to have a healthy heart!

Quit Smoking.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

HEEL PAIN

The most common cause of heel pain is plantar fasciitis. This condition is caused by an inflammation of the plantar fascia, the strip of strong body tissue extending from the bottom of the heel bone to the ball of the foot. Its job is to hold the foot bones and joints in place. When it becomes stressed, the heels hurt during your first few steps in the morning, after any period of rest, or after long intervals of standing. Plantar fasciitis often results in heel spurs, which are sharp spikes of bone that grow and protrude on the bottom of the heel bone. Plantar fasciitis can be caused by obesity or by a change or increase in activities.

It's hard to ignore the pain of obesity.

plantar fasciitis and other foot conditions or injuries, especially when every step places weight and pressure on the affected area. Don't wait for the pain and the problem to disappear. Most likely they won't and you'll be left with a worse condition than when the problem was still new and relatively minor. Call us instead at 617-472-3466. The foot care you need can be found at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy. New patients are always welcome.

P.S. Causes of heel pain other than plantar fasciitis include stress fractures and stress-fracture syndrome, entrapped nerves, bruises, bursitis, arthritis, deterioration of the heel's fat pad, improper shoes and

Sprint Withdraws Plan For 80-Foot Tower In Wollaston

Neighbors no longer need to worry about an 80-foot cell phone tower/flag pole Sprint had planned to erect on a site at 41 Weston Ave., Wollaston.

Following strong opposition from residents at a community meeting last Thursday at the Fenno House, Sprint announced on Friday it would withdraw its permit application and seek a new site.

Nearly 100 residents attended the community meeting hosted by Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin.

The Weston Ave. site is next to a $1.6 million child-care center being built by Wollaston Lutheran Church.

Residents raised concerns at the meeting about how the tower would affect the neighborhood, health risks and safety of the children.

Sprint representatives said that studies who the tower's radio waves would not be harmful.

Rick Pearl, New England public relations manager for Sprint, said Friday the company had not realized the feelings of residents who opposed the tower. He said a Sprint representative would attend a Zoning Board hearing on the matter scheduled for Tuesday and withdraw the permit application.

Besides Councillor Durkin, last Thursday night's meeting was attended by state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Bruce Ayers, and Councillor Patrick McDermott.

The meeting was also attended by: David Murphy, president of the Ward 5 Community Association; Gregory Newton, past president of the Ward 5 Community Association; Gregory Newton, president of the Montclair/Wollaston Association; Michelle Lydon; and Shirley Black, who spearheaded the community effort against the tower.

D'Amico Proposes Playground Be Named For Ernest Aristide

Councillor Michael D'Amico has asked Quincy Public Schools Superintendent Eugene Creedon's advice in naming the new playground at the Lincoln Hancock Community School in honor of Ernest Aristide.

In a letter to Creedon dated March 13, D'Amico cited Aristide's involvement with the now defunct South Quincy Community Relations Committee, which partnered with the city to construct the former playground, and Aristide's merits in general.

D'Amico called Aristide, who passed away last year, "a community activist for decades from South Quincy and a man who loved Quincy very much."

"I would like to nominate that the new playground be named in Ernie's honor," D'Amico continued. "Please advise."

Mayor James Sheets called Aristide "a worthy candidate" and said he would be happy to speak on his behalf at a meeting of the School Committee, the group solely responsible for such decisions.

Sheets added he had been involved with Aristide on many projects dating back to Sheets' days as a Ward 4 councillor.

Jo-Ann Bragg, vice-chairman of The School Committee, also called Aristide "a good choice" but emphasized that it was a School Committee decision with a process which should be observed.

"First, I'd like to hear from the principal, the staff, and the students of Lincoln Hancock before making such a decision," Bragg said. "And I'm sure others would too."

As of press time, Supt. Creedon could not be reached for comment.

CHARLESTON'S CHARM

Charleston, South Carolina is a beautifully preserved, lively city teeming with history and sophistication. Restored buildings serve various uses, while brick and cobblestone streets wind through the charming city. The Historic District offers exquisite homes, churches, museums and harbor views to enjoy. Mansions are built with a West Indies design from the British colonists who settled in the Caribbean before reaching the Carolinas. Multi-level "single houses," built with one side facing the street, emerged from a tax based on the length of a home's frontage. See Fort Sumter, where the Civil War's first shot was fired, then tour Patriots Point, the world's largest naval and maritime museum. Or just relax at one of many family-friendly beach resorts.

If you've decided to go domestic on your next vacation, Charleston is a wonderful choice, with its beauty and charm, history and hospitality. Spring Curbside Leaf Collection To Be In May

The Department of Public Works Spring leaf collection will take place for four weeks, May 1 through May 26.

Residents may place their grass clippings, twigs, and leaves curbside on their regular trash day. Leaves and grass clippings should be placed in brown paper, leaf collection bags, cardboard boxes or open trash barrels. Twigs should be bundled in three-foot lengths and tied with string.

The DPW warns residents about false advertising on the packaging of some plastic leaf collection bags.

Even though it says recyclable on the packaging, absolutely no plastic is allowed in the composting process. All residential curbside-pickup yard waste is brought to the DPW facility for recycling into compost and mulch.

During the four-week collection, there will be a truck for trash collection, another for recycling and a separate truck for the yard waste. Any bulk items will be picked up by a special truck after the trash has been collected. Bulk items are furniture, appliances, such as washers, dryers, stoves, hot water tanks.

No construction material is accepted. Construction material consists of sheet rock, toilets, bathtubs, sinks, lumber, windows, etc. and should be disposed of by the contractor performing the work or by the resident hiring a dumpster or disposal company or contacting a junk yard.

Residents in doubt regarding proper disposal should call the DPW at 770-BINS, the 24 hour hotline. They will receive a call back the same day or the next business day.

Get Faster Tax Refund With Direct Deposit

Taxpayers expecting a tax refund from the Internal Revenue Service can get their money quicker by filling out direct deposit information on their tax return which directly deposits tax refunds into a bank account.

"Direct deposit is available for all taxpayers, regardless of how they file their federal return -- phone, computer or mail," said IRS Director Steve Daise.

Directly depositing a refund into a checking or savings account is more secure because there's no check to get lost. And it takes the U.S. Treasury less time than issuing a paper check. It also saves taxpayers from making a special trip to the bank to deposit a paper refund check.

Taxpayers that prepare a paper return will fill in the direct deposit information in the "Refund" section of the tax form. For those filing electronically, direct deposit information can also be provided to have the refund deposited into a bank account.

Taxpayers may want to ask their financial institution if they accept direct deposit, including joint tax refunds into individual accounts.

The institution can also verify the correct "routing" and "account numbers" that will be needed on the return when using direct deposit.

Although direct deposit can be used in most situations, it can't be used when filing a prior year's return. Also, direct deposit will not occur if the name on the tax return and bank account don't match. Direct deposits of refunds won't go into foreign bank accounts, either. If, for some reason, the refund can't be directly deposited into a taxpayer's account, the U.S. Treasury will send a check instead.

John Keohane Addresses NQHS Bereavement Support Group

North Quincy High School's Bereavement Support Group invited John Keohane, a funeral director at Keohane Funeral Home in Quincy, to speak at its recent meeting.

Led by Co-Facilitators John Perkins and Susan Sorenson, the NQHS Bereavement Support Group helps students deal with the feelings which accompany the death of a family member or friend.

Said Keohane:

"Experiencing the untimely death of a loved one is not as common today as it was earlier in the century. Childhood diseases are rarely fatal and medical science saves or prolongs the lives of many who formerly would have died.

"When someone you love dies, you can experience many different thoughts and feelings, sometimes all at once. One's emotions can frequently be overwhelming. Profound waves of sorrow and sadness, that are seemingly never ending, are common."

Keohane offered these suggestions on how to cope with grief:

- Try to share thoughts and feelings with friends and relatives. Although this is oftentimes painful, experience teaches us that it is a healing act to talk about the deceased and the circumstances surrounding the death.
- Don't be afraid to cry.
- Give people hugs and accept them, too.

• Let others know what they can do to help you.

• Think about the good times. Get out old picture albums to help remember.

• Write a poem or song about the one who died.

• Write a letter to the one who died telling him or her all the things you would have liked to have said.

Keohane also praised the Bereavement Support Group for making a difference in the well-being of NQHS students.

The student group meets weekly under the direction of the Guidance Department.

Keohane Funeral Home speaks to various groups throughout the city as part of its commitment to the community.

Susan's Chicken Cacciatore

On our recent dream vacation to the Sunshine State, and rightly so (with 80 degrees of pure sunshine every day), I naturally collected a couple of wonderful easy recipes.

Each Sunday, the motel has a cook-out with various entrees made by the vacationers. One of them is Susan Brown, who organizes the get-togethers and also cooked the main meal. Since I only had to bring a Caesar's salad, I watched Susan prepare chicken cacciatore for about 40-45 people. She used chicken thighs with the bone in, and did it in the easiest and quickest way.

I am printing the recipe (don't worry, it's not for 40 persons) because it can be made ahead of time, and came out absolutely delicious!

Susan's Chicken Cacciatore
8-10 chicken thighs

2 green peppers
1 red pepper
2 medium onions
2 cloves garlic
3 cups or more of tomato sauce grated cheese
salt and pepper to taste

Here's how Susan did it. Slightly grease a baking pan, and bake the chicken thighs in a 350 degree oven until half cooked.

While that is baking, cut the peppers, onions and garlic in pieces. Prepare or use jarred tomato sauce. Set aside.

When the chicken is cooked, in a deep baking pan, place the chicken. On top of that, place the peppers onions, garlic. Add the tomato sauce and grated cheese.

Bake covered in a 350 degree oven for about 30-35 minutes. Susan served it over boiled white rice. She got raves!

Quincy-Weymouth Deleading Training Program Underway

The first Quincy-Weymouth Consortium sponsored deleading training program is now underway.

Quincy Mayor James Sheets and Weymouth Mayor David Madden, in announcing the program, said its purpose is to increase the number of certified/licensed deleader contractors and workers in the area.

Certified/licensed deleader contractors will be able to participate in more deleading jobs and thus increase the capacity of lead abatement contractors to remove dangerous lead based paint from inhabited by families with children in predominately low and moderate income areas.

The deleader training program was organized directly by the Quincy-Weymouth Lead Paint Safety Initiative (LPSI). LPSI is a joint effort by the Quincy, Weymouth and Neighborhood Housing Services to protect children from the dangers of lead poisoning through education and outreach, free blood screenings and deleading services.

The training will be funded through the $2,000,000 Lead-Based Paint Hazard Control grant awarded to the Quincy-Weymouth Consortium in February, 1999 by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-550). The mission of this program is to "reduce the exposure of young children to lead-based paint hazards in their homes."

The training is being held at City Hall in Quincy, March 14-March 17. Nineteen people are expected to attend the training.

The training will be provided by ATC Associates, a nationally recognized leader in environment, geotechnical materials engineering, consulting and health and safety training services.

LPSI plans to sponsor additional trainings over the next two years in order to create employment opportunities for disadvantaged and underemployed individuals in lead abatement. LPSI plans to work with the South Coastal Career Development Administration and other public agencies as well as, private industry, in meeting this objective.

More information about the Deleading Training or LPSI can be obtained from the program manager, Nicole Rivers, by calling 617-376-1167.

Montclair/Wollaston Assn.
Geared Up To Fight Proposal

Gas Station Opposed At Supermarket

Stop & Shop's plan to build a gasoline station at its Newport Ave. Super Store has run into strong opposition.

Twenty-five members of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association at a recent meeting unanimously voted to oppose the proposal.

They cited lack of adequate parking, increased traffic congestion, and environmental issue as valid grounds for opposing the plan.

Stop & Shop disclosed the plan at a neighborhood association meeting in February.

It calls for a three-pump station at a corner of the store's parking lot which would eliminate approximately 30 of the store's 432 parking spaces.

Greg Newton, president of the association, estimates there are about 10 gas stations in the area now.

Newton said he did not think the proposed gas station would be "a good fit" in the area.

Stop & Shop has not yet filed the plans with the city. Before the gas station could be built it would need approval by the License Board, Planning Board, City Council, Zoning Board of Appeals and the Conservation Commission.

Newton said the association is letting them know their opposition early.

"The most important thing, to me, is traffic congestion," said Andrea Cafferty, the association's vice president, who said a quarter-mile trip in the area can take 20 minutes as it stands now.

Cafferty also said she was frustrated that Stop & Shop could not provide residents with current traffic studies at recent meetings.

Memorial Plaques At Quincy Medical Center

The Quincy Medical Center offers a unique way to remember a loved one or honor a friend by putting their name on the Center's Auxiliary plaque in the Hunting Hall of Founders.

Nameplates cost $85 each and become a permanent part of the Auxiliary plaque.

The Hunting Hall of Founders recognizes the contributions of the many individuals, businesses and organizations who have provided financial support to Quincy Medical Center over the years. It is named for Nathaniel S. Hunting, M.D., a member of the medical staff of Quincy Medical Center from its inception in 1890, who became the first chief of staff when the City of Quincy assumed responsibility for the hospital in 1919.

Proceeds from nameplate contributions help support the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary, which raises funds for equipment and services benefiting patient care at Quincy Medical Center.

To place an order for a nameplate in memory of or to honor a family member or friend, call Natalie Fossati in the Gift Shop at (617) 376-5509.

Thomas Clasby, Jr., newly appointed director of the Quincy Council On Aging, understands that expectations are high.

Thanks to his predecessors and the mayor, he said, Quincy's senior services are already state-wide models in many areas, which is why he can be forgiven for turning his attention to what Quincy seniors don't have yet: the proposed senior living campus and community center known as Squantum Gardens.

"Squantum Gardens is really an historic project," said Clasby. "It's the first-ever military site in the nation converted directly to senior housing. It will have a 25,000 square foot senior center for all seniors of the city. It will be cable-ready with a computer lab, a small branch of the library, a medical clinic, a billiard room, home theater and auditorium facilities, a woodworking shop, and a cafeteria."

"Quincy leads the ways in many other senior service areas, such as transportation, and we have smaller community centers, but the availability of a central location this size is lacking. But we're catching up quick."

The project awaits General Services Administration (GSA) approval so that the US Navy can convey the land to the city for a nominal fee, but Clasby said he hopes construction can begin as early as this summer.

Clasby credits Mayor Sheets for his vision on Squantum Gardens and his active role on senior issues. "The mayor has gone beyond the usual rhetoric and has really taken a personal interest in seniors," Clasby said. "He knows what he wants to do, charts a plan, and then backs it up with action."

Another goal for the new director is the continued increase of transportation services for seniors. "All surveys given to seniors indicate that transportation is one of their major concerns," Clasby said. "Whether it's for medical reasons or just shopping, or visiting a friend, or going to the barber's. It's a quality-of-life issue."

Clasby began his work at the COA in 1997 as the manager of the Elder Services Trans Van Program, which has grown to include a fleet of 12 vehicles and a staff of twelve. Seniors can purchase a three-month pass for $20 dollars and, with two day's notice, get a ride anywhere in the city. There are also vans to bring seniors to local hospitals and clinics as well as daily morning and afternoon shuttles to major Boston hospitals. The program, Clasby said, is modeled after a successful program in Cranston, RI, a city with similar demographics to Quincy's.

Clasby also said the COA is also hard at work putting together the 5th annual Senior Conference scheduled for Sept. 16 at the Broad Meadows School in conjunction with the Quincy Commission on the Family and Linda Stice, its executive director. Stice, Clasby said, was instrumental in obtaining Margery Hutter Silver as the conference's keynote speaker. Silver is a Harvard research scientist who launched the New England Centenarian Study along with fellow researcher Thomas Perlis.

Clasby, who began Jan. 3, replaces outgoing director Brian Buckley after Buckley resigned to take over as athletic director of North Quincy High School. Buckley, Clasby says, will be a tough act to follow.

"Brian was one of the most respected COA directors in the state and, when I found out I was replacing him, I had a glimpse of what Harry Truman must have felt like, following a legend," said Clasby. "It's a good thing that I worked with him and that he still advises me. I know I can count on his support and his counsel."

Clasby is a lifelong Squantum resident who attended Squantum Elementary, Atlantic Junior, and North Quincy High School. He is a graduate of Quincy College and the Franciscan University of Ohio with a degree in history. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, a former parish council member of the Star of the Sea Church, and a musician with a love of Irish folk music.

Conway Real Estate License Renewal Program March 28-29

The "Conway Country" School of Real Estate will offer a two-day continuing education program for real estate licensees Tuesday, March 28 and Wednesday, March 29 at the Ramada Inn in Rockland.

The two-day event is open to all of the state's 125,000 licensed real estate agents -- whether active or inactive -- and will satisfy the state's requirement of 12 hours of continuing education credit for license renewal.

"We are very pleased to be offering these courses for our own agents and for our colleagues," Chairman Jack Conway said. "A solid education is a very important part of providing good service to our customers and we are hopeful that many agents will take advantage of this unique opportunity."

The classes, which run from 9 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Tuesday and 9:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Wednesday, will cover fair-housing policies, agency representation, and environmental law, among other subjects. Participants may choose any or all of the six courses being offered to fulfill their license-renewal requirements, according to Education Director Norman LaRocque, and should make reservations in advance.

For more information and a registration form, call the school at (781) 826-0088. The cost is $10 per credit hour.

The "Conway Country" School of Real Estate is a division of Norwell-based Jack Conway and Company, which is the largest independently owned real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Laughter The Best Medicine?

(NAPS)—Did you hear the one about the cable channel and the medical center?

There's no punchline, only the promise of greater happiness for seriously ill children and adults. As part of Comedy Central's continuing pro-social programs, the network has provided a $75,000 research grant to the UCLA Jonsson Cancer Center to study how to most effectively use humor to reduce pain and prevent disease.

The five-year study, called "Rx Laughter," will include participants of all ages, cultural background and socioeconomic groups. Using carefully selected cartoons, Comedy Central programming and classic films—featuring Abbott and Costello, the Marx Brothers, Charlie Chaplin, etc.—the study will be comprised of three elements: research, health education and therapeutic entertainment.

The goal is to further the knowledge about the relationship between humor and health, and in using this knowledge in the treatment of people with both serious and minor illnesses.

The research element will attempt to verify that laughter can actually aid in the healing process and in pain management. Specifically, there has been some suggestion that laughter can help the immune system fight disease.

The health education element will concentrate on educating and instructing patients about their illness and treatment in an energetic, interesting and, most importantly, comedic fashion. The objective is to make the patient a more active participant in his/her treatment by making it more interesting.

The third element, therapeutic entertainment, aims to alleviate the stress of illness and to reduce pain for patients and their families through the use of humor.

In 1998, Comedy Central partnered with affiliates to start the "Comedy Rx" program, in order to heighten awareness of the positive effects of laughter, and make positive contributions to local communities. Affiliates can choose a "Heavy Dose" by creating a comedy event with the proceeds benefitting a hospital, hospice or similar health-care facility; a "Medium Dose" by sending a comedian to perform at a hospital or similar care-giving facility, or by collecting books and video tapes for a "laughter library"; or a "Light Dose" by running "Comedy Rx" public service announcements or selling a sponsorship.

Quarry Hills Golf Course Project On Par

Public Could Tee Off Before Scheduled 2002 Opening, Developers Say

By CHRIS POISSON

If the Quarry Hills Golf Course project stays on par, golfers will be hitting the greens to tee off for its scheduled 2002 opening.

But project developers are optimistic of stroking a birdie and opening 18 holes to the public before the final date.

"We may open up 18 holes before it's completely done," said former mayor Walter Hannon, whose son Walter Hannon Jr., III is the project manager. "But we don't know what we're going to do yet."

The 450-acre, 27-hole golf course stretches out over Quincy and Milton. The two cities have leased the land from MDC for 50 years. Eighteen holes will be located on the Quincy side and nine in Milton.

Under the lease, it will be a daily fee golf course, completely open to the public.

Architect John Sanford of Sanford Associates in Jupiter, Fla. designed the course. All of the holes, ponds, sand traps and fairways have been laid out and marked with stakes.

Plans for the $65 million project were first proposed to the city on Oct. 14, 1991. Construction began two years ago after project developers received the 45 required permits.

The four-team operation is run by Bill and Peter O'Connell, who built Marina Bay, Charles Gielich, president of Quarry Hills, and Hannon III.

"I think this is the biggest landfill operation in the United States," Hannon said. "There are many landfills going on but in terms of turning it into a recreation facility, this is the biggest."

"It's a great deal for the city," said Hannon III.

"We're going to give the city 10% of the gross of the green fees, 10% of the gross of the driving range and 10% of the net of the function facility. It will all go to a recreation fund and the entire recreation

A LITTLE LEAGUE field is outlined and almost ready to be seeded. In addition to the 27-hole golf course, Quarry Hills will also feature four little league fields and two soccer fields.

Applications For Field-Use Permits

The Quincy Park Department will accept applications for field-use permits for the Spring/Summer of 2000 until Friday, March 24.

Anyone interested in obtaining a permit for baseball, softball, soccer or other activities must submit an application to the Quincy Park Department. Applications can be obtained at the Park Department at One Merrymount Parkway or by calling (617) 376-1252.

Permits will only be issued to Quincy residents, organizations, and leagues. Priority is given to those leagues that have longevity on a certain field or athletic area. All permit applicants must agree to adhere to the Rules and Regulations established by the Quincy Park and Recreation Board.

"The Quincy Park Department issues more than 2,000 permits for field-use each year," said Thomas P. Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Department. "This number continues to grow as athletic activities become more diversified and the athletic interest of young women increase."

"I encourage people to submit their application early so we may sort through all available locations in an effort to accommodate as many requests as the maintenance of our fields will allow."

Once the permits are received, the Quincy Park and Recreation Board will review the requests and issue permits after its meeting on April 3. No permits will be issued for practices and Quincy Public School requests take precedence over all other requests.

For more information, call the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1252.

department will benefit from this."

In addition to the 27 holes, the recreation facility will have a 45,000-square foot, state-of-the-art club house, resting 330-feet above sea level. It will start being built next month and should open by 2001.

On 8 1/2 acres of land across from the club house, there will be a 250-room hotel and conference center overlooking the par-4 ninth hole, which Hannon feels will be intriguing.

"It should be a very interesting hole with the two quarries you have to hit the ball over," Hannon said. But if you play it right and hit it in between, you should be in pretty good shape."

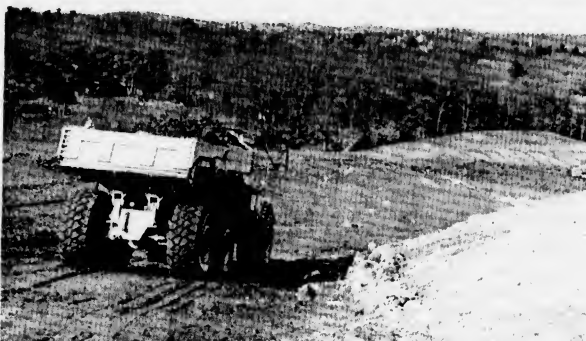

Quarry Hills will not only provide golf, it will also feature two soccer fields and four little league fields. And with Tim Naehring's proposed "Little Fenway" near by, the kids should get a sense of a baseball atmosphere.

"We encourage 'Little Fenway,'" Hannon said. "We think it's a wonderful thing but it's not our project. We don't have anything to do with it."

As of now, 8 million tons of fill has been brought in since 1998. McCourt Construction of South Boston, the general contractor, loads the clay and till from the Big Dig in Boston. About 1,000 trucks per day dump the soil off at the site, where it is tested before it is dumped at its final destination.

Another 3.1 million tons will be added before the dumping operation is completed in the fall. By next June, shapers will be brought in to start molding the course.

A TRUCK DELIVERS the tested soil to its final destination where it will be spread out across the site.

Three Residents Running Marathon For Cancer Research

Three Quincy residents are members of the 11th annual Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team that will be running in the 104th Boston Marathon on April 17.

Charlotte Cuneo, Mary-Ann Ellis and James Lerner, along with runners from 20 states, will run the 26.2 miles from Hopkinton to Boston to raise $2 million for cancer research.

By raising a minimum of $1,500 each to participate, they will fund the Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Cancer Research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, a world-renowned leader in cancer research and treatment.

Since the DFMC's inception in 1989, $8.1 million has been raised for the Barr Program, which was founded in 1987 by Jacksonville Jaguar owners Wayne and Delores Weaver to honor Delores Weaver's mother, who lost her battle with cancer 30 years earlier.

The DFMC, the largest charity team taking part in the marathon, began when Peter Farber Santis and William Farber Santis, MD, grandsons of Institute founder Dr. Sidney Farber, were inspired by a medical student who ran the Boston Marathon in honor of a friend who was battling a brain tumor.

The heart and soul of the DFMC is its Patient Partner Program which was created by Dana-Farber pediatric oncologist Lindsay Frazier, MD, eight years ago, to help runners put a face to the cause.

Each year, about 50 runners are paired with patients from the Jimmy Fund Clinic.

"The runners face the challenge of running the marathon, but their challenge is minor compared to what the kids face every day," says Clare Twist, MD, a Dana-Farber pediatric oncologist, DFMC runner and a partner of a clinic patient. "Both the children and the runners can see what the other goes through and gain strength from the others' experience."

To contribute, send checks made out to DFMC to the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge, 44 Binney St., LG 100, Boston, MA 02115.

For more information, call (781) 259-8881.

Best Season For Quincy Freshmen Basketball

The Quincy High School freshman boys' basketball team finished the 1999-2000 campaign with its best record in school history at 18-4.

The Presidents swept through the Old Colony League with relative ease as it compiled an impressive 11-3 mark.

The team consists of 15 players. Leading the way offensively were Kevin O'Connell, Matt Ramponi, Craig Keenan, Mike Quigley, Jeff Tam, Shaun Gibbons and Truc Troung. On the defensive, Shaun Munchbach, Malcolm Lynn, Frank Kelly, Anthony Boyle, Steve Ekunseitan, Mike Quilty and Mark Donderostood out. Marc Darois was injured most of the season.

With the varsity squad suffering another dismal season with a 6-14 record, Quincy fans can only hope this group can turn things around in the near future.

"By far this was the best team I have ever coached," said coach Michael Draiccho. "The future looks bright for Quincy High basketball."

Here's a quick recap of the season:

Barnstable: Ramponi scores 20 points and O'Connell 18 in a 57-42 win. Lynn tallies 19 and Munchbach 14 in a 70-48 win in game 2.

Mighty Mite A's Win Greater Boston Crown

The Quincy and Dorchester Mite A travel teams met again Saturday with another championship on the line.

In January, Quincy whipped Dorchester for the Cranberry Holiday crown and this time around it pulled out a 4-2 victory for the biggest prize of them all — the Greater Boston Youth Hockey League championship.

Quincy will next participate in a tournament at Lake Placid, New York in April.

Earlier in the day at Walter Brown Arena, No. 2 Quincy knocked off Belmont and top-seed Dorchester got by Wellesley to advance to the

With the score knotted at 2-all, Johnny Magliozzi tallied the game-winner when he poked in a rebound with 1:40 left in the game, sending the Quincy fans into an uproar at the St. Sabastian's school rink in Needham.

Kyle Craig netted his second goal of the game with 55 seconds left to end any hopes of Dorchester tying the game.

Craig and Doug Haskins found the cage in the first period to give Quincy a 2-1 lead. After a scoreless second frame, Dorchester evened the score at 11:16 of the third.

Both teams continued their strong play, particularly the netminders who came up with dazzling saves to preserve the tie. Quincy goalie Stephen Barresi stoned several Dorchester shots from point-blank range before Magliozzi struck the game-winner.

Mite B's Reach Finals

The Quincy Mite B travel team had to beat undefeated Needham two times in a row to win the Greater Boston Youth Hockey League championship.

Not an easy task.

Quincy (10-4-2) was able to upset Needham, 7-4, to reach the final, but it finished runner-ups with a 2-1 loss in Sunday's rematch at Quincy Youth Arena.

Both teams skated to a scoreless first period, as Quincy goalie Jeff Giordani made some spectacular saves.

In the second, Needham went up 2-0. Seamus McKenna cut the lead to 2-1 with an assist from Kevin Magoon, but Quincy was unable to cash in on its scoring chances the rest of the game.

In the semifinal game, Wayne Milford and Derek Murphy each scored hat tricks. Milford put Quincy on the board first with an assist from Kevin Shea in the first period.

In the second frame, Murphy scored two of his three goals as Milford assisted on one of them. In the third, Quincy took control of the game as Murphy blasted his third with an assist from Magoon. McKenna and Milford also found the net.

John Alexander Selected To Baseball Amateur Team

John Alexander of Quincy has been named as an early selection to the 2000 SSBC Seadogs 10-and-Under Division Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) travel team.

As a member of the Seadogs, Alexander will compete against other AAU organizations in Massachusetts as well as in various tournaments throughout the summer.

"John is an extremely talented ballplayer who I look forward to coaching at the AAU level," said manager Ray Bresnahan.

Alexander is a fifth-grader at Atherton Hough and plays for the Quincy Lions Club in Little League. The Seadogs program is not intended to replace but rather supplement local league play.

Jr. Rangers Wrap Up First Season With Win

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy Junior Rangers finished the season with a win, and two points short of the playoffs.

Considering it's their inaugural year in the Interstate Junior Hockey League, it's quite an accomplishment.

This season, wins were like finding gas for under a $1.50 per gallon — hard to come by. But the Rangers (14-35-3) came together down the stretch by taking six of their final seven games, including victories over the Connecticut Whalers and West River Wolves, both in the postseason.

Saturday night, Quincy took care of league laughingstock Staten Island, 3-1, in the season finale at Quincy Youth Arena. Sunday night's rematch was canceled and will not be made up. Quincy finished with a 3-1 record against Staten Island.

Forward Mike Mulligan netted a pair of goals and forward Chris Holt blasted No. 18 to provide the offense. Goalie Kyle Bunstein, who was picked up from the Bridgewater Bandits midseason, earned the win and finished with the highest save percentage in the league (.917).

"We really finished strong, which at the end of the season is when you want to be playing your best hockey," said coach Tom MacDonald. "Unfortunately, we missed the playoffs by two points.

"As far as first-year junior teams go, you have your ups and downs. But we were able to finish up strong and that leaves a good taste in everybody's mouth for next year."

With four of the seven teams advancing to the playoffs, the Rangers finished in fifth place, two points behind the Boston Junior Blackhawks.

MacDonald expects about 12-14 kids to return next season, which should help the Rangers make a quantum leap in their sophomore year.

"I can't say enough about how excited I was about the participation and dedication we had from the 20 kids throughout the year," MacDonald said. "It's definitely a positive thing for a first-year junior team. The feedback that you get when that many people want to come back; that just shows we'll be a more mature team next year."

Although Quincy didn't have a successful year record-wise, the program did give the players a chance to develop. But the program is not just about hockey, it's also designed to educate the players away from the rink.

In addition to practice, the players went through a 10-week SAT course to help them get into a college, and to prepare them for life in general.

Seven kids from this year's squad will more than likely move up to the college ranks: Mulligan (Bentley), Mike Melanson (Babson), Ryan Sweeney (Salva Regina, Bentley), Bunstein (UConn, Babson), Mark DiGiovanni (Babson), Alex Garibedian (Bentley) and Ryan Feeney (Salva Regina).

"We got a lot of exposure this year," MacDonald said.

"We opened up a lot of eyes. It gives the local area a junior team. It gives the kids in this area an option. If they don't know what they want to do for a year, then come on aboard."

A Thought For The Week

"What is time? The shadow on the dial, the striking of the clock, the running of the sand-day and night, summer and winter, months, years, centuries-these are but arbitrary and outward signs, the measure of time itself. Time is life of the soul."

- Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

To each of us, it seems that we never have enough time in our days, and yet we all allotted the same number of hours. How we use up our hours is our own choice. We came across some thoughts on time that we think are good and we want to share them with you:

Time is money... we have no time to waste it.
Time is power... we have no right to dissipate it.
Time is influence... we have no right to throw it away.
Time is life... we must value it greatly.
Time is God's... He gives it to us for a purpose.
Time is a sacred trust... we must answer for every moment.
Time is wisdom... we have no right to be ignorant.
Time is preparation for eternity... we must redeem it.*

Raymond Provides $1,000 Check For DARE

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond recently presented a $1,000 check to the city's DARE program to assist in its effort to keep Quincy kids drug free.

The funds, Raymond said, were the result of mitigation from several projects in the Ward 2 area.

"The DARE Program has made tremendous progress within the Quincy Public Schools," Raymond said. "I want to encourage the DARE officers in my community and in other communities. It's just a way to recognize their fine work and to educate the kids of Quincy on the dangers of drugs."

DARE Officers Robert Edgar and John Grazioso were on hand to accept the contribution.

"We appreciate the help from Councillor Raymond," said Grazioso, who added the money might be used for DARE's summer program which includes an outing to a Red Sox game.

The DARE program provides drug awareness for all classes in the Quincy Public Schools.

Complete Count Committee" in the City Council chamber Monday conducted by Shea.

The committee comprises a cross-section of civic, business, educational, religious leaders and city officials working toward a complete count this year of 2000.

Sheets noted that in addition to federal monies, the population determines the number of Congressmen and state senators and representatives. And has an effect on ward and precinct lines in the city.

"I am confident there will be an accurate count," said Delahunt.

He noted that not only are programs such as Title 1 and health care involved but those in the private sector make decisions on where to locate and invest based on population.

Capernaros said residents should not be concerned over personal information requested in the census form.

"Personal information will remain confidential for 72 years under the law. It will not be shared with the IRS or anyone else."

He said that he and other census officials had to take an oath vowing confidentiality.

"Quincy has a significant minority population," Capernaros noted. "It is important that they be included in this census."

He said the census forms are available in five other languages including Chinese and Vietnamese to help minorities respond to the census.

It is believed that many of the undercounted in the past are in the minority population.

Shea has said census workers traditionally have trouble finding 10 percent of the population because they do not respond.

Shea, who conducts an annual city census (street listing), estimates Quincy's current population as between 85,000 and 90,000.

The U.S., however, has the figure at 83,000 — as of the last federal census in 1990.

Most households are receiving a short census form with eight questions. One in six, selected randomly, are receiving the long form with 53 questions.

Residents are asked to fill out the questionnaires and return them in the enclosed pre-addressed envelopes by April 1.

Those who do not return the questionnaires will be visited by a census taker who will go to their homes to remind them to fill out the form or to offer to assist them in filling it out.

Capernaros said that based on past experience, many census takers will have to be hired to make house calls to those not responding to the census.

The part-time, four-to-six week jobs will start in late April and pay $13.50 an hour. Those interested are asked to call the regional office at 781-961-1753.

All applicants must take a half-hour, multiple-choice test which requires no advance preparation.

The Quincy Complete Count Committee

The "Quincy Complete Count Committee" has been established to urge residents to respond to the U.S. Census 2000 so that the city will not lose needed federal funds.

Co-chairman of the committee are Congressman William Delahunt, Mayor James Sheets and City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Members of the committee are:

Jack Mather, executive director Quincy Housing Authority; School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Rev. Michael Kearney, St. Boniface Church; Rev. Michael Law, Wollaston Lutheran Church; Hi Thai, designee for Police Chief Thomas Frane; Ann McLaughlin, director Thomas Crane Public Library; Liz Harrington, City Planning Department, Arthur Keough, Quincy College.

A BIG CHECK — Mayor James Sheets and Gov. Paul Cellucci hold a symbolic $5.4 million state check for the construction of Phase 1 of the long-delayed Quincy concourse. With them at last week's groundbreaking are, from the left, Joseph Mannarino, executive director Quincy 2000; state Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan, Rep. Joseph Sullivan of Braintree and Massachusetts Highway Dept. Commissioner Matthew Amorello.

Cellucci Delivers $5.4 Million Check At Groundbreaking Concourse Hailed As Downtown Catalyst Construction of the long-delayed Quincy Center Concourse is finally underway and hailed as an economic catalyst for the downtown area.

Groundbreaking ceremonies at which Governor Paul Cellucci delivered a symbolic $5.4 million check representing the state funding for Phase 1 were held last Thursday.

Phase 1 will create direct access to Quincy Center from Routes 3, 93, and 128 by constructing a bridge across the MBTA tracks and a new roadway from Burgin Parkway to Parkingway.

The project will also include two sets of interconnected traffic signals and roadway construction work along portions of Burgin Parkway, the Granite Street Connector, and Parkingway, but will not connect directly to Hancock St. until the Phase II portion of the project.

Phase I is being built by SPS New England, Inc., of Salisbury and is scheduled for completion in late 2001.

"When the final blackout is laid, the concourse will make for swift and easier trips into the downtown area," said Cellucci, who called the concourse part of an "ongoing effort to rebuild infrastructure throughout the state."

Council Backs Kolson On Back Pay

The City Council voted 9-0 Monday night on a Home Rule Petition to give former Council President Peter Kolson roughly $35,000 in back pay from his first three years as a city councillor.

Kolson, who was elected Ward 1 Councillor in 1989 and served from 1990 to 2000, also worked for the Quincy Housing Authority. A state law, amended in 1993, prohibited employees of a housing authority from receiving both a councillor's salary and a housing authority salary.

Although the actual money amount has yet to be determined, the annual councillor's salary for those years was approximately $10,000 per year.

Kolson thanked the council for its decision and said the petition addresses "a wrong piece of legislation which violates the 4th Amendment rights of people serving in government."

Mayor James Sheets, who said the pre-1993 law "didn't make any sense," said he would support the Home Rule Petition and pass it along to Quincy's legislative delegation for state approval.

Auditor Michael McFarland said Kolson's unused salary from the years in question was put back into the general fund.

After Council Discussion New QHS Land Purchase Is Still An Issue

By CRAIG SALTERS

After nearly two hours of City Council discussion on the new Quincy High School Monday night, the question of the city's land purchase for the school remains an issue.

Despite argument and explanation on both sides, the issue was kept in the Oversight Committee for further debate after Joseph Newton, chairman of the committee, refused to remove it from said committee.

The committee meeting, said Newton, was the best place to discuss the matter fully.

Councillor Patrick McDermott made the request for removal after councillors discussed the land purchase as part of an overall update on the new high school.

The land purchase was to be discussed at a meeting of the Oversight Committee March 27 but that meeting was cancelled because Donald J. MacKinnon of Atlantic Development, who sold the land to the city, was unable to attend.

The committee meeting will be scheduled at a later date.

Councillors raised specific questions but expressed general approval of the overall project during a presentation made by DPW Commissioner David Colton and Hal Goyette, the project's architect.

But that consensus ended when MacKinnon was allowed to address the council to explain his company's actions concerning the land deal. Colton and City Solicitor Stephen McGrath also reported to the council on the purchase.

A Feb. 23 resolve by Councillor Frank McCauley had asked the Oversight Committee to investigate "the process and procedures" involved in the deal, specifically the fact that MacKinnon purchased 21 acres of land off Quincy Avenue in December of 1997 for $1 million and sold 14 1/2 acres of that same property to the city for $3.5 million in 1998.

The average assessment on the 21 acres for Fiscal Years 1995, 1996, and 1997 was $1,018,400.

MacKinnon responded to the concerns by saying that Atlantic Development had been interested in the area since 1986 and had in fact developed many other sites the area. Atlantic Development, MacKinnon said, entered into a purchase and sales agreement with C.J. Partnership in August of 1997 after "several years of negotiations" and several

Meets With QCBPA On Tax Stand, Other Issues

Raymondi In The 'Lions Den'

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

For City Councillor Daniel Raymondi, it was something like walking into the lion's den.

And, he seemed to survive.

It was his first face-to-face meeting with a business group since he amended Mayor James Sheets' proposed 169 percent classification to a maximum 175 percent which was approved by the city council and still irks the business community.

QCBPA members had questions on that and other issues including the Fore River Shipyard, Twin Rivers and Quincy's future.

DANIEL RAYMONDI

Citing his accomplishments as a Ward 2 Councillor as "not always easy" Raymondi noted the quality of the school system and reconstruction of school system as bringing in quality work force and responsible adults as the "hallmark of the City of Quincy."

He called attention to the differences and improvements along Quincy Ave. today: Roche Bros., Wal-Mart, Walgreen's and the South Shore Savings Bank which is now on the site of the former Eddie's Diner.

All of this he said was to

months before the city expressed interest.

MacKinnon said the plan for the area was to build a four-building retirement community and additional retail development, plans which were scaled back when the city bought the property. MacKinnon called the site "a piece of a puzzle" and added, "We'd happily take it back."

As for the dramatic increase in price between his buying the property and his selling it to the city, MacKinnon answered that his $1 million purchase price was "inaccurate" given additional payments subject to a confidential agreement between Atlantic and C.J. Partnership.

MacKinnon also said he added value to the site by extending Falls Blvd. to the previously landlocked property and installing adequate utilities for major development.

Commissioner Colton echoed MacKinnon's claims

FRANK MCCAULEY

of added value and was equally adamant that the entire procedure was "appropriate and legal."

Colton pointed out that the city's purchase price was actually several hundred thousand less than the $3,840,000 appraisal done for the city by Eileen Partridge. In addition, Colton said, the city had recently hired appraisers Meredith & Grew, who appraised the site's current value at $4.9 million. "To suggest that the city did not make a good real estate deal is not in keeping with the facts," Colton said.

Solicitor McGrath also addressed legal concerns on the purchase and said the city was smart to avoid a risky eminent domain battle for the site.

Many councillors, including Councillor Daniel Raymond, felt the matter should be resolved at that night's meeting. "We've exhausted this topic," Raymond said.

McCauley, however, was not convinced. He thanked Newton for keeping the matter open and asked that transcripts of the debate be made for each councillor. During the debate McCauley asked several pointed questions, including who actually chose the property off Quincy Avenue.

McCauley was also very much concerned with the implications of the "confidential agreement," the fact that the new appraisal was only two pages long, and that the city had purchased property for more than 25 percent of its assessed value, contrary to chapter 43, section 30 of state law.

Mayor James Sheets spoke to The Sun Tuesday and said the first time he became aware of the site was when it was recommended by the city's School Building Needs Task Force.

"It was a good buy for the city," Sheets said. "It's already increased to almost $5 million in value."

Good News For South Quincy Traffic Experiment

Monday's night's meeting of the City Council's Public Works Committee addressed the 90-day traffic experiment in South Quincy.

The verdict: so far, so good.

The plan, a compromise plan which has been in effect for over a month now, creates a dead end at Columbia St. and a modified one-way for Penn St., with corresponding measures for Rodman, Liberty, and Trafford Sts. The council passed the plan against some business opposition last December.

"The facts are that the people who live on the street seem to enjoy the peace and quiet," reported Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, who said his office has received no calls concerning Penn St. at all.

Gillon said he had yet to process the traffic counts for the smaller streets to see if traffic was being pushed onto those streets.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, chairman of the committee and the main proponent of the traffic plan, said that even those residents who initially opposed the plan are now in favor of it, saying that he expected 100 percent of those who lived on the affected streets to sign a petition in favor of the changes.

Gillon can be reached at 376-1948.

Temporary Flood Control Measures For West Quincy

An "interim pumping plan" will be installed to alleviate flooding in West Quincy near Sheldon, Ballou, and Connell Sts.

George Clark, director of Sewer, Water, and Drain for the city, detailed the temporary measures at a meeting of the Public Works Committee before Monday night's council meeting.

One part of the plan calls for a shed to be built at the end of Sheldon St. to house four pumps. This, Clark said, will eliminate transportation time during a storm and free up other vehicles to handle other areas like Ballou St. or Alrick Rd. Councillor Michael D'Amico, chairman of the committee, said the proactive plan was a way to alleviate flooding while residents waited for the $20 million flooding project for the Furnace Brook to be completed.

"This is one plan we'd like to see implemented and then immediately removed," D'Amico said.

The plan, Clark said, will be ready in about two weeks.

Council Vote Gives Park Dept. Care Of School Grounds

The City Council voted Monday night to adopt a plan allowing the Parks Department to take responsibility for the city's 20 school grounds.

Councillor Patrick McDermott, chairman of the council's Parks and Recreation Committee, called the upkeep of school grounds "a neighborhood issue" and applauded the decision.

It was McDermott who initially approached Thomas Koch, executive director of the Parks Department, to create a plan for the Parks Department to maintain school grounds instead of the School Department.

Koch presented his plan to the committee Feb. 13.

Councillor Timothy Cahill praised Koch for his work with the city's parks and said the plan would revitalize the city's schools and neighborhoods.

Councillor Frank McCauley, who along with Council President Paul Harold voted against the proposal, argued that the move would add $265,000 annually to the budget as well as a one-time capital outlay of $120,000. Calling it a question of "priorities," he added that the School Department did a "reasonably good job" now.

April 7 Deadline For Evergreen Program Drawing

Leo Kelly, chairman of the Evergreen Program, reminds residents April 7 is the deadline to submit entries for the program's upcoming drawing.

The actual drawing, which celebrates the Evergreen Program's 10th year of operation, will be held Saturday, April 15, at 2 p.m. at the New City Hall Atrium. Cash prizes of $100, $200, and $300 will be awarded as well as many surprise gifts.

To be eligible, residents must send a snapshot of themselves with their trees and include name, address, and phone number on the back of the photo. 1999 program participants who have yet to receive trees can send the same information on a postcard.

Send pictures or postcards by April 7 to: Quincy Evergreen Program, c/o Mayor James Sheets, City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy 02169.

The Evergreen Program allows Quincy residents to recycle their old Christmas trees while receiving brand new trees to plant around the city.

Senate Unanimously Passes Children's Protection Act

The Massachusetts Senate has unanimously passed the Children's and Families' Protection Act, reports Senator Michael Morrissey.

The legislation, sponsored by Senator Susan Fargo, prohibits the application of any pesticide considered potentially hazardous within two days of school or day care working hours. It also requires schools or day care centers to notify parents as to which pesticides will be applied and improves posting requirements for all outside areas.

"Exposure to pesticides, especially among children, can lead to a wealth of potentially serious medical conditions," said Morrissey. "This legislation not only prevents exposure, but also keeps families more informed about what chemicals are used at the schools and day care centers their children attend."

The legislation is expected to pass both branches of the legislature, Morrissey said, due in large part to a ballot initiative filed by the Massachusetts Public Research Group (MassPIRG) last September. MassPIRG gathered more than 107,000 signatures of registered voters and presented their petition to Secretary of the Commonwealth William Galvin. However, if the Legislature passes the bill through both branches and the Governor signs the bill, the petition would be withdrawn from the November ballot.

"This is a strong bill that will not only help to keep children safe from pesticide poisons, it will also give citizens across Massachusetts more information about the use of these toxic chemicals in their neighborhoods," said Fargo.

Good Fun And A Good Cause

The barbs, jokes and needles came fast at the Quincy Partnership's annual St. Patrick's Day Luncheon (roast) at the Quincy Elks.

No one was too surprised when the still closed Fore River shipyard and Greek developer Sotirios Emmanouil's failure to get it reopened got top billing in the jab department.

The best zingers came from Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti who also worked the Concourse into his act. Bellotti quoted from a letter (fictitious) he said Emmanouil had written to his brother in Greece which he had intercepted. In it, he has Emmanouil, who obtained millions of dollars in loans and guarantees for his failed shipyard project, saying he doesn't know how to build ships and didn't have any contracts.

And quotes him:

"America, what a country! ... I told the mayor I liked his hair. He gave me $6 million. ... I told Ted Kennedy he was thin. He gave me $60 million. What a country!"

Bellotti also had Emmanouil suspecting his nemesis, City Council President Paul Harold, his and the shipyard project's severest critic: "I think he's CIA."

Then, Emmanouil supposedly told his brother: "Now they have broken ground for the Concourse. ... Come over and tell them you know how to build bridges."

School Committeeman Michael McFarland picking up on the allegedly non-existent tanker contracts, said: "The only contract I know of is the one Sotirios Emmanouil has out on Paul Harold."

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Bill Keating recalled Mayor Jim Sheets falling off a step ladder at his home last November and being hospitalized with injuries.

Get-well wishes poured into Sheets, Keating said.

But mayoral aspirants Tim Cahill, Paul Harold and Dan Raymondi, Keating said, "rushed over to Curry Hardware and chipped in to buy a taller ladder."

Mike D'Amico, who is politically ambitious and keeps moving things around in Ward 4, came in for his share of ribbings.

with real estate firm owner Dan Flynn, said: "Mike D'Amico keeps asking me when Barry Hannon's term is up as Register of

To which Flynn added: "I was driving through West Quincy the other day and ran into 80 stop signs. None of them were there the day before."

Quincy stand-up comedian Paul O'Donnell also had one for D'Amico.

When the Tall Ships came to Boston a few years ago, O'Donnell said, Walter Hannon hired the Mystic River Bridge so that all his friends could have a good view.

"Mike D'Amico hired the Callahan Tunnel." (In politics, Mike, it's really better to be picked on than to be ignored.)

Flynn, noting that ground was broken for the Concourse, said Ed Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership and funeral director, "was the only one who brought his own shovel."

Flynn and Shea presented Sheets with a look-alike cut-out of him created by students at St. Ann's School in appreciation of the mayor's recent visit to the school to read to them. "There are 99 more of them," said Flynn. "Unfortunately, Bob Boussy has them all."

New councillors Greg Hanley and Joe Newton got to do an Abbott & Costello routine and almost got the hook. Councillor Pat McDermott, Quincy's Irish tenor, didn't have to worry about the hook. He sang "Danny Boy."

Weymouth Mayor David Madden joined Sheets for the festivities. Sheets proudly noted he was still driving his 1984 Escort. Madden, who has been taking a little heat for leasing a new Ford LTD, invited Sheets to go out and sit in it.

Shea announced that the cost of drinks for the luncheon had gone up and Dan Raymondi (who was not present) got the blame because of the 175 percent tax classification on commercial property he got through the City Council. "If that's the case," Sheets quipped, "I'll take 40 percent for my re-election campaign."

That didn't draw much reaction from business people in the audience still irked about the City Council tax vote.

Madden, who obviously is keeping tabs on Quincy affairs from his side of the Fore River Bridge, scored with the business people when he announced that Weymouth has a new slogan to attract business: "Come to Weymouth. We won't screw you."

But it was all in fun (???) and for a good cause.

The proceeds (about $4,000) will go toward the Quincy Partnership's latest civic project, a $100 decorative fountain at Merrymount Park.

Quincy Should Be Better Than This

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Well, the bad news is in. The Quincy Shipyard looks to be officially sunk. The newspaper headlines were plastered with the bad news. Myself, I wasn't surprised. I can remember not that long ago when all those pols in hardhats were posing for their photo op at the main gate of the yard. All smiles holding their golden shovels. Remember it?

For the life of me I couldn't understand the way so many Quincy pols and others at the State House, and our congressional delegation, too, all seemed to think denial was a river in Egypt.

Building American shipyards is nothing but a bad nostalgic feeling. Today, shipbuilding still happens but it happens overseas with the Chinese, Koreans, and Japanese. Asia seems to have the anchor when it comes to ships. Here in America our shipyards continually fail, one after another. Didn't all these pols see reality? Look how much time, energy, and money has been wasted on this venture.

I said five years ago that I would be shocked if anyone constructed a dinghy there, never mind promises of endless tankers. However, most folks told me to be more hopeful. A friend laughingly accused me of being like Jeremiah. Remember him? The Biblical prophet of doom and gloom.

It is easy to smile for the cameras and actually believe those press releases but when all was said and done, much more was said than ever done. The MWRA lost $7 million in rent that it now will never see. They can just write it off as a bad experience. However, Quincy is now stuck paying back a $7.8 million HUD loan. We'll be paying it back for years and reportedly the mayor is trying to get the loan extended to ease the payments. However, the longer the loan, the higher the interest and the more we pay and pay and pay. We have mortgaged the futures of our children and grandchildren for a pipe dream that just took on water quickly next to the Fore River Bridge.

To make matters worse, it appears the monies to pay for the HUD loan payments will come at the expense of economic development monies. How safe are our community centers across the city? How secure are the services rendered to poor and working folks across the city, especially our youth and our elderly?

Obviously, the golden shovels have been replaced with brass axes. Meanwhile, don't forget how much it is costing the taxpayers to save Quincy Hospital? We keep mortgaging tomorrow to get by today. What a legacy for the future.

Meanwhile, we're still supposed to be building a brand new Quincy High School and don't forget the hotel tax to get all the hordes of tourists landing here.

Quincy should be better than this. It has been better than this. Affordable housing is hard to find. We bury the business community in higher and higher taxes. We raise assessments on homeowners.

Yeah, I'm sounding like Jeremiah again. Our elected officials aren't smiling anymore either. What a great way to start a new millennium.

Don Gohl: Quintessential Gentleman

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Having worked in long term care in the City of Quincy for the last 19 years, I have met many wonderful advocates for the elderly. No one has impressed me more than Don Gohl who died suddenly last month.

Don was well known as a banker, but perhaps less well known was his continuing devotion to and trusted friendships with his many clients who entered nursing homes. Whenever his busy schedule permitted, Don visited his friends, phoned to check on them, did errands for them and invariably lifted their spirits. Always the quintessential gentleman, he entertained staff and residents alike with his talented song and soft shoe routines and unfailingly spread good cheer to all. I am certain that many social workers in Quincy knew of Don's goodness, gentleness, and steadfast friendship with many of Quincy's senior citizens.

BROAD MEADOWS HONORED: Current and former Broad Meadows' students were honored recently by the Peace Corps for their participation in Operation Day's Work-USA, a project sponsored by the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID). The students raised $30,000 to provide livestock to Haitian villages. Here Peace Corps National Director Mark Schneider is flanked by former Broad Meadows' students Katie Sault (left) and Alicia Cappellano, who both accepted the award. The ceremony took place at the JFK Museum and Library.

Peace Corps Honors Broad Meadows Students For Haitian Aid Project

Roughly 20 current and former students of the Broad Meadows Middle School were honored recently for raising $30,000 to combat the cycle of poverty in Haiti.

The event took place at the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum and coincided with Peace Corps Day 2000. Former Broad Meadows students Alicia Cappellano and Katie Sault accepted the award from Mark Schneider, national director of the Peace Corps.

The students were honored for their participation in Operation Day's Work-USA sponsored by the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID). Under the program, students donate a day's work or community service in exchange for donations which target a specific educational project in a specific developing country.

Under the guidance of Grade 7 teacher and project advisor Ronald Adams, the Broad Meadows students chose the Livestock Project in Haiti, which the students referred to as "the goat project" because money raised supplied female goats to hundreds of poor families in Haiti.

Students learned of Haiti's hardships, Cappellano said, through class pen pal Jeann Robicheau, a Peace Corps volunteer working in Haiti. "From her letters, she taught us a lot about Haitian culture, families, daily life, problems and strengths," Cappellano said.

Robicheau, Sault continued, detailed Haiti's stark living conditions, its lack of electricity and clean water, and the recent devastation caused by Hurricane Georges. "We read those letters and knew which project would help Haitians the most," Sault said.

The students' decision to send $30,000 to "the goat project" has resulted in hundreds of female goats donated to Haiti's rural villages, with some offspring donated back to replenish the stock. The project also provides seeds, reading and writing tutors, and modern farming instruction to the villagers.

The students at Broad Meadows have been active in international causes for several years, including the raising of $147,000 to establish a school in Pakistan for former child laborers.

The school is named "A School for Iqbal" in honor of 12-year old Iqbal Masih, a former child labor slave who visited the school in 1994 and was murdered the following year.

Third Tower Planned For Presidents Place

A third office tower will be added to the office and retail complex at Presidents Place in Quincy Center.

The Lincoln Property Company announces that the 160,000-square foot, five-story addition will be constructed adjacent to the North and South Towers and connected by an extension of the Grand Lobby.

The new East Tower will fill a development site that is currently behind Presidents Place. The East Tower will overlook historic First Parish Church, Bethany Church, and the Thomas Crane Public Library, which is nearing completion of a $14 million renovation project. The brick and glass building will complement the surrounding 19th and early 20th century architecture.

The new building will be next to the five-level South Tower with an entrance on Faxon St. One-and-a-half levels of parking with 300 spaces will be added to the existing garage for a total of 1,400 parking spaces.

With the addition, Presidents Place will grow to 500,000 square feet of office and retail space.

The three buildings will be connected by the Grand Lobby, a three-story atrium that currently links the North and South Towers. The Galleria within Presidents Place provides shopping and dining for tenants and visitors.

The proposed tower has received all necessary permits, including approval from the Quincy Zoning Board. Construction is scheduled to begin later this year.

Officials at Lincoln Property Company in Boston said that the decision to build a third tower comes as Presidents Place enjoys tremendous success. Nearly all of the office space and ground-floor retail spaces are leased.

Presidents Place is across Hancock St. from the MBTA Red Line Station convenient to Routes 3, 93, and 128.

The vitality of Quincy Center, with its plethora of restaurants and small shops, adds to the allure of Presidents Place as a location for businesses of all sizes.

"We expect that the new addition to Presidents Place will be very popular with companies who are looking for convenience for their employees and clients. I can't think of a better location for businesses," said John Miller, senior vice president for Lincoln Property Company.

Its proximity to Boston eight miles to the north is considered a key factor in the success of Presidents Place. Office vacancy rates in some parts of downtown Boston are below one percent and rental rates exceed $5 per square foot, which has encouraged companies to look for alternatives south of Boston.

CNA Insurance, which occupies two floors, has recently negotiated a long-term lease in the building. Boston Financial Data Services has expanded its operations and now leases 130,000 square feet in Presidents Place.

With offices in Boston and Quincy, Lincoln Property Company is one of the largest and most diversified real estate service firms in the United States.

Quincy Teen Mothers Program Receives NAEYC Accreditation

The Quincy Teen Mothers Program, an alternative program within the Quincy Public Schools, was recently granted accreditation by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC).

This recognition has been achieved by approximately only 7% of early childhood programs nationwide. Janice Walsh, the Coordinator of the Quincy Teen Mothers for the past 10 years said she is proud of her nursery staff for attaining this accreditation.

NAEYC accreditation is a voluntary process by which early childhood programs demonstrate that they meet national standards of excellence. Child care centers, preschools, kindergartens, and before and after school programs are eligible to seek NAEYC accreditation.

Programs seeking accreditation undergo an intensive self-study, collecting information from parents, teachers, administrators, and classroom observations. They receive an on-site visit, conducted by early childhood professionals especially trained by NAEYC to validate their self-study results. All of this information is independently reviewed by a team of national experts who grant or defer accreditation. When awarded, accreditation is valid for three years.

"The heart of NAEYC accreditation focuses on the child's experience," said Walsh. The process carefully considers all aspects of a program including health and safety, staffing, staff qualifications, and physical environment. The greatest emphasis is on the children's relationships with the staff and how the program helps each child grow and learn intellectually, physically, socially, and emotionally.

Barbara Willer, spokesperson for NAEYC, said research supports the value of accreditation for children. Children's language and social skills especially benefit from the better quality found in NAEYC-accredited programs. "These are critical areas for children's success in school as well as in life," said Willer.

NAEYC accreditation began in 1985, with the first program accredited in 1986. NAEYC is the nation's oldest and largest organization of early childhood professionals dedicated to improvement of quality early childhood education. NAEYC established accreditation in response to the growing number of American children spending large amounts of time in group settings away from home and the uneven-and-often inadequate consumer protection afforded by state licensing of child care facilities.

The Quincy Teen Mothers Program is part of the Quincy Public Schools. It is housed at Bethany Congregational Church and Quincy High School. For more information, call Walsh at (617) 984-8704 or Janet Powell, Director of Pupil Personnel Services at (617) 984-8891.

BC's Paul Zukauskas Addresses Quincy Lions Club Luncheon

As a junior, Zukauskas is now BC's most experienced lineman and this past year helped lead BC to an 8-4 record which included an appearance in the In-sight.Com Bowl and victories over such perennial football powers as Notre Dame, West Virginia, and Syracuse.

Zukauskas is the son of Anne Marie Zukauskas, principal of the Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy, and Thomas Zukauskas, executive director of Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts, also in Quincy.

Quincy.

Greg Glennon, president of the Quincy Lions Club, introduced Zukauskas: "At barely eighteen years of age, he was the first true freshman in twenty years to start on the offensive line for the Boston College football team when they played the formidable Virginia Tech Hokies."

Zukauskas reminded any high school athletes wishing to step up to the next level that "in addition to athletics, it is equally important to maintain good grades and positive off the field conduct in order to be recruited for college. This is especially true at Boston College."

While at BC High School, Zukauskas was the recipient of the Dempsey Scholar-Athlete award.

Zukauskas reviewed for Lions Club members the grueling year-round physical training necessary to compete at a high level in Division 1A football in addition to fulfilling a full college course load. He also said he expected next year's BC team to have an equally good season as last year's team, emphasizing an experienced offense which should hold the line during the early part of the season while the young defense develops.

Concerning a possible future in professional football, the 6'6", 308-pounder said, "I would enjoy playing for the New England Patriots or a warm weather team."

Gertrude Peter has retired from the Manet Community Health Center's Board of Directors after 20 years of service to the organization.

Peter also served on the committee which founded the health center and has served as its president the past three years.

The MCHC Board of Directors expressed its thanks to Peter for her "dedicated leadership and guidance" at its recent Annual Meeting. Fred Dolgin, MD, medical director of the health center, presented a Quincy award to Peter from the staff and thanked her for guiding the center and for being a part of the services provided for two decades.

The board had previously established the Gertrude Peter Community Service Award, which was given to Rosemary Wahlberg, a founder of the center, at MCHC's recent 20th anniversary celebration.

Ellen Hafer, executive director of Manet, praised Peter for her leadership and thanked her for her commitment to the health center and to healthcare access.

Peter thanked the MCHC board and staff for their teamwork, especially in regards to the center's recent accreditation by the Joint Commission for Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO). "Achieving accreditation demonstrates Manet Community Health Center's commitment to provide high quality health care."

Hafer was equally enthusiastic about the center's accreditation. "In becoming accredited Manet Community Health Center was evaluated at all four of its sites against a set of national standards by a Joint Commission survey team experienced in the delivery of ambulatory health care services," said Hafer. "This is a proud moment in the history of Manet."

Elections were also held at Manet's Annual meeting. Larry Butler, Richard Coleman, Judy Kolson, and Joan McDonald were elected as board members for three-year terms. Officers elected for the year 2000 were: Barbara Morris, president; Judy Kolson, vice president; Joan McDonald, secretary; and Larry Butler, treasurer.

Planning Pays Off For Quincy 2000

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Quincy Concourse and Outback Steakhouse's decision to locate a restaurant along the Parkway came as welcome news to Quincy 2000.

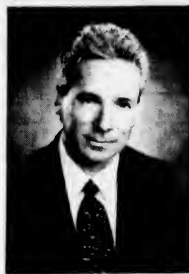

But the news was hardly surprising.

In fact, say Donald Uvanitte and Joseph Mannarino, chairman and executive director of Quincy 2000, respectively, seeds for the area's recent development were planted as early as 1996.

In November of 1996, said Mannarino, Quincy's public/private partnership presented the Quincy Center Action Plan for the area with the $5.4 million Quincy Concourse, which connects area highways directly to downtown, as its centerpiece.

"The plans were done, approved by the City Council, and on file," said Mannarino. "It showed commitment on the part of the city, that buying property here was a good investment."

That commitment was

good enough for Joseph Zink, president of Atlantic Management, who did in fact purchase property in the area years ago in the belief that the city's plan was a good one. That property will now feature the Outback Steakhouse, scheduled to open this June.

"This city has a vision," Zink said, explaining why he chose Quincy over 22 other communities. "It's active, not passive. If I ever had a concern, Mayor Sheets was always willing to work with me. It's a great example of public/private partnership."

Uvanitte said that five or six other retailers have expressed interest in the location now that the Quincy Concourse has begun to take shape. "This is only the start," Uvanitte said. "The concourse will serve as a catalyst for North Quincy, Wollaston, all the business areas."

And the planning isn't done yet, as Quincy 2000 wants to implement a new signage system for the area to coincide with the end of Phase I of the concourse, slated for late 2001.

The plan includes red, white, and blue street signs in Quincy Center as well as similarly designed banners on the School St. overpass and the parking garage. Quincy Center will also have kiosks at important "gateway" areas and additional signage highlighting important and historic sites in Quincy Center.

"The plan is to give Quincy Center its own identity," said Mannarino.

Concourse Hailed As Downtown Catalyst

"The Big Dig gets all the headlines," said the governor, who was accompanied by state Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan and Massachusetts Highway Department Commissioner Matthew Amorello. "But what's missing is projects like this all across the state."

Cellucci pledged to spend $17 billion over the next five years on projects as varied as commuter rails, courthouses, prisons, Logan Airport, and Boston Harbor, calling it "the most massive rehabilitation of infrastructure in the history of Massachusetts."

Mayor Sheets, who underscored the concourse's role as an economic engine for Quincy Center, said the new roadway was already bringing business to the area. The mayor cited the new Outback Steakhouse, which will open at the former MediaOne site in June, as well as interest from at least two major retailers. "The reason they're coming is the Quincy Concourse," said Sheets.

Sheets thanked Cellucci for being an "outstanding friend" to the city of Quincy and pointed out that $113 million in state funds have been allocated to Quincy dating back to Cellucci's days as lieutenant governor. Sheets said he was especially grateful to Cellucci for his commitment to saving Quincy Hospital and renovating the Fore River Bridge.

Commissioner Amorello stated the concourse project was part of an overall effort by the Cellucci administration to dedicate more than $600 million a year over the next five years to the state-wide road and bridge program. The program, he said, had over 400 active projects across the state.

Amorello and Secretary Sullivan were quick to thank state Rep. Joseph Sullivan of Braintree, chairman of the Joint Committee on Transportation, who was in attendance, for his efforts in securing the needed funding for the project. Rep. Sullivan later remarked that the state's task was to create a comprehensive road and bridge program while dealing with the "great challenge" of the Central Artery Project.

State Senator Michael Morrissey provided a brief history of the city's attempts to directly connect Quincy Center to area highways, an idea which has been discussed for at least two decades. Morrissey recalled that he and Sheets and Cellucci were all members of the State Legislature in 1979 when he and Sheets traveled to Washington, D.C. to lobby, successfully, to depress the MBTA railroad tracks then under construction.

"We knew then that, someday, the city would agree on a Crosstown Connector," Morrissey said, emphasizing the real savings the decision to depress the tracks was having now.

The senator acknowledged the past efforts of Congressmen James Burke and Brian Donnelly on the project and called the Quincy Concourse "a dream of this city which hasn't gone away."

State Reps. Bruce Ayers and Ronald Mariano also made remarks at the event, as did Councillor Patrick McDermott, who represented the City Council on behalf of Council President Paul Harold, who was away on business.

David Ezickson, chairman of the Citizens' Advisory Committee for the project, said after the ceremonies that the project was progressing but there were still "major concerns," including safe and easy access to the area for residents of the Hancock Park Rehabilitation Center and the parishioners of St. John's

THE QUINCY CONCOURSE had its groundbreaking ceremonies Thursday and on hand for the event were: Donald Uvanitte, chairman Quincy 2000; state Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan; Thomas Galvin, past chairman Quincy 2000; Rep. Ronald Mariano; Massachusetts Highway Department Commissioner Matthew Amorello; state Senator Michael Morrissey; Governor Paul Cellucci; Mayor James Sheets; Rep. Joseph Sullivan of Braintree; Councillor Patrick McDermott; Rep. Bruce Ayers; Joseph Mannarino, executive director Quincy 2000; and David Colton, commissioner Quincy DPW.

Church.

Arlene Goodman, who is also on the committee, said she supports the project but has doubts as to whether the location was the best choice for the project. A waiver had to be obtained, Goodman said, because the space between the bridge and MBTA trains did not meet regulations. Goodman also expressed doubts as to the viability of the Phase II portion of the project.

Phase II of the Quincy Concourse calls for $3.5 million to construct a roadway between Hancock St. and Route 3A. Phase II will also connect to Phase I by means of a road crossing Hancock St. to Mechanic and Revere Rds.

Although Phase II is not as extensive as Phase I, it presents the difficulty of possibly costly land takings.

Phase II, funding for which Mayor Sheets said he has received commitments, is at the 25 percent design stage.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month

The American Cancer Society joins a major, national public awareness campaign in March to recognize the first annual National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month.

National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month is intended to generate widespread awareness about colorectal cancer and prompt people to take action by learning more about preventing the disease.

Colorectal cancer, unlike other cancers, is a highly preventable disease and one that can be detected early through screening. In support of National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month, the American Cancer Society is encouraging people to use its resources — a toll-free information line (1-800-ACS-2345) and Web site (www.cancer.org) — to get accurate, unbiased colorectal cancer information and support. The American Cancer Society is committed to saving lives from colorectal cancer by providing information about the disease and encouraging people to talk with their doctor to understand risk factors and colorectal screening options.

"The American Cancer Society's toll-free information line is one of the resources we offer to help people make informed decisions about their health," said Dr. Gerald Woolam, president of the American Cancer Society. "It is the only national cancer help line offering comprehensive information about cancer and local resources to callers 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The American Cancer Society's web site also offers information on a variety of cancer-related subjects written by medical professionals."

Colorectal cancer is the second leading cancer killer in the United States, affecting men and women almost equally. In 2000, it is estimated 130,200 Americans will be diagnosed with colorectal cancer, and 56,300 will die from the disease. In Massachusetts, the American Cancer Society estimates 3,500 people will be newly diagnosed and 1,500 will die from the disease.

The diagnosis of colorectal cancer in high-profile individuals, such as Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg and baseball players Darryl Strawberry and Eric Davis, helped generate awareness of the disease. Yet, despite the recent national attention on colorectal cancer, people are reluctant or embarrassed to talk about the disease.

National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month began when the Cancer Research Foundation of America, the National Colorectal Cancer

Roundtable (founded by the American Cancer Society and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention), and the American Digestive Health Foundation joined forces to bring critical messages about colorectal cancer to the American people. Together the founding partners have joined 34 other collaborating sponsors to focus their energies and resources on colorectal cancer each year, and especially, during the month of March.

"Even though the exact cause of most colorectal cancer is not known, it is possible to prevent many colon cancers through regular screening and a healthy lifestyle," said Susan Rodgers-Tibbets, American Cancer Society Regional Executive for Cancer Control. "We hope that as more people speak publicly about this disease, it will encourage others to address the issue of colorectal cancer — leading to recommended screenings, early diagnoses and ultimately more lives saved."

Quincy Girls' Tennis Hope To Net Title

By CHRIS POISSON

Hanging on the wall in room 318 of Quincy High School are two photos that don't seem to belong in a 10th-grade biology classroom.

But to teacher Peter Swanson they seem right at home.

For two seasons, Swanson paced the hardwood as he coached the girls basketball team. In 1980-81, he turned the program around, leading them to its first ever tournament appearance where it lost to eventual champ Newton North in the semifinals.

The following season, Quincy captured the Suburban League crown and made a run all the way to the state sectional finals before bowing out.

The pictures are of those two teams and, one day, Swanson would like the opportunity to return to the courts. But right now, he finds himself preparing for his eighth season as coach of the girls tennis team.

"I'm a much better basketball coach than I am a tennis coach," Swanson says. "But I'm learning about tennis all the time."

This year Quincy has its sight set on a tournament match. With senior captains Nina Niamkey, Ruijie Zhuo and Dianne Lynch anchoring the squad, the Presidents have a chance to put together their best season in two decades.

"The talent level is there," Swanson says. "Whether we have bad luck during the season, that can always happen. But this is a talented group of kids. They've paid their dues. They're ready to go and it's going to be fun."

The excitement that now surrounds the team was absent not too long ago. Prior to Swanson's arrival seven years ago, Quincy hadn't won a single match in over a decade. The program barely had a pulse.

In the year before Swanson took over, there were only eight or nine girls on the club. If someone got sick, there were announcements in school asking anyone if they would like to play that day because they were short a person.

"The problem is we come from a blue-collar community and the teams that are really good have programs where the kids have their own pros," Swanson says. "Our kids come here to Quincy High School and they don't even have rackets. They never thought about playing."

'This Is A Talented Group,' Says Coach Peter Swanson

But that didn't stop Swanson. When he got to Quincy he campaigned intensely. He walked the school hallways and grabbed anyone he could find, whether they knew how to play or not.

"I just recruited everybody," Swanson says. "Kids would be walking down the hall and I'd say, 'Hey you, come here. Would you like to play tennis?' And they'd say, 'Well, I've never played before.' And I'd say, 'That's OK.'"

His efforts landed him 35-40 girls that first season, and only one had a racket. Although Quincy suffered through another dismal season with an 0-16 record, improvements in the program were being made.

"Our theme was building a winning tradition and the kids knew they weren't going to win a lot of games, any sets and any matches," Swanson says. "But they were the foundation for creating a program here at Quincy High School that stands for three things: we expect them to improve as athletes; we expect them to do well academically; and we want them to contribute to the school community."

The program has come a long way since then. The team is no longer practicing in the cafeteria, hitting balls against the tables and breaking lights. It is no longer playing in "just a parking lot," but rather in "probably one of the nicest places to play in the league," said Swanson.

The community support has been tremendous. Barry Welch, director of the Quincy Recreation Department, developed enhanced summer camps to increase participation, and the Department also improved the city's tennis facilities.

The Quincy Tennis Club offers a special summer program to improve tennis skills and the U.S. Tennis Association provided grants and programs for player development.

For the past five years, Quincy has been in the hunt for a tournament berth, coming within a point in 1996 of making the postseason. Last year it appeared to be heading for the playoffs before the lights went out in a match, taking momentum away from one of the players who ended up losing her match.

With the recent success,

Swanson feels the pressure of maintaining a winning program. But wins and losses are not what the program is all about.

"This is really the premier program at the high school," Swanson says. "Not because we win more games than everybody else, but because it's a total package."

What makes the program a "total package" is that Swanson has emphasized academics as well as athletics since the beginning. He created "Match Point," a mentoring program where students are assigned a teacher/mentor and are expected to develop their tennis skills, maintain high academic standards and be involved in the school community.

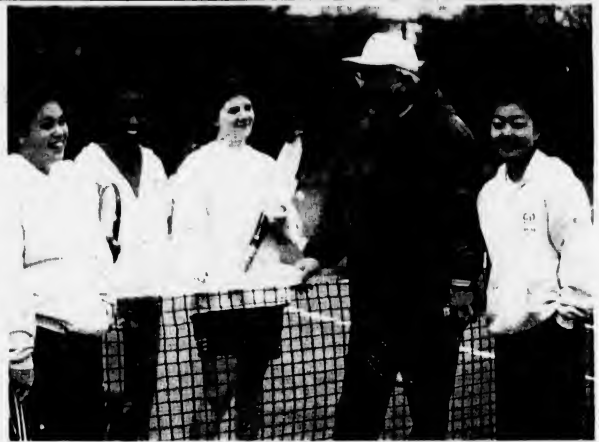

Last year, the junior varsity and varsity teams received commendation from the MIAA for achieving academic excellence as a team with a 3.663 grade-point average.

"Although I felt like Superman, I knew that there was no way I was going to be able to turn this thing around myself," says Swanson on why he created Match Point. "I had been doing some research on mentors and their effectiveness at the college level as well as high school. I put out a memo and said would you like to try to improve this thing. It took right off because they were interested in talking with the kids about the games and being supportive."

"Our 12 mentors are wonderful people. They come to matches because a lot of our kids, their parents are unfamiliar with tennis and might feel uncomfortable going to a match, or they're working. So the mentors act as surrogate parents, supporters of their efforts."

The program has flourished academically as former players are at Harvard, Stanford, Brandeis, Simmons, Babson, BU and Tufts.

Niamkey's career really shows what Swanson has created at Quincy High School. Niamkey came to Quincy four years ago without ever playing tennis and without a racket, and now she's one of the team's top players on the court and off the court as she received early acceptance to Harvard.

SENIOR NINA NIAMKEY returns a shot in Monday's practice. Niamkey, of the captains, has received early acceptance to Harvard University.

"We bring kids who are kind of at the medium level and we bring them to the next level, so they're looking beyond a local college or just OK expectations for themselves," Swanson says.

The first match of the season is less than two weeks away. If the Presidents can catch some breaks, they should finish with their best season in 20 years and a long-awaited tournament appearance.

SENIOR RUIJIE ZHUO, a captain, watches the ball as she follows through on a shot.

If that happens, Swanson would have to hang another team picture on his classroom wall.

KIND OF A DRAG

One of the likely causes of dragging brakes and lost braking power is contaminated brake fluid. This situation usually occurs as a result of openings around rubber seals or tiny breaks in flexible brake hoses that allow moisture to mix with brake fluid. This is a potentially damaging scenario because brake fluid is highly hygroscopic, meaning it absorbs moisture from the atmosphere. When this occurs, it breaks down and its ability to prevent corrosion is compromised along with its boiling point and lubricating properties. A lowered boiling point can result in a serious loss of braking power during repeated quick stops or prolonged use while descending steep grades. To avert these problems, brake fluid should be replaced at regular intervals.

HINT: "Dragging brakes" refers to brakes that remain partially applied even though pressure is no longer being exerted on the brake pedal.

Squirt B Firefighters Red Hot

The Quincy Squirt B Firefighters had something to prove.

After learning that the Greater Boston League play-off schedule had been changed without notice, denying them the chance to battle for that trophy, they stormed into New Hampshire for the final tournament of the season.

The Firefighters (27-7-1) won four straight games as they cruised to the March Madness Waterville Valley championship, their second tournament crown in three weeks. They had won the Cranberry Tournament earlier.

Missing defensemen Kevin Bossart and Kyle Tobin, who were out with injuries, fellow blue-liners Kevin Lewis, David Arrafat, Kenny Patey and Pat Morrissey picked up their game as only four goals were scored on Quincy in the tour-

Brendan Gavaghan picked up his eighth shutout of the season in the 3-0 victory over the Demons in the final game.

Forwards Joe Canavan, Rob DeAngelis, Mike Gillespie, Bryan Gilligan, Matt Lawlor, Steve McDonough, Nash Winters, Josh McKeon and Jeff Bailey supplied plenty of offense with 17 goals in four games.

The third game proved to be the toughest against Lakes Region. Trailing by one and down two men, Gilligan broke free on a pass from Teddy Finnegan and buried a short-handed goal to tie the game in the third.

DeAngelis scored the go-ahead goal with some flashy moves to propel Quincy into the championship and prevent the bigger Lakes Region team a trip to the final in its home rink.

South Shore Co-operative Announces Checking For Charity Program

South Shore Co-operative Bank announces its new Checking For Charity program.

For every checking account opened this year, South Shore Co-operative Bank (SSCB) will donate $10 to a local charity. The program extends to all types of checking accounts, including commercial checking, NOW checking, VIP checking and Totally Free Checking.

"We are committed to providing excellence in community banking," said John J. O'Brien, SSCB's President and CEO, "and that requires a significant level of community involvement. Checking For Charity is our latest action supporting progress and positive growth for the families of the South Shore."

Each branch has selected a charitable organization that serves the immediate community. The Weymouth office has chosen the Dream Come True Fund as its recipient charity. This program provides once-in-a-lifetime opportunities to children battling life-threatening illness in the South Shore area.

To date, the Dream

Come True Fund has brought joy to nearly 50 families, providing all-expense-paid adventures involving everything from trips to Disney World (by far the most popular) to Super Bowl tickets. SSCB's East Bridgewater branch will soon be announcing its selection of a local charity.

"We are proud to work with the community to brighten the lives of local youth," O'Brien said. "After all, SSCB is not only a partner to our customers, but to our communities as well."

Grand Jury Indicts Clary For 2nd Degree Murder

A Norfolk County Grand Jury has indicted Andrew Clary, 36, for second-degree murder in the December 1999 death of Christine R. Davis, 24, the mother of his daughter.

"There were indications present on Quincy Shore Drive that night that this was not something that could be termed an accident," said Bill Keating, the Norfolk District Attorney, who was present at the scene that night, Dec. 29, 1999.

"Mr. Clary was initially charged with motor vehicle homicide the night of the incident, but the evidence we have developed through our investigation and the grand jury process has led us to indict for second degree murder," Keating said.

Clary, who initially gave police the name "Diamond" Clary, pled not guilty to the vehicular homicide charge in Quincy District Court on Dec. 30, 1999. At his arraignment, prosecutors alleged that Clary was chasing Davis and ramming her vehicle from behind at speeds up to 85 miles per hour. The BMW Davis was driving eventually struck a couple driving onto Quincy Shore Drive from Aphor St. Both occupants of that car were hospitalized but survived.

Clary was ordered held on $200,000 cash bail -- a superior court judge later reduced the amount to $50,000 cash bail -- which Clary has been unable to post.

No date has yet been set for his arraignment in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham on the indictment.

If convicted, Clary -- who has addresses in Weymouth and Dorchester -- could face a sentence of life in prison.

Teen Dating Violence: Early Warning Signs For Victims

As adolescents, boys and girls are forming their first conclusions about what to expect and accept in intimate relationships.

Teenagers may be predisposed to accept physical violence because of their exposure to it in their home (either as victims or witnesses) or in the media. Given this early learning, it is critical for school personnel to recognize and respond to the early warning signs.

The following are common clues that a student may be experiencing dating violence or date rape:

Physical bruises or other signs of injury.

Bear in mind that victims will often attempt to hide their injuries due to embarrassment. Be alert to sudden changes in dress or make-up, as well as explanations of injuries, which seem out of character.

Truancy, failing, withdrawal from activities, dropping out of school.

An abusive relationship drains the victim of energy. The energy she, or he, still has is spent trying to make things right for their partner.

Sudden or increased social isolation.

Due to shame or jealous accusations on the part of a violent partner, the victim will withdraw from friends and become increasingly isolated.

Difficulty making decisions.

Victims may appear anxious about making independent decisions because they must continuously "get permissions" from their partners. Another sign is the victim's avoidance of eye contact.

Sudden changes in mood or personality.

These changes may include depression, withdrawal, acting out, secretiveness, increased insecurity or feeling of inadequacy, anxiousness, preoccupation with the partner.

Use of alcohol or drugs.

This may be in response to direct pressure from their partner or an attempt to numb the pain or emotional ambivalence about the relationship.

Pregnancy.

Many teenaged girls feel pregnancy will help them get out of a bad situation. Over 70% of pregnant, or parenting teens, are beaten by their boyfriends. Pregnancy significantly increases the risk of violence in teenage relationships.

Crying easily: "getting hysterical" or overreacting to minor incidents.

The victim who lives in fear of another incident is living under extreme tension. She/he is constantly trying to second-guess their partner's moods in an attempt to avoid violence. Reacting to this stress may cause the victim to explode or become hysterical in response to something minor (for example: screaming when asked why she/he is late for class.)

Help is available for victims of abuse.

Call the police at 911 or call The Domestic Violence Hot-Line at 471-1234.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Have you ever noticed how some people seldom, if ever, make premature decisions? How they do not make decisions that cannot be made effective? How, if pressured for a decision, they often say "No" because they know "No" can later be changed more easily to "Yes"; less easy to change from "Yes" to "No"? How when they make a bad decision, they blame themselves, not others?

Lincoln illustrated a good formula for making good decisions. When he was severely criticized he said, "I do the best I know how; they very best I can; and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me all right, what is said about me won't amount to anything. Of they end brings me out wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference."

On that formula there is seldom any need to hesitate, or "hem or haw." Base firm decisions on your best judgement, skills and abilities given you by God - and do the best you can... People who make good decisions know how true this is.

Raymondi Meets With QCBPA On Issues

"attract young families," strengthen neighborhoods and the business environment."

Noting that the establishment of the new Quincy Medical Center did not come "without a cost" added it will cost $5 million by the end of the year.

Amidst all of this, Anthony Agnitti, Chairman of the Quincy Business Council, asked Raymondi why the business community was not "allowed to speak the night the councillors voted for the tax increase for businesses?"

Agnitti, who stated that "we're working twice as hard for half as much" asked why the business community in Quincy was "kept out of the loop."

Raymondi explained that the process requires both entities that of the city council and the Mayor to make a decision.

He said after examining the figures given to them by Marion Fantucchio, chairman of the assessors, they needed to make a "quick decision." He said if the council and the Mayor had not "come together" it would have been different.

Agnitti complimented Raymondi on his "eloquence," but said there was still "bitterness left" in the way it was done, and viewed in the "negative light."

Questions about Twin Rivers and its decision not to expand in Quincy drew criticism from some business persons. Raymondi said Twin Rivers had asked for a tax break while planning to invest $77 million on equipment and safety operations. However, Raymondi said it turned out to be about 25 to 30 percent labor.

According to Quincy 2000, its policy said companies made to abide by fair employment.

Raymondi said stipulations made to Twin Rivers included to provide medical coverage for workers (contractors), they said "no", workmen's compensation mandated by the state, and they said "no."

Raymondi said Twin Rivers wanted a tax break while refusing to pay their workers the prevailing wage.

He said he was against importing workers from New Hampshire and Vermont, but wanted Massachusetts workers to be hired.

Calling it a "structural philosophical disagreement," Raymondi said he was not "anti business" in his decision, but said other issues were involved including the company purchasing equipment that was "used."

Jay Asher, president of Radio Station WJDA asked who benefited from the decision made at Twin Rivers.

Raymondi, instead of directly answering Asher's question referred to Raytheon, which had once received a tax break only to give "pink slips" afterward.

He said there was "no guarantee that a tax break guaranteed employment."

Raymondi cited opposition against Roche Bros. and Home Depot when they were first proposed by certain councillors who had to respect the opinions of their constituents in their vote.

Asher said he didn't think any of those decisions take courage or leadership but instead called it "political struggling."

Joseph McParland, a member of the QCBPA asked what right the council had to impose certain conditions of employment. He added that workers were hard to get at Local 8 because of a shortage of workers at other jobs.

Bernie Reisberg, a member of the QCBPA said he attended meetings at Twin Rivers where the vice president said he already addressed the issues stipulated by the city council, but refused to be "dictated to."

Reisberg said since the unions couldn't fulfill the needs of employment, then they had to revert to those from other states.

He noted that Fire Chief Thomas Gorman had said great strides were taken to make the company a safe place to work and wondered why that wasn't taken in consideration because the company was trying very hard to concur with the demands of the council.

However, Raymondi said even though Gorman made that statement, Raymondi couldn't discount the fact that Captain Francis Sullivan had concerns as well as former fire chief Paul O'Connell, now a Deputy Fire Chief who called it an "unnecessary risk" to fire-fighters.

Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth told Raymondi his 175 tax classification amendment "came out of the blue without warning." Bosworth said there should have been a hearing on the amendment.

A special council meeting to reconsider the 175 percent classification was over in approximately five minutes and adjourned without business community representatives present given the opportunity to speak on the matter.

Agnitti, agreeing with Bosworth said, "Don't kill the cow that's giving you milk."

Maralin Manning, executive secretary to the QCBPA asked Raymondi what he envisions for Quincy Center in the future?

He said, "I'm not a planner," but alluded to the Stop & Shop building years back, and the construction of the new concourse as major issues in the future of the city. He agreed that parking was a major concern.

Joseph Hajjar, owner of the Yard Rock Cafe at the Shipyard asked if politics would fare in the decision of the future of the yard.

He said he wanted to "volunteer as an abutter" and said he knows the area better than anyone, having been in business there for so many years.

He asked why an empty building for 15 years isn't being utilized.

Raymondi, defending his support of the shipyard, acknowledged the future of the building should be utilized and stated, "the doors are not completely closed to building ships at the shipyard."

Hearing Impaired Access To Council By April 1

A "personal hearing system" to allow the hearing impaired access to City Council meetings will be ready by April 1, reports John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary. Keenan addressed the council Monday night and reported the system, consisting of headphones with an FM transistor belted around the waist, cost about $675 with a $175 installation charge.

"We have spoken with the vendor and the system will be installed forthwith," Keenan said.

For Outstanding Community Service Ron Adams Honored As Sun Citizen Of Year

Ronald G. "Ron" Adams was honored Sunday as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year for inspiring and guiding his Broad Meadows Middle School students in their continuing fight against child labor abuse, poverty and other wrongs and ills locally and world-wide.

The 15th annual Quincy Sun award for outstanding community service was presented to him at a reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center where he was cited as a "hero teacher," "great educator" and a "devoted and skillful teacher."

More than 100 guests including officials, family members, colleagues, students, friends and past recipients of the award attended.

Adams, who gives freely of his time after school working with his students was commended for his dedication.

The praise came from several speakers: Congressman William Delahunt, Mayor James Sheets, state Senator Michael Morrissey, state Rep. Steven Tobin, City Council President Paul Harold, School Supt. Eugene Creedon and Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth.

Bosworth presented

Adams with a clock plaque inscribed:

"To Ronald G. Adams, For Outstanding Community Service, By Inspiring and Guiding his Broad Meadows School students in their determined and untiring efforts to right social wrongs and oversights locally and world-wide."

Bosworth, noting the clock was symbolic, said: "It symbolizes all the time you have given to your students and in doing so have given to the community."

"You know," he added, "this is a remarkable story of a dedicated teacher and

New CEO Named At Medical Center

Christine C. Schuster, President and CEO at Athol Memorial Hospital, has been named Chief Executive Officer of Quincy Medical Center effective May 15.

The announcement was made Wednesday by Bob Curry, chairman of the Quincy Medical Center Board.

A senior executive with Tenet/Saint Vincent Healthcare System (SVHS), a for-profit health system located in Worcester, Schuster, a Sudbury resident, has played a key role in the clinical and financial turnaround of several SVHS facilities.

Simultaneously serving as President and CEO of Athol Memorial Hospital and Vice President and Chief Operating Officer of the Extended Care Division of SVHS, Schuster currently manages nearly 600 acute and long term care beds. She is responsible for $90 million in gross patient revenues and 1,000 employees. Under her leadership, in December 1999, AMH posted its first profit in 14 months.

"As we went about our search for a new CEO for Quincy Medical Center, we were determined to identify someone who could demonstrate strength in working with physicians to build an excellent quality patient care team, as well as in managing strong financial performance," Curry said.

"We have found those skills in Christine Schuster and I'm sure I speak for the entire board when I say she has the right combination of skills to ensure the long term success of this institution. I'm delighted that she has accepted the position and welcome the opportunity to work with someone who brings so much experience and enthusiasm to the job," Curry said.

"This is a terrific opportunity for me, and one I've been working toward my whole professional career," said Schuster. "Having met a number of board and medical staff leaders, I'm enthusiastic about working with them and the rest of the Quincy Medical Center team. My vision is to build on their strengths as we integrate additional resources now available through the Hospital's clinical affiliation with Boston Medical Center."

Sunday Fire Results In Twin Rivers Shutdown

By CRAIG SALTERS

As of Monday night, the Twin Rivers Technologies Plant in Quincy Point has been shut down.

And it will remain shut down, Chief Thomas Gorman said, until work done on piping related to Sunday's most recent fire at the plant has been inspected and approved by a qualified engineer.

Chief Gorman made the announcement at Monday night's meeting of the Public Safety Committee which had convened to address safety issues at the former Proctor & Gamble site.

"I've had all the fires that I'm going to have from Twin Rivers and that's the end of it," Gorman said to the councillors and to an audience which included QFD firefighters and Paul Angelico, senior vice president of Twin Rivers, makers of fatty-acid products.

Twin Rivers officials, Gorman said, spoke to the chief that night and were in the process of calling an engineer to be on-site by Tuesday morning. No timetable has been set for the plant to go back on-line. "Until all of the us are satisfied that they have made their corrections, they are off-line," Gorman said.

After hearing more than six hours of testimony over the course of three meetings, the Public Safety Committee voted unanimously to recommend a resolution, sponsored by Councillors Daniel Raymond and Gregory Hanley, to address issues at the plant.

The resolution, which will be presented to the full council at its next meeting,

Board Votes To Amend Bryan Rental Agreement

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A recent gathering at the George F. Bryan Post VFW which was booked as a wedding, but turned out to be a "sweet sixteen" party caused the License Board at Tuesday's meeting to vote for an amendment to the rental contract agreement.

A shooting incident outside in the parking lot occurred at the March 3 event.

The amendment was made in the form of a motion by Police Capt. Fred Laracy, who was substituting for board member Police Chief Thomas Frane.

The amendment will be placed in the beginning of the rental contract stating that persons be specific about the purpose of the party and declare the type of function. If a different function is held, it would be considered a "fraud" commented Laracy.

As a result of the amendment, Chairman Joseph Shea said the board will review rental contracts written in all the halls in the city to be specific about the purpose of the rental.

According to Det. Lt. Robert M. Perchard, liquor inspector and license board agent, at the March 3 function at the VFW, a shooting incident took place outside the hall and in the parking lot of the building. Those involved in the shooting he said, were not part of the function, but instead came in cars and were outside the building.

Perchard said there are two groups that show up at these functions, first an older group show up early in the evening, and then about 11 p.m. younger groups, almost in a "gang" show up later.

Perchard said the club does not plan to rent to the certain group anymore as their culture believes that alcohol can be consumed at any age.

He added that from now on, detail officers will be sent down the hall a month before the function so as not to repeat the "unfortunate incident" that happened on March 3.

Perchard said when there are 25 guests or more a floor walker is used. When there are 100 or more, two floor walkers are hired.

VFW Manager Edward Scigliano and the post's commander Lief Thornton

both said on March 3, when the shooting occurred, there were no problems inside the hall. They added there were no minors drinking, no one intoxicated and said inside was "quiet", and what happened outside was "beyond our control".

Thornton said by all appearances the hall looked like it was being set up as a wedding. There was "no trouble whatsoever" in the hall until about 10:30 p.m. when a woman said she had taken a bottle of beer away from a young person. Thornton said at that moment, the bar panel was drawn and the bar closed.

Thornton said it was overheard in the rest room that the person who rented the hall did not tell the function manager that it was going to be a "sweet 16 party".

Thornton said it looked like a typical wedding with food lining one of the walls as it usually is at a wedding.

He said the group was "not happy" when the security deposit was not returned to them.

Thornton said the post closed the event early after the shooting incident was evident.

Shea said he is trying to discourage the "no purpose parties" as they are the ones that usually cause the trouble.

Shea said he recently attended a function at the VFW Post and found it "well run with good results."

Shea said his intent would be to keep the matter on the calendar until Police Chief Thomas Frane and City Solicitor Steve McGrath could attend the hearing. Shea said it would probably be held at the April 18 meeting.

Planning Department Unveils Comprehensive Profile Of The City

BY CRAIG SALTERS

The Department of Planning and Community Development Monday unveiled its first-ever comprehensive City Profile containing over 300 pages of information and vital statistics on the city of Quincy.

The profile, the culmination of more than five years of work, seeks to provide a complete picture of the city for residents, researchers, officials, grant writers, and organizations who need up-to-date information at their fingertips.

"It's everything you want to know about the city of Quincy, and some information you may not want to know," said Planning Director Richard Meade.

75 copies of the profile were passed out to various city organizations and efforts are being made to put the profile on the city's website. The profile will also be available in the city's libraries, schools, and municipal departments.

The profile, said the Planning Department's Angelito Santos, who served as editor of the project, is comprised of 12 chapters broken down into three chapter units devoted to: history; population and housing; social issues; and business and employment.

There is an overall table of contents, Santos said, as well as a table of contents for each chapter. Many items are cross-referenced, said Santos.

Santos echoed Meade's comments that, besides being a boon to researchers, grant writers and others who need access to detailed information about the city, the profile will also save a great deal of time for city employees, especially in the Planning Department, who are asked to research information on an individual basis time and time again.

A draft of the profile was sent to major organizations in the city 18 months ago. The profile will be constantly updated and updated pages will indicate when the updates were made.

"This profile will really help," said Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP), explaining that ready access to city statistics will speed up the grant writing process and help QCAP obtain resources to serve its low-income clients.

Jack Mather, executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority, was also impressed. He called the profile "an important document for the city" and said it would assist the agency in community housing and development. "It provides us with research which, otherwise, we would have had to do ourselves," Mather said.

Committee To Study Feasibility Move USS Salem To Marina Bay?

A committee will be formed to assess the feasibility of moving the USS Salem from the Fore River Shipyard to the Marina Bay area, Mayor James Sheets announced Tuesday.

"It's an exploratory effort," the mayor said, explaining that the committee would attend to the preliminary work needed in the event the city obtained federal funding to move the ship/museum. "It would take a major source of long-term funding to make such a move."

Although such a decision requires considerable planning and thought, Sheets said, it might be necessitated by the ongoing construction work at the Fore River Bridge.

"I think you're looking at a temporary bridge for 10 years," the mayor said of the state's construction project currently being done by the Middlesex Corp.

The mayor said he feared the dust, dirt, and noise of the project, coupled with what he called an

Slow Start For Election Year

This year's state election year is off to a turtle-slow start on the local front.

Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin are up for re-election.

So far no major name challengers have stepped forward.

Morrissey, however, has an apparent opponent. Dorothy Shea McCormack, 35, of Quincy Shore Drive, an office secretary and Democrat, has taken out nomination papers for the senate seat. But has yet to file them.

Morrissey isn't one to take things for granted. He launched his re-election campaign early at an organizational meeting last month.

And has already taken out nomination papers and filed a set at the City Election Department.

The nomination papers have been available since Feb. 15 but there has been no rush for them for senate and state representative seats.

It's doubtful a big name Democrat will challenge Democrat incumbents.

The question is whether a Republican of political stature is willing to step up to the plate and take a swing. Still early though. Deadline for filing nomination papers is May 9.

By the way if you are thinking of running you need 150 voter signatures on nomination papers for state representative and 300 for state senate.

And if you're thinking bigger, it takes 2,000 valid signatures for Congress and 10,000 for the U.S. Senate to get on the ballot.

MIKE D'AMICO, who was giving it serious thought a few weeks ago, has decided not to run for Norfolk County Clerk of Courts this fall.

Nick Barbadoro, who has held the office for 19 years, isn't expected to seek re-election although he hasn't officially said he won't.

D'Amico says he has decided to stay put in his Ward 4 seat. Serving that ward and his studies in his second year at Suffolk Law School keep him well occupied, he says.

"I will run for re-election next year," he says.

Unless something changes and opportunity knocks.

"If an at-large seat or two opened up, I would give that consideration."

STATE SECRETARY William Galvin was at City Hall last week to present a grant for enhancing the U.S. Census work in target areas of the city. And he stressed the confidentiality of the information collected.

Most households received the short census form. But one of six at random received the long form with 53 questions.

City Council President Paul Harold recalled serving as a city census director in old Ward 3 (South Quincy) when he was a law student.

And remembered the reluctance of some people to give information to the census takers.

In those years, he said, only three questions were asked: previous address, age and occupation.

Harold says there was reluctance on the part of some to answer the question on age. In fact he noted a phenomenon: people were shaving years off their ages from year to year.

When asked their age, some went from age 66 to 61 to 59. Harold reported his findings to then City Clerk John Gillis.

Gillis smiled and concluded: "South Quincy is a great place. The people there are actually getting younger."

MILESTONE: Tony Delmonico, retired Quincy

Park Department mason, marked his 84th birthday last Wednesday at the Quincy Nursing Home on McGrath Highway.

Tony, the father of Jeanne Reardon, the City Council's Clerk of Committees and right arm, retired around 1982.

He helped build the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre, repaired the Abigail Adams Cairn on Penn's Hill and put in the foundation for lights at Adams Field.

Not to mention walls that would give a nuclear bomb a hard time. When he built them, they stayed built.

Friends called him on his birthday to wish him Happy 84.

If you'd like to wish him a belated one, you can reach him at 479-8054.

Best wishes, Tony.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A POSTCARD view of Atlantic Street in North Quincy looking east toward the ocean. It was taken just after the turn of the last century. Until that time, travelers coming from Boston used this street as the main road to Squantum from Hancock Street. And then the Metropolitan Parkway, now Quincy Shore Drive, was built. The street on the right is Newbury Avenue, it had not yet been extended north on the left. The house on the right was on an acre of land and belonged to William B. Glover who was a City of Quincy assessor.

Delahunt, Kerry Commended By U.S. Humane Society

Editor, The Quincy Sun: On behalf of The Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) and its 7.3 million supporters nationwide, I commend Representative William Delahunt and Senator John F. Kerry for achieving perfect scores of 100 on our 1999 HSUS congressional scorecard.

Rep. Delahunt sided with animal protection concerns on all six issues we scored during the First Session of the 106th Congress. He voted to cut funding for an ineffective U.S. Department of Agriculture program that spends millions of the taxpayers' hard-earned dollars — as a subsidy to livestock ranchers — to kill bears, mountain lions, foxes and other predators with inhumane traps, poisons, and aerial gunning. He also voted to restrict the use of cruel and indiscriminate steel-jawed leghold traps and neck snares on National Wildlife Refuges; to protect dolphins from tuna-fishing boats that use dolphin-deadly nets; and to prohibit commerce in videos that depict animal "crushing" and other appalling acts of cruelty. He also cosponsored legislation to combat the gruesome practice of cockfighting and to protect farm animals injured at stockyards. Sen. Kerry, on similar issues before the Senate, sided with animal protection concerns at every opportunity. Sen. Kennedy would have scored 100, but was attending his nephew's funeral on the day the Senate voted on one of the bills included in the scorecard.

Mohandas Gandhi once said, "The greatness of a nation and its moral progress can be judged by the way its animals are treated." Indeed, you can tell a great deal about the compassionate impulses of elected officials by assessing where they stand on animal protection matters.

The HSUS applauds Rep. Delahunt, Sen. Kerry and the many other members of the Massachusetts Congressional delegation for their consistent and principled support for animal protection in this session of Congress.

Quincy Does It Again For MDA

Editor, The Quincy Sun: My Irish eyes are smiling because Quincy has done it again! Thousands of area residents — when they patronized their favorite convenience stores, supermarkets, restaurants and other retail businesses — brought the luck of the Irish to families affected by muscle-wasting diseases. By purchasing and signing the Shamrocks Against Dystrophy mobiles, they turned these high-traffic venues green with good fortune for St. Patrick's Day. Thanks to these caring customers, and all the service personnel who added humanitarian value to cash register transactions by asking patrons, "Would you like to buy a Shamrock to help families served by the Muscular Dystrophy Association," Quincy made an incredible contribution to the 17th annual Shamrocks Against Dystrophy campaign.

I'm sure that St. Patrick is as grateful as are the million Americans served by MDA for the $9 million that Shamrocks raised nationally this year. This sharing of the green has helped speed MDA-funded research at the Children's Hospital, Harvard Medical School, Massachusetts General, and other Boston-area institutions, and around the globe.

By taking part in Shamrocks and other local MDA events, by calling in pledges to the Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon broadcast on WCVB-TV, Channel 5, The Quincy Sun readers continue to make a huge difference for families throughout Massachusetts and across the nation.

On behalf of my niece and others living with neuromuscular diseases, I thank you!
Maureen McGovern

McCain Thanks Quincy

Editor, The Quincy Sun: On behalf of Senator John McCain and the entire staff of the McCain campaign, I would like to thank the people of Quincy for their kindness and hospitality over the course of the last month.

base our successful statewide campaign.

Thank you. We will certainly miss everyone who helped make this primary season such a magical one in the state of Massachusetts.

Quincy's Yesterdays New Raytheon Plant Slated For South Quincy

By PAUL HAROLD

Charles Francis Adams, president of the Raytheon Company and a direct descendant of the Adams presidents, announced the construction of a major manufacturing facility to be built on a 14-acre site on the Quincy-Braintree line.

The facility would have an estimated $4 million payroll, employing up to 1,300 workers. Submarine type electronic tubes, used in modern military electronic equipment, would be fabricated at the new plant.

William O'Connell, executive secretary of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, said he was happy to welcome such a progressive business as Raytheon to the city.

HOWARD JOHNSON DONATES
RADIUM TO HOSPITAL

Dr. Ensio Ronka announced that restaurateur Howard Johnson donated a supply of radium worth $3,000 to the Quincy City Hospital. He said the 100 milligrams, with proper care and management, would last indefinitely, and would be used in the treatment of tumors and cancerous conditions.

"Mr. Johnson has shown fine public spirit in making the gift to the hospital," noted Dr. Ronka.

EAST COAST SHIPWORKERS STRIKE WOULD INCLUDE FORE RIVER

A threatened strike of 50,000 CIO shipyard workers along the East Coast would include the 5,000 workers at Fore River, according to John Grogan. He was the president of the International Union of Marine and Ship Workers of America.

The union had agreed with the government to postpone the strike to prevent serious disruption to the national defense effort. The strike vote was made in protest of the rejection by the Wage and Stabilization Board of the wage hike sought from Bethlehem Steel.

Donald Edmonston, former president of Local Five, was a member of the negotiating team.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Fettucine & Trimmings

Can you believe it's finally Spring? And of course, the Lenten Season is here, and time for some of us to take stock, and conjure up some meatless meals.

Here is one I cooked over the weekend because we enjoy it even when it isn't Lent!

Fettucine with trimmings

- 1 box fettucine
- 8 ounces minced clams (fresh is better)
- two bags fresh spinach (trim the stems)
- 1/2 teaspoon red pepper
- 1 can artichoke hearts (drained and cut in three pieces)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 garlic cloves

1 tablespoons margarine (or butter) Romano or parmesan grated cheese.

First, in the hot oil and margarine, sauté the garlic, and add the minced clams (with juice) or whole clams if desired. (If you use fresh whole clams, you have to steam and chuck them.

After this is blended, add the artichoke hearts and the red pepper. Set aside.

Boil the pasta, and when it is almost done, add the spinach in the same water. Drain and place in a serving dish. Toss with clam mixture and sprinkle with romano or parmesan cheese.

(P.S.) A can of prepped clam sauce can also be used for those whose time is precious!

Conflict Resolution Assembly At Merrymount School Today

James Vetter, founder of the Cambridge-based company GrowthWorks, demonstrates five ways children can turn conflict into cooperation in his presentation of "Talk It Out" today (Thursday) at the Merrymount School, 4 Agawam Rd.

The school assembly program for grades K-5 is being sponsored by the Merrymount School PTO.

Using acting and audience participation, Vetter shows the students effective ways of coping with conflict, including the five steps students can use to keep conflicts from escalating: Stop, Step Back, Cool Down, Apologize, and Talk It Out.

Audience participation is encouraged as students act out peaceful solutions to difficult situations and learn breathing techniques and brainstorming strategies to help calm the next playground quarrel.

Vetter is a Yale-trained actor who travels throughout New England and beyond giving presentations to parents, students, teachers, and others on the topics of conflict resolution and social skills development.

MDC Awards $750,000 Contract For Wollaston Beach

Rizzo Associates of Natick has been awarded a $750,000 contract by the MDC for the redesign and improvement of Wollaston Beach.

The firm will start a design phase to focus on site improvements, landscape enhancement, traffic and public safety, water quality and drainage, beach sanding, and other issues related to the beach, said Doug Gutro, a member of the Wollaston Beach Task Force and vice chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin, chairman of the Wollaston Beach Task Force, called news of the contract award "long awaited but encouraging" and said it would be discussed, along with several other projects underway for Wollaston Beach, at the task force's next meeting at the end of April.

Although actual physical improvements will not take place for two years, Gutro said the contract award is a significant milestone in the MDC's "Back to the Beaches" promise of the early 1990's.

"It's been almost 10 years since the 'Back to the Beaches' campaign was initiated, so this (the contract) is somewhat of a relief," Gutro said. "We're moving in the right direction."

Gutro said he was also pleased that the recommendations of the Wollaston Beach Task Force were heeded and that local residents were involved in the process.

Gutro added that he himself was on the review committee which selected Rizzo Associates for the project.

State Gives Local Groups Funds For Census Outreach

Secretary of State William F. Galvin, the state's liaison for Census 2000, joined Mayor James Sheets and state Senator Michael Morrissey at City Hall recently to present the Atlantic Neighborhood Center and Germantown Neighborhood Center (in conjunction with the South Shore YMCA) with Census 2000 grant checks of $7,500 each. The grant checks were presented to the two non-profit organizations to assist in their efforts to ensure an accurate count in this year's census.

The grants will be used to target minority communities primarily in areas where, in previous years, individuals had been undercounted.

In addition, the monies will provide each of the non-profit local organizations with resources to aggressively identify those individuals and households in need of assistance filling out the appropriate data on the census questionnaires and explain the purpose and benefits of the federal census in their own language.

"This is the time to make sure the job gets done," Galvin told the audience. He explained that, since Massachusetts did away with a costly five-year census of its own, Census 2000 would serve as the only official count, deciding political representation from the ward all the way to Congress.

The census also determines many federal allocations for such things as roads, schools, and job programs.

Galvin urged residents to mail their forms in now, warning listeners that Census 2000 officials will stop counting forms sent via mail on April 12 and move to the costly and inefficient procedure of "enumeration" (a door-to-door head count).

Mayor Sheets praised the state's first-ever grants to assist in the census, saying the program "makes it more convenient for people who have questions about the census, those who need help."

Statewide, the new program provides $900,000 in census outreach.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, who is spearheading census efforts in the city and hopes for a count at or near 90,000, said Galvin's proactive efforts on behalf of the census was quite unique. "At no time in the past 20 years has groundwork and preparation on this scale been done before and Secretary Galvin deserves a good deal of the credit for that," Shea said.

21 FRANKLIN ST., QUINCY

Past Owner Clarifies Land Deal For QHS Site

Clarifying statements made at the March 20 City Council meeting concerning the land deal for the new Quincy High School, Atlantic Development's Donald J. MacKinnon said that his company's 1997 purchase price of $1 million for 21 acres of land from CJ Partnership was indeed accurate.

MacKinnon also said the "confidential agreement" he referred to at the meeting dealt not with the purchase price but was a partnership agreement between MacKinnon's Faxon Properties and CJ Partnership, the company that sold Faxon the property.

MacKinnon clarified his statements after consulting with the law office of Goodwin, Proctor, and Hoar of Boston, who advised him that there was a clear separation between the purchase price and the subsequent agreement between the two private parties.

The confidential agreement concerns shares of proceeds from future sales of the sub-divided parcels, including the February 1998 purchase by the city of almost 15 acres of said property for $3.5 million.

Essentially, CJ Partnership receives a share of future sales of the sub-divided property if sales total over $1 million but nothing if sales are less than $1 million.

The land in question is located off Quincy Avenue adjacent to Faxon Park.

At the time of the council meeting MacKinnon called a Patriot Ledger story concerning the $1 million sale price "inaccurate" and said additional sums were paid subject to a confidential agreement.

A study of the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds indicates no knowledge of any confidential agreement. In fact, failure to recite the full price of any sale of property is illegal according to Statute 183, Section 6 of state law.

Registry documents, provided on request by John Curran, an attorney and technical assistant at the Registry, reveal a $1 million purchase of 21 acres by Faxon Properties from CJ Partnership on December 12, 1997. Faxon paid a $50,000 downpayment and took out a $950,000 note which was discharged Feb. 5 of 1998 to CJ Properties and recorded at the Registry March 20 that same year.

CJ Properties paid a $4,560 deed excise tax on the December 12 transaction, in keeping with the state's excise tax rate of $4.56 per $1,000.

In February of 1998 Faxon Properties sold nearly 15 acres of the property to the city of Quincy for $3.5 million.

MacKinnon said the 1997 transfer fully complies with Statute 183, Section 6 regarding "full consideration" and that both companies incurred significant risk on the deal.

More importantly, said MacKinnon, CJ Properties sold what to them was a landlocked property to which MacKinnon added over 2,000 feet of roadway from Falls Blvd. along with water, fill, and utility improvements. Over $2 million in private money was invested at the intersection of Quincy Avenue and Falls Blvd. alone, he said.

"What the city bought was completely different from what we bought," MacKinnon said, noting that the city approached his company and not vice versa.

MacKinnon also said his company's development of Roche Bros. and Wal-Mart indicate an interest in that area years before the city considered building a high school there.

"Really, we thought we were being the good guys," MacKinnon said, explaining that his company scrapped plans to construct retirement communities on the site after the city expressed interest, not wanting to be an obstacle in what was obviously a major plan for the city. MacKinnon said he was also aware the land could have been taken by eminent domain anyway.

Finally, MacKinnon pointed out that Faxon sold the land to the city for $300,000 less than the city's own appraisal and that the property had already increased in value. "We'd gladly buy it back," MacKinnon said.

Ron Adams Honored As Sun Citizen Of Year

his dedicated students."

Sun Editor Robert Bosworth presented Adams with a special framed Page One of The Sun telling of his selection for the award and listing the names of the 37 others nominated by Sun readers. Copies were distributed to those attending.

"This city gave us two presidents and the list of recipients of The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year award really underscores how this city is a special place," said Congressman Delahunt.

Delahunt recalled meeting a Broad Meadows School graduate involved in the effort to help people "living in devastating impoverished nations" who said she would not have been involved were it not for Adams.

"What a wonderful legacy. He (Adams) is what we are all about. We don't have to look to Washington, we don't have to look to the political world, we don't have to look toward athletics for heroes. All we have to do is look upon ourselves.

"Ron Adams, you are my hero. What you have done for this community, our schools and your family is extraordinary. I'm here simply to say thank you."

Mayor Sheets called Adams "a hero to the old and young alike" and "a great educator" and praised him for building character in his students.

"As mayor, I want to say in behalf of all the people in this city, we are extraordinarily proud of you, your students and all that you have done to make life better for so many young people. Thank you for being who you are and what you have done and for affecting the lives of so many young people."

School Supt. Eugene Creedon said, "Ron is an outstanding teacher on the staff of a very exceptional school.

"Ron guarantees today, he guaranteed yesterday and will guarantee tomorrow that educational birthright to each and every one of his students.

"Ron Adams is the personification of the quiet, devoted and skillful teacher working out with his students the nature and laws of life, the ever increasing demand of local citizenship but also global citizenship.

"May your quiet dedication and caring teaching continue to inspire and challenge each one of us who are proud to have you as a colleague."

City Council President Harold, noting that he is a graduate of Broad Meadows, presented Adams with a City Council commendation and said: "What you've done is really globalize the discussion and opened young people's eyes to the impact they could have worldwide," Harold said.

"You have been an outstanding educator for 25 years. Thank you for your distinguished service as a dedicated professional. You are a credit to the school department in the City of Quincy."

Senator Morrissey presented Adams with a Senate citation recognizing his accomplishments during his 25 years and congratulating him on receiving the Sun award.

"Ron Adams, like the other (past) award recipients, have made a difference in the quality of life in our community," Morrissey said. "They have really done things to set this community apart and make it special."

Representative Tobin, presenting a House of Representatives citation on behalf of himself and Reps. Bruce Ayers and Ron Mariano, said:

"Teaching is not an easy profession. I don't know how you do it and I don't know how you do it so well. What we do know is that we're so lucky to have you.

"When you look at all the past recipients you realize they are all just solid citizens. I think every teacher in Quincy ought to be proud that you have been selected not only as a teacher of the year but also for this Citizen of the Year (award)."

Letters of congratulations were received from two past recipients of the award who were unable to attend.

Martin Finnegan, 1988 recipient for coordinating Project Impact in the public schools and now living in California, wrote:

"Ron Adams has dedicated his entire life to helping others and instilling in his students their opportunity to do the same. What a tremendous legacy and example he leaves for others."

Steve Cantelli, Lincoln-Hancock School teacher who received the award in 1992 for his innovative work with his fifth grade students, wrote:

"The Quincy Sun has made an excellent choice. Your work and activism in human rights issues has enriched the lives of us all.

"You have shown that Quincy students have the energy, imagination and intelligence to make a difference in their community and in the world.

"And you have shown that nobody can affect our city's future in a more positive way than that of a good teacher. I am very proud to be a colleague of yours."

Adams was nominated for the award by a former student, Evelyn McInnes who still participates in the campaigns and was among his students invited to Sunday's reception.

In nominating him, she said in part:

"He's so encouraging, hard working and dedicated and that's what inspires us to keep working. And he's so modest. . . He always insists the students should get all the credit. . ."

In his acceptance of the award, Adams thanked The Sun, Evelyn and the panel of judges and colleagues he said he has learned from the past 25 years. And, he said in part:

"I am humbled and very proud to be selected as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year."

He asked Broad Meadows students present to stand and be recognized and later called them to the podium to share in the award.

"These students have channeled their idealism into activism, resulting in so many breath taking projects," he said. "If I am Citizen of the Year, then they are Citizens of the Decade."

At Broad Meadows where he is a seventh grade Language Arts and Social Studies teacher, Adams said:

"We challenge students to carefully look around the community, local or global. We remind students that they've already learned the ideals they know from the Constitution . . . how we are supposed to treat each other.

"As they travel or as they read the newspaper or watch the TV news and they discover a situation that is not fair, they have the responsibility and the power to do something about it.

"I encourage them to write a perfect business letter, polite and strong to someone, somewhere, who might work with them to make it fair. Every student has to write such a letter. Mailing it is optional."

Adams cited some of the campaigns his students have been involved in.

Since the 1980s the students have been taking on issues ranging from long overdue recognition for the women who helped build the ships at Fore River shipyard during World War II to world poverty and child labor abuse which have taken them to Washington, D.C. to testify before Congress and to Geneva, Switzerland to attend a world conference on child labor abuse.

It started with a letter student Margaret McLean wrote in 1989 to Mayor James Sheets and others suggesting the creation of a Quincy Naval and Shipbuilding Museum. It became a reality in 1994 when the city obtained the USS Salem as the centerpiece.

The kids haven't stopped since.

The project closest to their hearts involved Iqbal Masih, a 12-year-old former child labor slave from Pakistan who visited and spoke with Adams's students in 1994 asking for their help in ending child labor. On his return to Pakistan he was murdered on Easter Sunday in 1995. His murderer has never been caught.

THE ADAMS FAMILY -- It was a proud day as Ron Adams was honored as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year. Joining him and his wife, Patricia, here are sons Kevin, Ronald and Michael Adams. Other members of the family also attended the reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center Sunday.

The Broad Meadows students, saddened by Iqbal's death, wanted to do something for him. They decided a school in his name in Pakistan would be a fitting memorial to him and help fight child labor abuse there.

They spearheaded a fundraising drive here and on the Internet which raised $147,000 to build a five-room school.

It was completed in 1996 and named "A School for Iqbal." At last report it has 288 students ages 4 to 14.

The Broad Meadows School banner was delivered to Pakistan by Paul Harold and hangs prominently on a wall in the school.

The students are now net-working with students in other states to raise money for education programs in poor countries.

More than $30,000 has been realized to help educate 500 children in Haiti through the year 2002. They are now raising money for a similar program in El Salvador.

The program is known as "Operation Day's Work" in which students work and perform community service in return for money pledged to the program. The Broad Meadows students were recently honored by the Peace Corps for their work in the program.

A native of South Boston and a graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Boston, Adams is married to the former Patricia Sullivan of Houghton Neck and they now live in Weymouth.

They have three sons: Ron, a recent graduate of Northeastern University; Michael, a photography lab manager and Kevin, a junior at Boston College High School.

Adams believes that all children deserve world-class education and is giving his students a head start to it.

His students are now campaigning to get a label on clothing and other products sold in the United States that clearly says: "Guaranteed Child Labor Free."

"Presenting a teacher with The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year award honors all teachers, all students. . . honors all who listen to the fragile young voices of our youngest citizens," Adams told those attending Sunday's reception.

"When adults show a belief in young people, then those young people believe even more in themselves. Thank you judges for showing a belief in these young people."

His students now are watching the news on TV and reading newspapers looking for other social wrongs whether they are across the street or across the ocean.

And when they find something wrong, he is sure, they will want to do something about it. And will!

"And I am sure," said Henry Bosworth, "Ron will be right there -- guiding them, challenging them--and proudly applauding them."

Sun Citizen Of Year Ceremonies On Ch. 3

The ceremonies honoring Ronald Adams as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Sunday will be shown on Quincy Access Television Channel 3 tonight (Thursday) at 8 p.m.

AMONG OFFICIALS ATTENDING the reception honoring Ron Adams as The Sun Citizen of the Year and shown with him here were, from the left, School Committeewoman Linda Stice, City Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley, Mayor James Sheets, Congressman William Delahunt, state Senator Michael Morrissey, School Committeewoman Christine Cedrone and City Council President Paul Harold.

SENIOR LIVING

by Laura Andrus, Director of Marketing

A POSITIVE OUTLOOK

Health experts are convinced of living long, to understand something that most people have in common - being joyful, resilient and content helps make us both happy and healthy. A positive outlook protects against stress, which is the pervasive tension linked to heart disease and strokes. Thus, those who have positive outlooks are likely to live longer. In fact, researchers from Harvard Medical School have found that women 100 years and older share a common trait: They are not plagued by the negative feelings of anger, guilt, fear love. We're at Four Seaport and sadness. Fortunately, a healthy attitude can be cultivated the same way that physical fitness can. Indeed, those who are mentally and physically fit have the best chance of living long, More and more, we are learning how mental health has an impact on physical health. The good news is that we can have some effect on our attitudes simply by the choices we make in response to the challenges we face. MARINA PLACE, a senior living residence offering both assisted living and independent living, is just a short drive to Quincy, Boston and the South Shore. We make every effort to support your efforts to stay in touch with those who you feelings of anger, guilt, fear love. We're at Four Seaport and sadness. Fortunately, a healthy attitude can be cultivated the same way that physical fitness can. Indeed, those who are mentally and physically fit have the best

P.S. You can train your attitude simply by altering healthy expectations.

Quincy 2000 Loan Pool Members Tour New Tortilla Factory

Members of the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool toured Harbar Corporation's new tortilla factory on Broad St. in Quincy.

Formerly a bowling alley, the facility has been transformed into a state-of-the-art tortilla factory by Galvin Construction Company of Quincy. The business, which makes a dozen varieties of flavored flat breads, known as "wrappys," in addition to standard corn and flour tortillas, tortilla chips, and tostadas, received a $150,000 loan from the Loan Pool to assist with its recent relocation to Quincy from Jamaica Plain.

"It is a real positive to have a new manufacturing facility in Quincy," said Jeff Glashow of FleetBoston, the agent bank in the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool. "There is tremendous value added through job creation, which strengthens both the City and regional economic activity."

Owner Heidi Hartung said that Harbar currently employs 29 people and plans to create a dozen new jobs over the next few years.

"We are very happy to be a part of the Quincy community," said Hartung. "We chose Quincy because of its pro-business atmosphere and easy accessibility to both Boston and the South Shore. Quincy 2000 has been involved with our project from the beginning, helping us with permitting and zoning issues and giving us a loan to buy new equipment, which will help us create new jobs."

Banks in the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool are: Century Bank & Trust, Citizens Bank, Colonial Federal Savings, Eastern Bank, FleetBoston, Rockland Trust, and South Shore Savings Bank.

19 NQHS Students Take Part In Hawaii Study Program

Nineteen North Quincy High School seniors took part in the Close-Up Pacific Basin Program in Honolulu, Hawaii.

The program brings students from across the United States together to study politics and government in the Pacific region. Participants were from Massachusetts, Michigan, Washington, Mississippi, North Dakota, Montana, Minnesota and Puerto Rico.

The students stayed in hotel that overlooked Waikiki Beach. Days were filled with a schedule of tours, lectures, workshops and a little beach time. One of the highlights of the trip was hiking Diamond Head Crater. To reach the top, the students had to climb up a series of tunnels, staircases and a rocky trail. The visit to the Pearl Harbor Memorial proved to be the to a moving experience, nearly brought some students to tears.

All participants took part in a simulation game. Students were divided into groups of 12, joining with students from different parts of the U.S. Each group was assigned to Pacific Basin country, and all of the groups had to engage in international relations. Groups could sign treaties, drop bombs, lower taxes, create armies, write propaganda and even declare war. Students felt like they were really taking part in negotiations between rival nations.

Another highlight was a Polynesian show that included dancing and fire throwing. The audience watched in amazement while men threw, ate, danced with and even sat on fire. Students also got to enjoy the giant waves of the Pacific. Groups of North Quincy students tried surfing and snorkeling. Others enjoyed playing in the sand on shore.

Students learned about Hawaiian culture, nature and about their own physical capabilities. Tom Bourque and Dan Regan, North Quincy High School history teachers, organized the trip and helped the students with fundraising.

O'Connell, Kellie Whalen, Janelle Hersey, Eric Foley, Neil Rosenburger, John Zuffrante, Kristin Coughlin, Joseph Flynn, Brian Deshler, Annie Shields, Franci Ronayne, Mieke Van Halsema, Erin Johnson, William O'Toole, Tom Bourque, history teacher. New CEO Named At Medical Center

A former healthcare management consultant for Coopers & Lybrand, Schuster spent five years working with financially distressed acute and managed care organizations to help them improve performance through more effective clinical and business management practices. While this experience helped her to excel as a financial manager, her ability to later orchestrate turnarounds at Tenet was never at the expense of a patient, employee and/or physician satisfaction.

Schuster won consistently high leadership and performance ratings in both union and non-unionized settings, and is highly regarded by physicians in the SVHS system. The quality of patient care in her facilities is evidenced by high marks from the JCAHO and the Department of Public Health.

Schuster serves on the Hospice Board of VNA Care Network, and as treasurer of Oak Hill Community Development Center, Up-sala Assisted Living Center. She also serves on the steering committee of Women in Healthcare Management.

A registered nurse,

Schuster holds an MBA with honors from the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business.

She succeeds Jeffrey Doran as CEO at the Quincy Medical Center who resigned in January.

Doran, who was named CEO in October, 1997, said he was stepping down to allow new leadership to guide Quincy Medical Center.

The Medical Center became a private institution last fall after the municipal Quincy Hospital affiliated with Boston Medical Center.

Committee To Consider Moving USS Salem To Marina Bay

"encroachment" by the project on the Salem site, would negatively affect the ship's ability to attract visitors.

Sheets said the 5-7 person committee would include a marine engineer and someone skilled in finance. Committee members would consider such topics as possible locations, dredging, overall cost, and mooring. "There are a lot of questions," said Sheets.

Although Sheets emphasized the preliminary nature of such a committee, he did say the Marina Bay location might offer the Salem "more exposure" for its attractions.

The Salem, a Des Moines class heavy cruiser built at the Fore River Shipyard, is the centerpiece of the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

When discussing the concerns posed by the Fore River Bridge Reconstruction Project, Sheets mentioned the possibility of having music concerts on the Salem's quarterdeck this summer.

In Visit To Beechwood School Burmington Pushes For Education Funding

By CRAIG SALTERS

Senate President Thomas Birmingham had two reasons for his recent visit to the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

First, to see firsthand how far education reform in Massachusetts had come since the Education Reform Act of 1993.

Second, to hammer home just how much work still needs to be done.

Along the way, the senate president pushed hard for the senate's version of proposed funding for local schools next year, which calls for Massachusetts schools to receive a $245 million increase from last year's budget, $100 million more than Governor Cellucci's proposal.

At stake for Quincy Public Schools, Birmingham said, is a $1.9 million increase from current year spending, $480,000 more than the governor's proposal.

"This is truly a moral obligation," Birmingham said of the state's seven-year old commitment to transform public education. "We have an awesome and awful responsibility to give kids everywhere a chance and, guess what, that costs money."

Birmingham, along with state Senator Michael Morrissey, Mayor James Sheets, Supt. Eugene Creedon, Rep. Ronald Mariano (also a member of the School Committee), and School Committee Member Linda Stice, toured Beechwood Knoll classrooms led by Kathleen Morris, the school's principal.

Birmingham said it was "very gratifying" to see how Beechwood Knoll teachers were using state-funded intensive tutoring, summer-school, and after-school programs --using recent MCAS results as a diagnostic tool -- to help students prepare for the MCAS tests.

The MCAS tests will be used as a component for high school graduation beginning with the class of 2003.

The tour featured a stop in Nancy Barron's Grade 4 class where students used hands-on, investigative work to identify various minerals, a class weakness Barron had discovered by poring over MCAS results. "I'm seeing the results right now," said Barron, referring to the MCAS tests and the additional attention some of her students received. "I'm seeing a glimmer of hope."

The tour also made stops at Brenda Shore's Grade 4 class, where students were involved in "brainstorming" and language skills; Jennifer Hibbard's Grade 1 class, where students practiced reading aloud from creative writing assignments; Jennifer Bohacs' Grade 1 class, where students were doing reading exercises; and a Grade 4 class taught by Marcia McCarthy, where the children studied the concepts of "personification" and "abstract versus concrete nouns."

According to Supt. Creedon, the Quincy Public Schools currently have a $180,000 allocation for MCAS tutorial programs, including "Prep for Success" and "Summer Scene." The programs target students who have demonstrated difficulties attaining MCAS standards.

The senate's proposed budget would double the state's MCAS support service grants from $20 million to $40 million.

In addition, the senate budget would increase state aid for local schools by $187.2 million and appropriate $35.4 million to reduce K-3 class size and provide full-day kindergarten. The proposed budget also calls for $2.5 million to create a new program for disruptive students.

Morrissey, who took time from the tour to chat with his nephew Patrick, a 4th grader at the school, welcomed the senate president's visit and expressed support for the senate's proposed budget.

"This visit was a great opportunity for us to remember what is really at stake when we're talking about education policy and funding at the State House," Morrissey said. "Bringing the Senate President to Quincy and focusing on our schools is something we'll remember as we work on the budget and continue to champion increased funding for education."

The House budget will be completed in the coming weeks and then the Senate budget will be finalized. A compromise version of the two budgets will subsequently be submitted to Governor Cellucci.

Sales Of Multifamily Homes Rise 15.5% In 1999

The state's multifamily housing market continued to show sharp improvement in 1999 as sales of two-, three-, and four-family homes increased 15.5 percent during the past year, rising from 6,500 units closed in 1998 to 7,508 last year, according to data compiled by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR).

The annual increase reflects an eight-year trend of steady sales growth in the multifamily market, with last year's sales gain the largest since 1994 when sales rose nearly 27 percent in the Bay State.

"It's been a record year for home sales in Massachusetts, and that includes the multifamily market," said MAR President Fred Meyer. "Sales of multifamily homes have been particularly strong among single, first-time homebuyers and low-to-moderate income families. These groups are finding the additional income generated from two-, three-, and four-family properties makes them a more affordable entree into homeownership than a detached single-family home. The multifamily market also is quite popular with the state's burgeoning immigrant population because of the unique opportunities these homes offer households with their extended families."

Fueled by limited inventory in the single-family market, a strong rental housing market, and more flexible down payment requirements for owner-occupied two- and three-family dwellings, the multifamily market remained extremely active throughout 1999. Sales of 2-4 family homes outpaced 1998 closing volume in all four quarters, rising 29.5 percent in the first quarter, 17.4 percent in the second quarter, 8.7 percent in the third quarter and 11.6 percent in the final quarter of 1999 compared to the same periods a year earlier.

Multifamily sales also improved in six of seven market areas last year. Annual sales gains exceeded the statewide rate of growth for 1999 in the greater Fall River-New Bedford (26.4%), western Mass. (20.7%) and South Shore (16.2%) regions, and improved a healthy 13-14 percent over 1998 sales levels in the greater Boston (14.6%), Worcester County (14.4%) and Northeast (13%) regions.

The MAR also found the total dollar volume for multifamily home sales increased 30.8 percent in 1999, climbing from $1,014,826,863 one year ago to $1,327,532,430 in 1999. While specific price comparisons are not available for the two-, three- and four-family home categories separately, the increase in dollar volume indicated property values for multifamily 2-4 family homes increased 6-10 percent in the North-east, South Shore and Central regions last year, an even healthier 17-18 percent in greater Boston and Cape Cod, and a robust 31.3 percent in southeastern Massachusetts. Prices in the state's four western counties remained relatively stable, rising just 2 percent.

Homes rose, on average, 13.3 percent across the state last year to an average price of $175,816, an increase that is consistent with average selling price gains in the single-family market over the past year.

Furthermore, regional dollar volume data suggests the average selling price of

Insider Tips On Exterior Painting

Either way, before you start, there are a few things you should keep in mind.

- Power wash the siding with a cleaning solution before you paint. Like any other surfaces, vinyl siding needs to be thoroughly cleaned to ensure good paint adhesion. For an effective solution to run through your chemical injector, combine one gallon of bleach and one gallon of Mi-T-M All-Purpose cleaner to every three gallons of water.

- Use a 100 percent acrylic, exterior-grade primer and finish coat. Acrylics will flex with the aluminum or vinyl siding as it expands and contracts during seasonal temperature changes. Highly recommended for both vinyl and aluminum siding is Duron's Siding in a Can, which is formulated to resist cracking, fading, chalking and blistering. It also includes a mildew-resistant component to inhibit the growth of mildew on dried paint film. The product is available in exterior acrylic satin and semi-gloss, as well as exterior acrylic primer (white).

- Only paint with light colors. Darker colors absorb the sun's heat more readily, eventually causing siding to warp or buckle.

"Recently we were selling property in Weymouth and we called the Jack Conway Co. because Conway is a very reputable name in real estate and we know that they had been in business for a long time. Donna Williams of the Quincy office was very well informed and was able to answer all of our questions and offer us much needed advice. She was an expert in pricing the property to the market, setting up a marketing plan that worked, keeping the signs in place and keeping in touch with us on an on-going basis. She even arranged to have Conway Financial contact us about the mortgage we would need when we purchased our new house. Everything worked out just fine and we thank Donna and the Jack Conway Co. and also Conway Financial for making everything work so easily."

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Interceptive Orthodontics

By DR. FRED ATTARZADEH

The goals of interceptive orthodontics are

- 1) to develop both the upper and the lower jaws sufficiently to accommodate all of the permanent teeth and
- 2) to correctly relate the upper and lower jaws to each other.

Children sometimes exhibit early signs of jaw problems as they grow and develop. An upper and lower jaw that is growing too much or not enough, or its too wide, too narrow, or too crooked can be recognized at an early age. If children over four years of age have these jaw discrepancies, they are usually candidates for early orthodontic/orthopedic evaluation and treatment.

Because children are growing rapidly, they can benefit enormously from an early (interceptive) phase of orthodontic/orthopedic treatment. Orthodontic appliances can be used to correct the jaw shape and direct the growth toward an ideal relationship between the upper and lower jaws. A good foundation can be established thereby providing adequate room for eruption of all the permanent teeth.

Early interceptive treatment can prevent:

- 1) The later removal of permanent teeth to correct overcrowding.
- 2) Surgical procedures to align the upper and lower jaws.

Interceptive treatment can also decrease the time necessary for the second phase treatment. Leaving a malocclusion untreated until all of the permanent teeth erupt could result in a jaw discrepancy too severe to allow achievement of an ideal result with braces alone.

Orthodontic/orthopedic records will be necessary to determine the diagnosis, treatment plan, type of appliances needed, duration of the treatment, and frequency of visits. Records consist of models of the teeth, radiographs, photographs and clinical evaluation.

Dr. Fred Attarzadeh is a Tufts University graduate and is in private practice of orthodontics at 1050 Hancock St., Quincy, MA. For more information, call 617-471-4600.

Trees: They're Good For Your Health

April 22 Is Earth Day 2000

For the past 30 years, Earth Day has been the annual occasion to focus attention on our country's environmental concerns. Millions upon millions of people have participated in all kinds of activities to celebrate the environment.

And it's fitting that over the past three decades Earth Day has gone global, with activities ranging from field trips in Morocco to clean-ups, lectures, and other special events right here in Massachusetts. But most people can observe Earth Day without ever leaving home. For starters, all one has to do is consider and appreciate the many benefits coming to us from a single healthy tree.

"Trees perform a variety of functions in the landscape, all of which affect the environment, the quality of our lives, our health and even our pocketbooks," notes George Santos, M.D., chairman of the Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Medical Society. "They're an important part of the local and national fight against air pollution." Trees act as noise buffers, light shields, and impediments to runoff and soil erosion, he says. They also perform a variety of environmental functions, reducing air pollution, helping to control climate, and limiting water pollution.

Trees are natural air filters. The leaves capture harmful particulates like dust, soot, and pollen and remove them from the air. A 1994 study in metropolitan Chicago showed that trees remove as much as 234 tons of particulate matter from the air per year.

They also improve air quality by releasing oxygen. Dr. Santos explains that in the process of photosynthesis, trees and other plants remove carbon dioxide and other pollutants—including nitrogen dioxide, sulfur dioxide and carbon monoxide—from the atmosphere and release oxygen back into the air. One healthy tree absorbs over 20 pounds of carbon dioxide each year. The carbon is stored in the tree (wood is about 45 percent carbon) and the oxygen is released back into the atmosphere.

Trees provide a natural way to shade and cool our homes during the summer and during the winter shield our homes from the cold. Deciduous (leaf-shedding) trees planted on the south, west and east will protect a structure from the direct rays of the sun in summer. In winter, without their leaves, they allow most of the sun's energy to reach the house. Evergreens to the north and west can block out cold winter winds. This reduces consumption of energy for heating and cooling, conserving the world's energy-producing resources and reducing pollution emissions from power-generating facilities.

Dr. Santos stresses that trees and green landscapes have a profound effect on our health. It's widely accepted today that spending a day in the woods or lunchtime in the park can leave us feeling invigorated and refreshed, ready to return to the pace of the day. Trees in natural settings can relax us, lower our heart rate, and reduce stress.

And they have a direct effect on health care costs. Dr. Santos cites a study of patients in a Pennsylvania hospital, where researchers found a marked difference between the convalescence times of patients with views of a landscaped area and those with no landscaped views, or views of a brick wall. Their research showed that patients with a view of trees spent only 7.9 days convalescing and required less potent medications, compared to 8.7 days for those overlooking the non-landscaped area. With eight percent fewer days spent in the hospital, the national health cost savings could easily be as large as several hundred million dollars a year! Quite a feat for something we too often take for granted.

Quincy's Noble Hopes Interim Football Post Turns Permanent

Standard Interview Process Begins

By CHRIS POISSON

When Bob Noble was named the interim head coach of the Quincy High School football team last August he said he was fortunate and added, "I'll try not to go anywhere."

If Noble plans to return to the gridiron for his second season as head coach, he'll have to survive the interviewing process.

The head coach position, which was given to Noble for one year, will be posted this week with a decision expected to be made sometime in May.

"We have to post the position according to QEA [Quincy Educational Association] rules," said Quincy athletic director Ed Miller. "It has nothing to do with Bob Noble."

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm still the head coach," Noble said. "Until I'm told differently, I'm going to continue to act as head coach. No one has told me anything contrary."

"I knew at one point I was going to have to go through the interviewing process. Am I going to apply? Absolutely. Do I feel I'm the leading candidate? I'd like to think so."

After 14 years as assistant coach, Noble took over the reigns when Peter Chella stepped down to become the assistant principal at Point-Webster. Because Chella's decision to resign came too close to the start of the season, Quincy opted for interim status rather than go through the lengthy process of conducting interviews.

After the season, the plan was to interview candidates for the position and Noble knew that.

"This is the proper procedure," Noble said. "It didn't matter if I had gone 10-0 or 0-10, nothing was going to be different."

The Presidents finished 1-10, losing their first 10 games before putting it all together in the season finale, a 21-13 win over North Quincy in the Thanksgiving Day game.

Although Quincy had a dismal season record-wise, it could have been a .500 team or better. But the season was full of too many heartbreakers, most noticeably a 23-21 loss to Randolph on a last-second field goal and a 22-21 loss to Falmouth after holding a 21-0 lead.

Then there was Silver Lake, Plymouth North, Bridgewater-Raynham and Plymouth South, where Quincy was in striking distance but made crucial mistakes or gave up a big play late in the game that cost them.

If Quincy catches the break or comes up with that defensive stop or makes that one big play, then the outcome changes in those six games. But Quincy simply did not have the athletes the other schools had.

"Regardless of the record, I enjoyed last season," Noble said. "It was a tremendous experience. I want to do it again. I have a plan to turn things around. It was implemented last year. But it's not going to change over night. It takes time."

Sacred Heart Girls Cadet Champions

The Sacred Heart girls Cadet B basketball team recently capped off its season with a 44-40 triumph over Gate of Heaven-South Boston for the South Shore Cadet championship.

Sacred Heart finished the regular season with a 14-2 mark and will be one of five Sacred Heart teams to travel to Tarrytown, N.Y. for an upcoming tournament.

With several late lead changes, Sacred Heart was able to pull it out down the stretch. Bonnie Hirtle led all scorers with 18 points and Michelle Boyd added 8, including a clutch free throw near the game. Jamie Mullen and Lauren Whitman added offensive power off the bench.

The victory was a team effort as Sacred Heart used its speed and quickness to apply a second-half press against its larger opponent. Defensive specialists Michele Reppucci, Jamie Clifford, Breanne Therrien and Kara Culgin caused Gate of Heaven to force shots. Lisa Fitzgerald and Robin Fatseas controlled the boards.

Holly O'Brien Marathon Run To Benefit Outward Bound

Holly O'Brien of Quincy will run in the 104th Boston Marathon on April 17 to raise money for the Thompson Island Outward Bound Education Center.

O'Brien is part of a 25-person team which has set a goal of raising $100,000 in donations to benefit the non-profit organization which provides outdoor adventure-based educational programs for the youth of Greater Boston.

"I have developed a passion for running and it is my hope that I can use this passion to help others," said O'Brien. "By running for Thompson Island Outward Bound, I am directly supporting the young people who need it most."

Donations to Thompson Island Outward Bound help fund scholarships for deserving young people, mainly middle school-aged, to take part in Outward Bound expeditions and school-based activities.

Through summer programs, the Willauer Middle School for boys, and partnerships with public and private schools, approximately 3,000 adolescents each year participate in programs designed to promote self-esteem, leadership, teamwork, compassion and service. Outward Bound challenges students to go beyond their perceived limits and achieve more than they thought possible.

Located just one mile from downtown Boston in the Boston Harbor Island National Park Area, Thompson Island Outward Bound is one of seven Outward Bound schools and centers in the United States.

Annual Sign-Up Period For Medicare

By LAURIE ZASTROW

If you are eligible for Part B Medicare medical insurance but haven't signed up, you can do so now during the annual "general enrollment period for Medicare" -- Jan. 1 until March 31.

Beneficiaries with Part A Medicare hospital insurance who originally decided not to sign up for the Part B medical insurance when they first become eligible can take advantage during this three-month period. It is also an opportunity for those who had Part B coverage at one time but dropped out and now wish to enroll again.

Part B Medicare medical insurance helps pay for doctors' visits, out-patient hospital treatment and other medical services and supplies not covered by Part A Medicare hospital insurance.

The cost of the medical insurance premium is $45.50 a month in 2000. However, beneficiaries who sign up now instead of when they were originally eligible will have an additional 10 percent added to their premium for each year they could have enrolled in Part B but didn't. If you sign up at any time during the general enrollment period, your coverage will begin July 1, 2000.

If you do not have Part A Medicare hospital insurance, but are 65 or older and a U.S. citizen or a lawfully admitted alien who has lived in the U.S. for at least five years, you can sign up for Part B medical insurance only or for both Part A and B (hospital and medical insurance) at this time. The premium for hospital insurance varies depending on the amount of time you may have worked in jobs where you paid Social Security taxes.

If you are interested in enrolling in Medicare or would like more information, you can call, write or visit your local Social Security office, or call Social Security's national toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Rabies Immunization Clinic At Animal Shelter April 8

The Quincy Health Department will hold a Rabies Immunization Clinic Saturday, April 8 from noon to 3 p.m. at Quincy Animal Shelter, 56 Broad St. (behind the George F. Bryan VFW Post and Father Bill's Place.)

The clinic will be held rain or shine. Cost is $8 per dog and $8 per cat. Health officials strongly encourage pet owners to have cats and dogs immunized against this serious disease.

Rabies is a viral disease transmitted mainly to dogs and cats through bit wounds from wildlife such as raccoons, bats, skunks, foxes and stray cats. The usually fatal disease is extremely rare in humans and had been fairly uncommon among animals in this part of the country.

However, an outbreak of rabies continues to occur in this state. A total of 2,875 animals have tested positive for rabies in Massachusetts since September, 1992;

1,892 raccoons, 76 cats, 781 skunks, 59 woodchucks, 43 foxes, 3 dogs and 21 other species.

In Quincy, 10 raccoons, 7 skunks, 2 bats, 1 stray cat and 3 dogs have tested positive for rabies to date.

It is very important to vaccinate all pets to avoid contact with wild animals. Dogs and cats must be vaccinated once over three months of age and re-vaccinated within 9 to 12 months after the first vaccination. Thereafter, the dog or cat may be vaccinated once every three years as long as the two vaccines at 9 to 12 months have been administered.

For those whose pets received the yearly vaccine at the April 24, 1999 clinic, the second yearly vaccine must be received this year at the April 8 clinic. For those whose dogs or cats received two vaccines less than one year apart and who show proof (receipt you received from health department or veterinarian) of these vaccinations, a three-year vaccine will be administered at the appropriate clinics.

To reduce exposure to rabies, it is important to take the following precautions:

- Vaccinate all pet cats and dogs against rabies.
- Do not touch, pick up, or feed wild or stray animals of any kind.
- Teach children to avoid wildlife and strays.
- Avoid sick or strangely acting animals.
- Fasten trash can lids tightly. Garbage attracts raccoons and skunks.
- Cap chimneys and seal openings into houses, etc. to prevent raccoons from entering or building dens.
- If you are bitten or scratched by any animal, you should promptly wash the wound(s) with soapy water and contact a doctor immediately.
- If your pet has been bitten or scratched by any animal, wear gloves, wash the wound with warm soapy water for at least 10 minutes, and contact your veterinarian immediately.

Rabies Preventative Measures

- Make sure cats and dogs receive a rabies vaccination. Unvaccinated dogs and cats in particular, are more likely to come in contact with rabid wildlife and therefore poses a greater risk for rabies for their owners.
 - Do not feed your pets outdoors as the presence of their food could attract wild animals. Never feed wild animals, especially near your home.
 - Avoid wild, stray, or unfamiliar animals, especially raccoons, skunks, foxes and bats.
 - Avoid any animals (domestic or wild) that behaves oddly, appears sick or injured, or appears unusually friendly. Reports of any odd behavior or animals should be reported to the Animal Control Officer and/or the Health Department.
 - Avoid keeping skunks, raccoons or any other wildlife as pets, as no rabies vaccine exists for these wildlife species.
 - Discourage wild animals from your property by eliminating sources of food and harborage. Garbage should be stored in sturdy, durable covered containers prior to municipal pick-up. Secure your home from nesting wildlife by making sure all potential entry points are in good repair. Hire a professional exterminator to safely remove any nesting bats from your home.
 - Avoid touching dead, sick or injured animals. If you must, wear heavy gloves and use sticks or other objects to move the animals, thus protecting yourself from direct contact.
 - That if you are bitten or scratched by an unfamiliar animal, do not try to figure out if the animal is rabid, but immediately wash the wound with soap and water. Then contact your physician, at once, to decide if rabies treatment will be necessary.
- For more information about rabies, contact the Quincy Health Department at 376-1273 and/or Division of Communicable Disease Control of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health at 983-6800.

Community Food Drive Underway At Allerton House

In observance of National Nutrition Month, Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group is conducting its fifth annual food drive of non-perishable food items for those not fortunate enough to have daily nutritious meals.

Local residents may bring food contributions to participating Welch Healthcare facilities including Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy.

Among the food banks that benefited from last year's drive are Pembroke Food Pantry, Weymouth Food Pantry, Marge Crispin Center in Braintree, Well-spring Food Pantry in Hull, Father Bill's Place in Quincy, and the Norwell Food Pantry.

Local food banks are a great resource for children, low income families, the elderly and anyone in need, said Anne Marie Downey, registered dietitian for Welch Healthcare. She said malnutrition exists in local neighborhoods, not just in Third World countries, and community contributions to projects like the food drive really make a difference in the lives of those in need.

Potential food items for donations in the protein category include canned meats, fish and nuts, and peanut butter. Dairy foods include evaporated and powdered milk, and canned or dry mixes of puddings and custard. Fruits and vegetables include canned goods such as juices, fruits, vegetables, soup, and spaghetti sauce. Breads and cereals include oatmeal, crackers, rice cakes, pasta products and cornbread mix.

Sylvester M. O'Gorman, 98

Retired Attorney

A funeral Mass for Sylvester M. O'Gorman, 98, a retired attorney, was celebrated Monday at St. Mary's Church.

He died March 25 at Quincy Medical Center.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

A person given to wise sayings once said: "The best way to forget your own problem is to help someone solve his."

Many, many years ago a new teacher was assigned to a one-room school in Indiana. The school bullies tried to bluff him the first day. Their ring leader drew a comic picture of the new teacher, wrote a few lines under it, and created a stir by passing it around the class. Upon seeing it, the teachers said, "Jim, will you please stay after school for a few minutes?"

After school Jim's friends hung around to see what happened. Could the new teacher stand up to the bully? To their surprise, Jim emerged with a book under his arm and went whistling home.

The new teacher disarmed him by saying, "Jim, you have a rare talent. Your ability to write and draw pictures should be developed. I have a book of stories and poems. Would you like to take it home and draw me some pictures to illustrate the stories?"

Thus he fanned to life a spark of latent genius within the overgrown bully, resulting in the turning point of the beloved Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

Recycling Program Earns City State Payment

The Department of Environmental Protection's Municipal Recycling Program (MRIP) recently awarded the City of Quincy $23,896 for recycling 2,576 tons of trash over a six-month period that covered May through December of 1999.

The MRIP program rewards cities and towns that take steps to improve their recycling programs by paying for each ton of material that is recycled by residents. The payments are then invested back into community programs to make further program improvements.

For example, funding that Quincy has received will go toward the retrofitting of one of the Department of Public Works buildings to create a permanent Household Hazardous Products Transfer Facility.

Constructing and operating such a facility enables the DPW to offer, for the first time ever, six drop-off dates for Quincy residents.

DPW Program Manager Rosemary Nolan stated that Mayor James Sheets and DPW Commissioner David Colton had expressed a desire to enhance city services in the area of recycling and disposal of household hazardous products. The result was the Blue Bin Instant Win Program last spring to re-commit the city and reward its residents for recycling. The success of that program increased grant funding and has led to an expansion of the recycling/household hazardous waste program to better accommodate the needs and busy schedules of today's residents.

To make disposal of household hazardous products more convenient for Quincy residents, six drop-off dates are being offered. For residents who may find weekends not convenient, three of the six dates will take place mid-week.

The new schedule will be as follows: Saturday, May 6, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.; Wednesday, June 7, 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Wednesday, July 12, 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Wednesday, August 16, 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Saturday, September 30, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.; and Saturday, October 28, 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

For information regarding the collections, residents may call 770-BINS which is a 24-hour hotline. Residents can call any hour of the day or night and leave their message, name, and telephone number. They will receive a call back that same day or the next business day.

There will also be a citywide mailing regarding the recycling program and the new household hazardous waste collection schedule in the next 2-3 weeks. The DPW asks that residents hold onto the flyer for important information on events during the year.

Over the past two and a half years, more than $5 million dollars have been paid to Massachusetts cities and towns through the MRIP Program according to John Fischer of the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection. MRIP is funded by the state's Clean Environment Fund, which is comprised of unclaimed beverage container deposits. The program payments will be even greater as Quincy residents recycle more. Quincy receives a base payment of $8 per ton. However, for every additional ton that is recycled compared with last year, Quincy is paid at a higher bonus rate of $20 per ton.

"The next time you recycle, remember that you will be earning enough money to support your community's recycling program and that directly benefits each resident," stated Commissioner Colton. "A perfect example of this is the construction of the permanent household hazardous product facility at the DPW to increase service levels to residents."

Each year, recycling in Massachusetts reduces greenhouse gas emissions by nearly one million tons of carbon equivalent, saves enough energy to power 140,000 homes, and supports 12,000 jobs and $600 million in economic development according to DEP records. The Quincy Public Schools have a committed recycling program thanks to the efforts of school administrators, principals, teachers, custodians, and students of all ages. The School Department's efforts alone between September and the end of February have produced the following: 113 tons of material have been recycled resulting in 1,929 trees saved, 12,852 yards of landfill space saved, 43,125 gallons of water saved, and 1,180,370 kilowatt hours of energy saved.

"The City of Quincy, its schools, and residents should be very proud," Nolan said, "because their efforts have resulted in positive recognition as one of the leading municipalities in the state by the Department of Environmental Protection and the Municipal Recycling Incentive Program."

includes: the hiring by the city of an independent fire protection engineer; the complete listing of all chemicals at Twin Rivers; a second pair of turnout gear for Quincy firefighters; training for all Quincy firefighters in the unique hazards presented by fatty-acid production; washers and dryers for all fire stations; implementation of all recommendations made to the Public Safety Committee in a March report by June 1; a remedy of all 12 potential problems listed by Twin Rivers; and the adoption of industry safety standard NFPA 1500 as a city ordinance.

Gorman's announcement came as an emotionally charged finale to a series of meetings on Twin Rivers, which has had a series of safety incidents and fires in the past two years, the most recent of which occurred Sunday and the most serious of which claimed the life of Twin Rivers employee Joseph Conti in March of 1999.

Conti's sister Pam DiBona of Quincy addressed the councillors, as did her husband Peter DiBona, a Quincy firefighter himself. Both praised the memory of Joseph Conti and said their motives were to prevent such a tragedy from happening in the future. "Yes this hurts," DiBona said of speaking about her brother before the committee, "but my husband is a firefighter and my family couldn't bear that same burden twice."

At one point in the meeting Angelico addressed Quincy firefighters personally, admitting that he hadn't been able to sleep well since the death of Conti last March. "I can't do what you do," Angelico said in praise of the firefighters. Later Angelico spoke of the extreme responsibility he felt at the plant, saying, "When this pager goes off on my hip, I panic."

Angelico presented the committee with a report on safety recommendations as well as the status of the work, saying he expected the work to be done by June 1. His goal, he said, was to have an injury-free environment at the plant, adding that the plant was safer as a result of Twin Rivers' continued improvements.

Deputy Chief Paul Cuddy and William Ariento, president of the Quincy Firefighters Union Local 792, also spoke at the meeting. Cuddy praised the Public Safety Committee for adopting industry standards in their resolution and said no training program for Twin Rivers could be put in place until all the hazards at the plant were known.

Ariento said it was a QFA letter to Chief Gorman listing concerns for the plant which prompted subsequent action by both Twin Rivers and the council, adding that he could not "look my firefighters in the eye" if he didn't raise questions about a situation he knew was hazardous.

Most new passenger cars are outfitted with all-season radial tires that are designated with a "P" on the size code imprinted on the sidewall. For instance, P215/70-15R would be a common size. The "215" refers in millimeters to the section width of the tire. The "70" refers to the tire's height divided by its width. Generally, a tire with an aspect ratio of 65 or lower will be wide with a shorter sidewall, while a tire with an aspect ratio of 65 or higher would represent a "normal" sized passenger car tire with a taller sidewall designed for general-purpose use. The "15" refers to the diameter of the wheel that the tire will fit.

Council Approves Sixth Captain For Police Dept.

The City Council Monday night voted 8-1 to add a sixth police captain to the Quincy Police Department.

Mayor James Sheets announced that the sixth captain, two new lieutenants, and two new sergeants would be sworn in 9 a.m. today (Thursday).

Capt. William Falco, the mayor said, has already been promoted to replace the recently retired Capt. Donald Riley.

Joining Falco as captain will be Lt. James McNeil.

Sgts. John Kelly and John Dougan will be promoted to lieutenant and Officers Thomas Corliss and Kevin Tobin will be promoted to sergeant.

The move to create a sixth captain's position came against the wishes of Councillor Frank McCauley, chairman of the Finance Committee and sole opposition vote.

McCauley argued that protocol required the matter to remain in committee, where it was scheduled for discussion April 10, and that the sixth captain's position was unnecessary and politically motivated.

"This is an affront," McCauley said of the move to bring the matter before the council early. "Somebody is dying on the Civil Service List, and it isn't on the captain's list, it's on the sergeant's list."

On Tuesday Sheets responded by saying the new position was not political but a response to Chief Thomas Frane's wish that a captain head the Community Policing Program.

"Chief Frane indicated in May of 1998 that he wanted a captain in charge of

D'Amico, Durkin, Cronin Also Take Out Papers

Harold Puts Mayoral Plans On Back Burner As County Candidate

City Council President Paul Harold is one of four Quincy candidates who have nomination papers out for Norfolk County Register of Deeds.

And, in doing do, put any ambitions he might still have to run for mayor, on the back burner.

Two other councillors, Ward 4's Michael D'Amico and Ward 5's Steve Durkin, also have papers out.

The fourth candidate is Mary Ellen Cronin, vice chairwoman of the Zoning Board of Appeals, the first to take out nomination papers.

two-year terms instead of the present four-year.

The new four-year terms would take effect for all candidates elected in November of 2003. They would begin the terms Jan. 1, 2004.

Voting for the petition with McCauley were: Michael D'Amico, Gregory Hanley, Patrick McDermott, and Joseph Newton.

But D'Amico, McDermott, and Newton all expressed concerns that one election every four years -- instead of two years -- would distance councillors from the voters.

The three voted in favor, they said, to let the people

Mosquito Control Project Begins

The Quincy Health Department has received notice from the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project that the year 2000 "larval control program" is now underway.

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project conducts larval control applications from the end of March through September in low-lying swampy areas where mosquito larvae breed throughout the season.

The larviciding (treatment of mosquito larvae during aquatic development) is applied through use of backpacks, briquettes, and mist blowers. The larval control agent used by the project is Bti (Bacillus thuringiensis israelensis). This is a non-reproducing bacterium which is fatal to mosquito larvae but has little or no impact on other aquatic life.

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project and Quincy Health Department will issue an additional notice in May before early morning residential fogging applications commence.

For further information, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project at (781) 762-3681.

D'Amico has indicated he might step aside rather than split the Quincy vote. Durkin has not said if he will stay in.

Candidates need 1,000 valid voter signatures on their nomination papers to make the ballot.

Filing deadline is May 9. Incumbent Barry Hannon of Braintree triggered the scramble for the post when he announced last week that he will not seek re-election this year. He has been Register of Deeds for 30 years.

Condon-Walsh Named Salem Interim Director

Mayor James Sheets Tuesday named Joanne Condon-Walsh interim director of the USS Salem.

Condon-Walsh, a former city councillor who has been involved with the Salem and the shipbuilding museum since its inception, will serve until a permanent replacement is found for Capt. Robert Duetsch, who resigned as director effective March 31.

"I'm excited about the opportunity to help out with the Salem until we find a permanent replacement," said Condon-Walsh, who has volunteered as the Salem's bookkeeper for almost four years. "I know the ship well and I've done every job on the ship, so I'm ready."

Condon-Walsh said her main goal was to reorganize and put the ship/museum in the best possible shape for her successor. One possible improvement, she said, would be a recent idea to move the ship to Marina Bay to attract more tourists to the site. "I'm a strong advocate of the Marina Bay proposal," Condon-Walsh said. "Moving the Salem would help the ship in the long-term."

No timetable has been set for the naming of a permanent director of the Salem.

Former director and Navy Capt. Robert Duetsch resigned last month after one and a half years on the job. In February, Duetsch successfully oversaw the completion of a $2 million overhaul of the ship in a South Boston drydock.

Duetsch is a former Navy pilot who also oversaw the closure of the South Weymouth Naval Air Base.

The USS Salem, a Des Moines Class Heavy Cruiser, was built at the Fore River Shipyard and is the centerpiece of the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

$300,000 In Tax Credits For Wollaston Manor

The Silver Street Development Corp. will receive $300,000 in low-income housing tax credits to preserve the long term affordability of the 164-unit Wollaston Manor, the State House announced Tuesday.

The credits are part of the Cellucci-Swift administration's approximately $16.1 million award to developers of affordable housing projects in 10 Massachusetts communities.

The funds will be used to build, rehabilitate, or preserve the long-term affordability of 1,153 units of rental housing for a variety of low-income populations including elders, families, individuals, and battered women.

"This is great news," said State Sen. Michael Morrissey on the tax credits which will keep Wollaston Manor affordable housing. "The state is really stepping up to the plate."

The Wollaston Manor made headlines recently after the possibility arose that its current owner, AIMCO, might pre-pay its mortgage and end rental subsidies at the property.

Silver Street Development Corp. has promised to keep the units affordable housing "in perpetuity" if it receives the necessary tax credits to make the project feasible.

Bicycle Fundraiser Ride Gets Green Light Through Quincy

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday granted permission to Rich Havens, logistics coordinator for a fundraiser bicycle ride to go through Quincy during its 85 mile journey.

The rain or shine event will benefit Best Buddies, a Hyannisport based operation geared to the special mentally challenged.

Best Buddies is a mentoring program and a non-profit organization, and is chaired by Anthony K. Shriver, son of Eunice Shriver. Havens said Shriver saw that an amount of under-utilized talent existed on college campuses. He matched his fellow Georgetown University students with people with mental retardation in one-to-one friendships, and Best buddies was born.

Since its inception, it has been embraced by the field of mental retardation and the community.

According to Havens, the vision behind the Best Buddies programs in high schools is to increase social opportunities for students in regular and special education by matching them in one-to-one pairs for an entire school year.

Students in special and regular education can benefit from a positive peer relationship, higher self esteem, and support to teens with mental retardation in the schools and communities.

The bike route will be held May 20 and arrive in Quincy at 6:30 a.m. and leave by 7:30 a.m. It will include 250 participants.

Bikers will begin their long ride at the John F. Kennedy Library in South Boston, proceed to the Neponset Bridge, down Quincy Shore Drive and Sea Street onto the Fore River Bridge and ultimately end in Hyannisport.

After leaving the Fore River Bridge, the participants will take side roads through Weymouth and Hingham avoiding Route 3A whenever possible, Havens said. Medical coverage will be provided as well as local and MDC police escorts.

After arriving at their destination in Hyannisport, the riders will be treated to a lawn celebration including a clam bake.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the Mayor's committee had approved the fundraiser, the first of its kind in Quincy.

Board member Fire Chief Thomas Gorman did not attend the meeting.

Roger Wallin, senior building inspector substituted for Walter White.

Shea announced that Tuesday would be the last License Board meeting for Wallin since he is retiring April 28.

"WORK, Inc. is a success because they are constantly looking for opportunities for their consumers. Their continued growth throughout the years has enabled WORK, Inc. to provide a greater service to the community through collaboration with a variety of public and private sector organizations," Levin said.

Mailings Remain Sore Spot For City Council

By CRAIG SALTERS

A last minute agenda item to appropriate $5,000 in emergency funds for council postage costs sparked controversy at Monday night's City Council meeting.

The actual appropriation passed easily, 9-0, although it included an a hotly debated amendment proposed by Councillor Joseph Newton that the money be divided equally amongst the council.

But accusations flew back and forth concerning who was responsible for the fact that the City Council must exist on stopgap appropriations because it has already used up the money in its postal budget.

And some councillors, led by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, saw recent steps to curb mailings as undemocratic since they limited a councillor's ability to inform his constituents on important issues and public meetings.

"We are the most undemocratic City Council in my 25 years of experience," Raymondi declared during the debate.

As it stands now, councillors have unlimited use of the mailing budget. A plan proposed by Council President Paul Harold, currently in committee, would give each councillor a separate account and force councillors to prioritize mailings. "The alternative is for me to read every mailing and make a decision," Harold said, calling that a non-solution which would add to the already contentious nature of the issue.

City Auditor Michael McFarland started the debate when, during a discussion on the appropriation, he announced that the council had no money left for mailings. "The budget at this point has been exhausted," McFarland said. "There are no available funds for these mailings."

Councillor Stephen Durkin labeled McFarland's answer "unacceptable" and emphasized how important it was to notify residents of public meetings. Durkin said one reason the postal budget might be depleted was excessive and unnecessary mailings, adding, "This is chronic and it must stop."

Councillor Michael D'Amico, who agreed that the issue was "coming to a head," said he was in favor of streamlining mailings, including more bulk rate mail and his recently created email bank.

D'Amico also suggested that out-of-date mailing lists were causing too many unnecessary returns, a comment to which City Clerk Joseph Shea took exception. "These lists are updated constantly," said Shea, who pointed out that the city received only four trays of return mail after its recent census mailing, as opposed to 16 trays in past years.

Raymondi wanted to know from the council, and specifically from the council president, if mailings concerning a pilot trash pick-up program, agreed to at a recent meeting of the Public Works Committee, were indeed now optional based upon a councillor's ability to afford them. Receiving an affirmative answer, he later said the measures were punishing mailings and called the whole system "insanity."

Other councillors requested guidance from the President Harold concerning specific mailings, prompting Councillor Frank McCauley to respond, "The mayor is the man who makes appropriations. Go see the mayor."

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS met recently with the officers of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women to discuss a variety of women's issues and projects within the community. Harold Changes Landscape

Paul Harold may have changed the local political landscape for sometime to come as well as his own public career destiny in his decision to run for Norfolk County Register of Deeds.

If he wins, it could take him out of the mayoral picture for good.

And, put other hopefuls -- like Tim Cahill and Dan Raymondi -- in a stronger position as potential successors to incumbent James Sheets.

HAROLD

next year.

Harold took out his nomination papers Monday morning. And a gust of wind reportedly suddenly blew down Hancock St. from the direction of City Hall. Or, was it actually a sigh of relief coming from the third floor?

For Sheets it probably again means no major challenger or a costly bid for a seventh term next year.

If Harold does win the Register of Deeds seat Braintree's Barry Hannon is leaving after 30 years, it will be for a six-year term. And, an $85,000 per year pay check. That's pretty good job security.

And, if he loses?

Don't look for him to run for mayor next year.

Observers estimate it will take $100,000 -- or more -- to finance an effective campaign for Register of Deeds throughout Norfolk County this year.

And to take on Sheets next year would require at least that amount and probably a lot more.

Back-to-back $100,000-plus fundraising would be a Mission Impossible feat for Harold or anyone else. Besides, who would want to run for mayor that close to losing a bid for another office?

One question being asked: If Harold wins Register of Deeds, does he lose something career-wise in the years to come?

Many see that office as a political limbo or a dead end. It doesn't have the political exposure of district attorney or sheriff.

Six years there, some think, and Harold could be forgotten in Quincy.

But not really.

He could still hold his City Council seat while serving as Register of Deeds. As Cahill has done since being elected Norfolk County treasurer.

So, Harold could still keep his hand in the local political scene.

But, before he completes that six-year term as Register, someone else could be elected mayor. Sheets could decide to step down and turn the keys over to someone else.

That would disappoint many of Harold's supporters who have been counting on him to be the next mayor. And some of them are already disappointed that he is running for Register of Deeds.

Of the potential mayoral contenders, Harold appeared the most willing to challenge Sheets. And next year, it appeared, was going to be the year. Not anymore.

Sheets, since taking office in 1990, has had token opposition twice and three free rides to re-election.

Next year now looks like another easy one. And he could stay in office as long as he wants.

Harold, who has topped the City Council at-large field the last three elections was seen as Sheets's biggest threat.

He may now have surrendered that role, along with that of a future mayoral candidate.

But he's only 51 and even after six years in Dedham he would still be young enough to consider a mayoral bid.

Harold is already seen as the front-runner for Register of Deeds. But nothing is sure until the votes are counted.

The Quincy vote is always vital to a Quincy candidate in a county election. Splitting it with someone else can hurt.

Three other Quincy candidates have nomination papers out as of this writing: Councillors Michael D'Amico and Steve Durkin and Mary Ellen Cronin, vice chairwoman of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

D'AMICO

DURKIN

D'Amico has indicated he might step aside.

"You can't split that Quincy vote," he says.

Durkin hasn't said what he will do.

But Cronin says she's in the race to stay.

CRONIN

"It doesn't matter to me," she says. "I'm running regardless."

And this week she officially announced her candidacy.

There had been speculation that other Quincy candidates might run. Rep. Ron Mariano, Councillor Dan Raymondi, a former county treasurer and Councillor Pat McDermott were being mentioned. But it's doubtful they will get in with all the vote-splitting that would cause.

But Quincy candidates have more than one another to contend with.

County Commissioner Peter Collins of Milton has nomination papers out. And there no doubt will be other candidates from other parts of the county.

Right now, Harold is seen as the one to beat.

But there are many of his supporters who would rather have seen him running for mayor next year.

PERENNIAL CANDIDATE Bob Boussy has nomination papers out. For three different seats: Congress, state senate and state representative. Hasn't made up his mind whether he will run against Bill Delahunt, Mike Morrissey or Bruce Ayers. He's run for the Ward 3 city council seat and for mayor.

A FUNDRAISER RECEPTION for City Councilor Frank McCauley is on tap for Wednesday, April 19, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Common Market, Willard St., West Quincy.

Tickets are $50 per person and may be obtained by calling 479-6230. They will also be available at the door.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 postcard of Sea Avenue in Houghs Neck looking south towards Weymouth. In the distance to the right is Raccoon Island. At the time of this picture all of these houses were summer cottages, a few still are. But now, most have been expanded and updated for year round use, and with the Nut Island sewerage plant closed, the real estate values here are soaring. Some of these houses on Great Hill are almost 100 feet above the ocean and the wide-ranging views of the harbor are spectacular. C.A. Litchfield who owned the Houghs Neck Drug Store published this postcard. The printer added the hand drawn out-of-scale automobiles.

The USS Salem Doesn't Excite Him

Editor, The Quincy Sun: I recently heard the news that Mayor Jim Sheets is proposing the creation of a committee to study what to do with the USS Salem if and when it must move from its present Quincy Shipyard berth due to the negative impact from the "temporary" replacement for the aging Fore River Bridge.

The new temporary arrangement for moving traffic along Route 3A will last at least 10 years.

Apparently, the mayor and others believe it may be necessary to re-locate the old ship elsewhere. One site proposed is over at Marina Bay which I'm sure is thrilled with having this post World War II ship as a possible new neighbor. You know, I still don't get the reason why this old ship is so important to Quincy. I don't know whether to laugh or cry when I hear it being called a tourist attraction. It may be many things but tourist attraction, it ain't.

Recently, the Salem was towed over to Boston for repair work and sadly, it was towed back to Quincy when work was completed. Just a suggestion, next time we need to tow it outta town, abandon ship will you!

Too bad Quincy City Hall went silent and invisible when it came to the Nantucket Lightship that had been over at Marina Bay for some time now. We almost let it end up on the scrapheap before it was given a lifeline form former state Sen. Bill Golden who bought it on the Net. A good catch for him, another lost opportunity for us.

The USS Salem sits in a dead shipyard waiting for what? I saw a great T-shirt the other day. It was printed up during the Titanic movie craze and read: "The boat sunk. Get over it." The Salem had its day. That day is gone and so too should this ship.

If the USS Salem has a future, it ain't here. Perhaps, when next it is towed from the shipyard, it should be shipped over to Charlestown to the old Navy Yard its best chance of survival berthed next to the USS Constitution (Old Ironsides) and the USS Cassin Young. At least Charlestown gets tourists to climb aboard.

Kenny Rodgers had a song that talked about knowing when to hold and when to fold. Perhaps, Mayor Sheets should learn those words quickly for his sake and ours. Otherwise, we'll continue to be stuck with our own USS Minow straight from Gilligan's Island.

Bet Salem, Massachusetts is happy now knowing the didn't "win" the USS Salem.

Civilian Conservation Corps Observes 67th Anniversary

Editor, The Quincy Sun: The Civilian Conservation Corps Alumni Chapter 60 of Quincy wishes to acknowledge the 67th anniversary of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

A Public Law enacted in 1933, March 31 created the most popular, economically, environmental and wisest Government Program ever. The Civilian Conservation Corps enlisted three million young boys of a period of nine years. In those nine years the ravaged National and States Forests were brought into shape. The history of and the integrity plus heredity will never have to take second place to any group of young men that served the United States in an emergency.

Of the three million enrollees Massachusetts provided 100,000. The City of Quincy provided several hundred, the actual figure is not known by the writer.

I do not know of any one of the members that served in the C's that did not serve in the military.

Sixty-seven years is a long time. There are still projects completed by the C's in operation right here in Quincy.

Robert Fechner, a Quincy resident, was chosen as Director of the Civilian Conservation Corps until the time of his death in 1940. The CCC was in service from 1933 to 1942.

Quincy's Yesterdays Easter Parade Draws 50,000 Spectators

By PAUL HAROLD

Quincy's annual Shopperstown Easter Bunny Parade drew its largest crowds, with an estimated 50,000 spectators lined up along Hancock and Washington

Sts.

April 6 - 12

40 Years Ago

The parade was sponsored by the Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce. Parade organizer for the 28th year was Rev. Thomas Tierney, who noted that the shipyard strike dampened the spirits of the crowd, compared to prior years.

There were 37 groups in the line of march including seven floats, 15 bands and 30 horses.

LITTLE INTEREST IN PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY

Election officials at City Hall predicted a low turnout for the state's April 26th Presidential Primary Election. Despite the candidacy of favored son John F. Kennedy, it was expected that only one in 10 of the city's eligible voters would vote. This would be an increase from 1956 when the Sen. Estes Kefauver candidacy attracted only one in 14 voters.

The Kennedy campaign was focused on winning the key state of West Virginia and was relying upon local Democratic leaders to stump the state for the senator.

On the Republican ballot, it was expected that Vice President Richard Nixon would be an easy winner.

IKE REJECTS STRIKE PLEA

President Dwight Eisenhower rejected a plea by 100 congressmen for his intervention in ending the strike that paralyzed Bethlehem Steel's east coast shipyards. The letter was delivered by Congressman James Burke.

A spokesman for the President said that the White House would not intercede because of the administration's strong support for the concept of free collective bargaining. He said that they would only get involved if the request came from both parties involved.

QUINCY-ISMS

Rep. Charles Shea, who also served as vice commodore of the Quincy Yacht Club, led the fight against a state plan to place boat registration and policing in a new division of the Registry of Motor Vehicles. Quincy Reps. Amelio Della Chiesa and James McIntyre joined Shea in voting against the plan, with Rep. Joseph Brett voting in favor. . . Benjamin Sawin of Sonoma Rd. was elected the 39th president of the Rotary Club. . . A class of 140 young people was confirmed by Bishop Jeremiah Minihan at St. Boniface's. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Graham were the sponsors. . . Sydney Canter was the new president of the B'Nai B'rith. . . Katherine Kemp retired after 43 years teaching in the Quincy public schools. She taught at the Grindlay Bryant, Coddington and Webster Schools before she was assigned to the new Merrymount School, where she taught sixth grade for 31 years. . . QHS baseball coach Bill Sullivan referred to his three key players as "king-sized pitchers with kamikaze spirit." They were Bob Burke, Bob McDougal and Mike Johnson. . . Mayor Della Chiesa gave up his parking space on Depot St. to a car load of women shoppers who drove from Saugus to take advantage of the Easter sale at the Bargain Center. . . Some 250 delegates from across the state attended the Future Teachers' Association meeting at Atlantic Junior High School. Those attending included QHS teacher Maude Wheeler, Atlantic Principal John Evans and School Committeeman Dr. Edward Mann. . . Robert Montgomery of Alrick Road was elected head of the 100,000-member Alliance of Independent Telephone Unions. James Moody and Clarence Murphy headed up the testimonial committee to honor Richard Koch. . . PFC Louis Contrino of Franklin St. participated with the 82nd Airborne Division in jungle exercises in Panama. . . Frederick Tighe was chairman for the North Quincy K of C annual Father and Son Communion Breakfast. . . NQHS student Joyce Botolph St. filled in for Sen. Charles Hedges at the State House during student government day. Filling as state representatives were Woodward School's Sue Holland of Summit Ave. and QHS's Robert DiAntonio of Morley Road. Paul Guzzi of Newton was student Governor. . . City councillors returned to a brightened council chamber this week. The pint and white paint job came about as a result of a resolve by Councillor William Ellis who noted the need to spruce up "the dingy place."

TRUMP GOLDEN: Phyllis and Arthur Ciampa of Quincy recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary by renewing their vows at Olympus Specialty Hospital in Braintree. Fr. Garret Barry of St. Ann's Church officiated the ceremonies which were followed by a luncheon.

Mr., Mrs. Arthur Ciampa Celebrate 50th Anniversary

Phyllis and Arthur Ciampa of Quincy celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary recently with a renewal of their wedding vows at the Olympus Specialty Hospital in Braintree, formerly known as Mass Respiratory Hospital.

Fr. Garret Barry of St. Ann's church officiated the renewal of vows in the hospital's chapel.

Thirty-seven people, including friends and relatives as well as nurses and respiratory therapists, attended what was described as a "simple but impressive" ceremony.

Phyllis has been a patient in the facility due to lung disease and has a tracheostomy to assist her in her breathing, but she and her husband carefully planned the renewal of their marriage vows with the cooperation of the Olympus Specialty Administrative Staff.

Phyllis wore a new dress which was given finishing touches by the nurses in the "Vent Unit." Following the ceremony, guests retired to a room where a luncheon was served complete with a 50th wedding anniversary cake.

Along with the use of its facilities, the hospital provided paper goods, ice cream, coffee, and tea.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

June's Exotic Dessert

Here are two great recipes given to me during our recent vacation in Florida.

One was a dessert prepared by June that was so enjoyed that she had to make an extra batch the following week. It's pretty easy to make and can be made ahead of time.

The other was a for a different scalloped corn which also can be made ahead of time.

June's Champagne Dessert

- 8 ounces cream cheese
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1 large can pineapple tidbits (drained)
- 1 package frozen strawberries (with juice, but thawed)
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts (optional)
- 2 bananas sliced
- 1 large frozen cool whip

Mix cream cheese and sugar until smooth. In another bowl, combine pineapple, strawberries, bananas and cool whip. Mix all ingredients gently together but thoroughly. Place in a large glass pan and freeze. Take out about 10-15 minutes before serving. It is so colorful and tastes so light and delicious!

Josie's Scalloped Corn

- 1 large can whole corn niblets
- 1 large can cream corn
- 1 stick butter (melted)
- 8 ounces sour cream
- 1 small box Jiffy corn muffin mix

Mix all ingredients together until blended. Place in a baking slightly greased baking dish and bake in a 350 degree oven for about half an hour. When slightly cooled, cut in squares. It's a great side dish which complements meats, fish or eaten alone because you enjoy it.

WWII Statue Gets City Hall Preview

Quincy's memorial to World War II veterans is taking shape -- literally -- as pieces of a statue honoring the men and women who served were put on display recently at City Hall.

Mayor James Sheets met with the statue's sculptor, Andre Iwanczyk of Long Island, NY, as well as members of the city's World War II Memorial Committee, which was formed in 1997.

The $100,000 statue is part of a $1 million renovation and restoration of Merrymount Park and will become the centerpiece of the memorial honoring World War II veterans.

The memorial will be located at what will be the redesigned intersection of Hancock St. and Southern Artery.

The separate parts of the statue will be cast in bronze before the entire work is assembled and installed. No exact timetable for installation has been set, said Memorial Committee Chairman Leonard Morris, but committee members are hopeful it will occur within the next 12-18 months.

The statue, designed by Morris and Co-chairman John Donlon, features a kneeling Army infantryman, a Navy sailor, a Marine, and a female nurse who represents the more than half million women who served during World War II.

Morris, an Army commando who landed on Omaha Beach on D-Day, said he positioned the soldier kneeling in thanks because of a vivid recollection of a fellow soldier doing that very thing at news of the war's end. Also, although the woman depicted on the statue is intended to represent all women who served, Morris actually used a newspaper photograph of a World War II nurse as a model for the statue.

To raise funds for the World War II statue, the city is offering engraved bricks for $50 and granite stones for $250. To place an order or for more information, call 376-1150.

World War II Memorial Committee members include: Mayor James Sheets; Chairman Leonard Morris; Co-Chairman John Donlon; Linda Monti; John "Butch" Mahoney; Hank Bradley; John Keenan; and Kerry Knapp.

SCULPTOR ANDRE IWANCZYK discusses the finer points of his World War II statue, pieces of which were on display at City Hall. The statue, which honors the men and women who served during World War II, will serve as the centerpiece of a new memorial to be located in Merrymount Park. (Presidential Camera Photo/John Black)

$6,375 Truancy Prevention Grant Awarded To Schools

Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating has awarded $6,375 in truancy prevention grant funding to the Quincy school system to help keep more than 1,190 enrolled students in school and engaged in the learning process.

Grant funding will be used to help avert absenteeism and tardiness, warning signs that often portend more serious school conduct problems.

"Truancy prevention can be an important part of an overall strategy to promote school safety," Keating said. "The Quincy school system deserves credit for taking such a comprehensive and proactive approach." Fourteen additional school systems in Norfolk County also received awards.

Awards were based on the merits of application proposals submitted in January, and not necessarily the incidence of truancy in particular communities.

Funding is being made available by the Massachusetts Executive Office of Public Safety (E.O.P.S.) and the federal government through the Edward Byrne Memorial Truancy Prevention Grant Program. Grant assistance may support program development and implementation into the next school year.

For their ongoing support of these types of early intervention initiatives, Keating also expressed his gratitude to the Quincy Police Department, the E.O.P.S., Sen. Michael Morrissey and the Massachusetts State Legis-

High School Graduation Planned For Quincy World War II Veterans

The city's two high schools will hold graduation ceremonies this fall for those veterans who left high school to serve in the military during World War II.

Graduations are scheduled for Nov. 8 at North Quincy High School and Nov. 9 at Quincy High School for those veterans who left high school and entered the military between Sept. 16, 1940 and Dec. 31, 1946.

"In the prime of their youthful years, many of our young men and women left the safety of their home and were sent to distant lands to protect people they never saw and fight an enemy they only heard of," said Henry Bradley, director of Quincy Veterans Services.

"When many of these soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines 'raised their hand' for the oath to the United States, they had recently left school and headed to the far reaches of the earth in defense of our country.

"Many of those men and women left both Quincy and North Quincy High Schools, and never had the chance to go back and receive their diploma for their high schools for whatever reason," Bradley added.

Quincy Veterans Services will accept applications for local veterans who attended but did not receive a high school diploma due to military service. Applications will be available Aug. 25.

For more information or an application, call Quincy Veterans Services at (617) 376-1192, or stop by its office at 24 High School Ave. (off Quincy Ave.) next to Fire Department Headquarters.

Two Quincy High School Educators Nominated For State Teacher Of The Year

Two Quincy High School educators, business technology teacher Rita Dinsmore and social studies teacher George Smith have been nominated for Massachusetts Teacher of the Year.

Dinsmore has been a teacher in the Business Technology Department at Quincy High School for 26 years. During that time, technology has moved from manual typewriters to state-of-the-art computers. She has followed every step of the way, embracing change to enhance opportunities for her students and taking advantage of seminars to learn the latest teaching strategies and technology updates.

Dinsmore is known as a consummate educator among colleagues, always learning, always prepared, and always delivering. Her accounting students are often involved with the skill competitions in VICA (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America). Almost every year they can be counted on to return to Quincy High School sweeping the competition with first, second and third-place awards. Her students are often accepted into first-rate colleges, and all of them are prepared for the current workforce with the skills needed to succeed.

Dinsmore embodies the wisdom and talent of a professional veteran with the enthusiasm and knowledge of newly trained educator. Her zest for life and learning makes every day an exciting learning experience for students and faculty.

Smith has taught social studies at Quincy High School since 1969. He has seen plenty of change in education during his 30-plus year classroom career.

A graduate of Boston State College, Smith has specialized in the teaching of U.S. history and economics. He offers an Advanced Placement course in macroeconomics which offers college credit to those who pass the AP exam.

Smith views his students' success in statewide economic competitions as one of his most rewarding accomplishments. In 1994-95, his students set a statewide two-year record of $19,250 in awards as a result of their success in an annual AFL-CIO Labor examination. Many of his students have passed the aforementioned AP exam and received the benefits of college credit.

Perhaps Smith's greatest asset is the assistance he has provided to other staff members, new and veteran, alike. He has shown a great deal of commitment to his colleagues and to his school. In addition, Smith has been employed as a National Park Ranger since 1975, again sharing his local history knowledge with the public.

Two Week Field Trip

11 NQHS Students Off To Africa Saturday

By CRAIG SALTERS

When North Quincy High School students decide to take a field trip, they really decide to take a field trip.

Eleven NQHS sophomores and juniors led by English teacher Holly Rendle will leave Saturday for a 16-day journey throughout Africa. The trip will combine volunteerism, academics, and tourism, taking up one week of excused absences and the students' April vacations.

The students are: Natalie Barahona, Lori DeLucia, James Foulsham, Carolyn King, Heather Lynch, Katelyn McDonald, Tara Ridge, Erica Peterson, Linda Sinclair, Eric Stanton, and Kelly Rice.

The students will spend a good part of their time distributing books and building a playground in the town of Chipata, Zambia, where the students are volunteering their time and efforts.

But that will still leave time to whitewater raft down the Zambezi River, view wildlife in Zimbabwe's Hwange National Park, visit Lake Malawi in Malawi, and take in the world-famous Victoria Falls bordering Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Students have already written 5-6 page preliminary reports on topics they intend to explore in Africa. The students will eventually write research papers using primary source material on such topics as: a comparison of rituals between American and African Catholicism; game preservation; water quality; and various aspects of African music and language.

In addition, students will read short stories by both American writer Ernest Hemingway and African writer Chinua Achebe, comparing and contrasting the two authors' portrayals of the African Experience.

Students will also be asked to write extensive entries in their daily journals, answering specific questions but also making note of personal experiences and reflections.

The idea of traveling to Africa, Rendle said, was raised half-jokingly at first by Eric Stanton, one of Rendle's students and a current member of the trip.

Stanton suggested that, since Rendle always talked about how wonderful Africa was, maybe a field trip was in order. "It was a joke at first," said Rendle, "but I began to think, 'Hey, why can't we?'"

Rendle, who has taught at NQHS for two years, is a former Peace Corp volunteer who served in Africa. While there, she met her husband, Walter Cowham, who is from Chipata, Zambia. Cowham is already in Chipata and will join the students on the trip.

The students, said Rendle, will hold a "Sharing Night" sometime in early June where they will share their experiences from the journey. Although no definite date has been set, the public is invited and encouraged to attend.

Latex Allergies & You

By MARY RYAN, RN

Staff Educator, Quincy Medical Center

Over the years, there has been a widespread increase in the use of latex products, both in the medical setting and at home. Latex is a product of the rubber tree that can be found in a variety of common items used every day including balloons, rubber gloves, condoms, elastic waist bands, and even baby toys.

Since the use of latex has increased, researchers have found an increase in the incidence of latex allergies. Allergic reaction to latex is caused by the protein found in the product and can cause reactions ranging from mild skin irritation to severe breathing problems. While frequent exposure to the protein in latex may cause sensitivity to the protein in some, others can have a more severe reaction to latex that results in an allergic response.

Symptoms of Latex Allergy

Allergic response to latex can range from mild to severe, and can even be fatal. The most common response is caused by direct skin contact with a latex product. Often seen in health care workers who are exposed to the latex and lubricating powder found in latex gloves, this response is usually mild and poses no serious threat to the victim's health.

Direct contact with latex can cause mild to severe irritation for those affected by latex allergies. Symptoms may include itchy, red skin or even a rash after contact with latex. These symptoms develop at the site of latex contact one to two days after exposure and usually do not spread to other parts of the body. People who have this allergic reaction can use a cortisone product to ease the discomfort and should consult with their doctor as soon as possible.

A more severe allergic response to latex is a result of the inhalation of the proteins found in latex products. The person having this allergic response may experience runny nose, itchy red eyes, or asthma, and in the most severe cases, can go into anaphylactic shock and stop breathing. People with this allergy should seek immediate medical attention at the first sign of onset.

Who Is At Risk?

People who are repeatedly exposed to latex containing products, such as health care workers, are at increased risk of developing an allergy to latex. Also, people with allergies to foods that have proteins similar to latex such as bananas, avocados, or nuts are also more likely to be allergic to latex. Other risk factors include a history of asthma, hay fever, or eczema.

What to Do

Since latex is found in a variety of products, including many baby toys, people at risk for latex allergic reaction should check all products with rubber for the presence of latex. Avoiding all forms of exposure to latex can be the most simple, yet effective solution.

If you would like more information about latex allergies, call the Quincy Medical Center at (617) 376-4016.

Bernazzani School Receives $1,350 Cultural Grant

The Charles A. Bernazzani School has been awarded a $1,350 Massachusetts Cultural Council grant, announce state Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ron Mariano, Steve Tobin and Bruce Ayers.

The funding is part of the 1993 Education Reform Act, which requires the arts be taught as one of the seven core subjects in Massachusetts schools. The money for the program was appropriated by the Legislature and the Massachusetts Cultural Council is responsible for distribution of awards.

"The grant enables our children and teachers to participate in creative hands-on learning situations with artists who have years of experience in school settings," Morrissey said.

"This funding is critical to meet education reform requirements and reinforces the importance of the arts in the school curriculum," Mariano added.

Through the Massachusetts Cultural Council Event and Residency Grant Program, schools are able to fund short-and long-term residency of artists in schools.

The grant to the Bernazzani School will fund the residency for dancer Nikki Hu and musician Guy Van Duser.

"This program has been with the school for several years and we are happy that the funding will continue their work," Tobin said. "Their teaching method uses audio, visual and physical senses to convey the arts to these children."

A 1996 study by the Getty Education Institute for the Arts found that children who participate in arts activities perform better academically, demonstrate better cognitive and work skills and shows greater self-esteem.

"The grant money is an investment in our children by including within their curriculum the ability to appreciate the arts," Morrissey said.

Hannon Stepping Down As Register Of Deeds

Barry T. Hannon, Norfolk County Register of Deeds has announced that he will not seek election to a sixth term.

Hannon, an attorney and Braintree resident said he can leave the office with sense of both accomplishment and gratitude.

"It's a good time to leave to seek other opportunities. I am grateful to the people of Norfolk County who have elected me as Register of Deeds for 30 years and to my Assistant Registers of Deeds and other employees who have made this government institution what it is today."

Hannon noted that at a time when most counties have hovered near bankruptcy, he had carried a large budget surplus from year to year. "It is good to know it's there in case we have a rainy day."

"I leave with an overwhelming sense of gratitude and a feeling of accomplishment. We are financially sound and we are very much into the new millennium with up to date computer systems, modems, off site access and document imaging for convenient storage and fast retrieval. It's been a wonderful experience and I just want to say Thank You."

Teen Dating Violence: Early Warning Signs For Perpetrators

Young men who physically or sexually assault their girlfriends don't often fit our common stereotype of the bully or "macho" man.

There are literally all types of perpetrators. Some are loudly aggressive, while others are quiet and passive in public. Often the victim is not believed when he/she reports that their boyfriend/girlfriend has abused them since violence doesn't fit the picture that others paint of the boyfriend/girlfriend. It is important for school personnel to look beyond students' academic and social reputations when they investigate reports of physical or sexual abuse.

• The victim or her friend report abuse or threats.

Remember, there are all types of victims, too. Some lack credibility because they have a worse reputation than the boyfriends/girlfriends. This is a common problem for rape victims. Don't be swayed by public image.

• Alcohol or drug use.

Some perpetrators rely on alcohol or drugs to release them from their normal inhibitions or to give them the "courage" to become more aggressive toward their girlfriends/boyfriends. Alcohol and drug use is sometimes used in gang rapes to help perpetrators "forget the rules" or to ply the victim.

• Possessive or jealous behavior toward girlfriend/boyfriend.

Whether in public or private, possessiveness and jealous accusations often precede and follow violence. The abusive boyfriend/girlfriend will often attempt to socially isolate their girlfriend/boyfriend by "forbidding them" to see or talk to others or by making frequent accusations of infidelity which force her/him to limit their social life in order to appease the perpetrator.

• Involvement with younger girls.

Boys who habitually date girls who are much younger do so because they feel they can be more dominant than when the girl is the same age or older.

• Marked changes in mood or personality.

Extreme agitation, depression, social withdrawal, or aggressiveness can be tip-offs to relational conflict or violence.

• Pressuring girls for dates or sex.

Boys who use coercive tactics to win dates are likely to be abusive in order to maintain the relationship. Getting angry when a girl refuses to go out is one sign of this. Other tactics include threats, unwanted touching or sexual advances, social ridicule, grandiose promises, and refusal to accept "no" for an answer. Intense preoccupation with going out with a particular girl or with having sex are potential indicators of physical abuse.

Many of the above warning signs are common male behavior. This may lead school personnel to ignore them or downplay their significance. However, the prevalence of such behaviors does not reduce their significance as predators of violence and other problems. Even if they are not accompanied by violence, these are controlling behaviors which will hinder the development of trust and respect between boys and girls, whether in intimate or social relationships. All of the above behaviors are manifestations of common social attitudes which deserve to be addressed on the social as well as the individual level.

Petition For 4-Year Mayor, Council Terms Approved

decide for themselves in next year's election.

Voting against the petition were Tim Cahill, Stephen Durkin, Daniel Raymond, and Council President Paul Harold.

"If it ain't broke, don't fix it," Cahill urged his fellow members, arguing that elections are a difficult but necessary way to keep in touch with voters' needs. "This system has worked fine for forty years... and four years is a long time to wait if your phone calls aren't getting returned."

Durkin called the two-year terms "a system that really keeps you on your toes" and "representative democracy in action." Harold argued that, with the recent exception of Weymouth, most towns turning to city government were opting for two-year terms for mayor and council.

Raymond called it "The Incumbent Protection Act," adding that four-year terms provided two much insulation between voter and elected official.

McCauley's HRP also details when special elections would or would not take place in the event of vacancies.

McCauley -- who during his career has served as councillor, School Committee member, and mayor -- said the proposal would not benefit himself in any way but was a response to the growing demands put on the mayor and council members. "With the degree of responsibility and the increased workload, the four-year term makes more sense," McCauley said.

McCauley thanked his fellow councillors for the narrow victory and remained steadfast in his conviction that four-year terms, which he called both a state and national trend, were the right thing to do.

"The time has come," McCauley said.

REDEFINING "SHIN SPLINTS"

In the past the term "shin splints" was used in the medical literature as a catch-all description that included painful conditions such as periostitis (inflammation around the surface of a bone). Stress fractures, chronic compartment syndromes (pain caused by increased pressure within compartments containing muscle groups) and myositis (inflammation of a muscle). In general, any of the above causes could be responsible for pain in the shin of people involved in any athletic activities.

In recent years a more precise definition has appeared to describe shin splints. This definition covers the entire front aspect of the lower leg. The condition may present as myositis (inflammation of a muscle) or as an overuse injury of the anterior tibial or the posterior tibial muscles. Symptoms include pain that worsens with time and initially involves the activity that produces it (e.g., jogging) as time passes. The pain is also present day and night even when the person limits their physical activity. There are effective treatments available.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 617-773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

YMCA To Build Racquetball Court

The South Shore YMCA Board of Directors has voted unanimously to build a new racquetball court as part of a previously announced renovation plan which includes the removal of two racquetball courts to create added space for its youth and adult fitness programs.

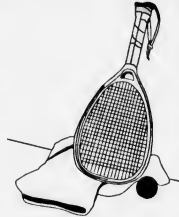

"This renovation is necessary to alleviate overcrowding and to provide greater opportunities to address the special needs of our diverse membership," said Board Chairman Mark Dickinson.

Ralph Yohe, YMCA President, said, "We're pleased to provide a way to keep the sport of racquetball at the South Shore YMCA, while at the same time greatly improving the facility to better accommodate the Y's youth and teen fitness program, and to provide more space for our Partnership Program, which trains volunteers to work with Y members with disabilities."

The renovation plan is expected to cost approximately $700,000, and the Y hopes to have it completed by September.

St. Agatha Boys Hockey Wins First Title

The St. Agatha boys' hockey team shocked the CYO league by capturing its first ever championship with a 5-2 win over first-place Holy Name of West Roxbury at the Cambridge MDC rink recently.

After finishing seventh in the regular season, St. Agatha cruised in the playoffs as it pulled out a 7-4 win over Sacred Heart of Roslindale in the quarterfinals and a 4-0 win over St. Brendan's of Dorchester in the semifinals.

In the final game, St. Agatha jumped out to a 4-0 first-period lead. Brian O'Hanley netted two goals and Nick Doherty and Ryan Tobin added the other goals as Mark McDonough, Pat Canty and Jim Devlin forced turnovers.

After Holy Name cut the lead to 4-2 after two periods, goalie Nick Sarno promised his teammates that if they kept the crease clear, he would stop anything shot at him. St. Agatha did just that.

With five minutes left in the game, Tobin got out of the penalty box, stole the puck and went in all alone for the final goal, his second of the game.

Against Sacred Heart, the Doherty brothers, Pat and Nick, scored six of the team's seven goals. Tobin, who played forward all season, shined behind the pipes as he filled in for Sarno in net.

In the semifinal game, Sarno returned to record the shutout against St. Brendan's. Brendan Lynch, Miah Hasson, Mike Joyce and Bob Donovan played solid defense. Colin Maxey had a couple of great rushes.

St. Agatha was coached by John Hasson and Ned Tobin. Don Donahue was the general manager and scout.

Baseball 2000 Preview

New Coach, New Era For Presidents

Open Season
Friday At Hanover

By CHRIS POISSON

A first-year head coach. Two freshmen pitchers. A sophomore hitting machine. And a junior who hasn't played baseball in two years. There's some young blood on the Quincy High School baseball team, to say the least.

Two days before the pre-season started, Michael Draiccho was named the interim varsity coach when Bob Sylvia decided to step down and coach at the junior varsity level. Draiccho should make a smooth transition as he coached the JV squad last season.

"[Bob Sylvia] made the right decision for him at this point in his career," Draiccho said. "He wanted to step down and be part of the program still. He's helping me out a lot, which is great."

New coach. New era. Draiccho inherits a team that went 1-15 last season and he has the task of rebuilding the program. He has the support of athletic director Ed Miller and principal Robert Keuther and, more importantly, he understands that this isn't a FedEx job — he can't deliver the goods over night.

"Our team goal, to be honest with you, and me being a first-year coach, is to try to improve these kids and hope we can develop legitimate baseball players out of them," Draiccho said. "It's going to take a while. I know that."

"We have a very young team," he added. "These kids are working very hard. The harder we work, the more we're going to improve. And I think I have the right kids to do that. I really do. I'm optimistic. I think we're going to win some games."

Quincy opens its season tomorrow (Friday) at Hanover at 3:30 p.m. as it takes its first step towards turning things around.

Unlike its city rival, Quincy doesn't have a strong and deep pitching staff — not yet anyway. Draiccho plans to pitch just about everybody and give the younger kids some experience for next season.

Seniors John Cooper and captain Joe Tower will see some time on the hill, but Draiccho is looking for juniors John Lupo, Peter Turowski, Dave Centrella and Mark Robertson to make some strides on the mound this year.

Robertson, who plays basketball and football, hasn't strapped on the leather or swung the lumber in two years. But he's a welcomed addition because of his athleticism.

"The bright light is the kid pitching on the mound right now," said Draiccho as Robertson was pitching in Monday afternoon's scrimmage against North Quincy. "It's a great addition to get an athlete like him coming out. He's going to make a big difference. He'll be a starter. He can play pretty much anywhere."

But the future of the staff rests on the arms of two freshmen southpaws — Anthony Boyle and Rob Muollo. They'll both get starts at the JV level and they'll also get some innings with the big club.

"I'm hoping Lupo and Turowski come around," Draiccho said. "Hopefully, Robertson will do a good job. And if we can get those two freshmen going, I think it's a way we can build the program back up. All those guys are going to return next year and we also have some guys at the JV level."

Defensively, Quincy will make some mistakes but it should be OK. The catching may be a problem. Right now, Draiccho will go with juniors Brad DiMartino and Joe Duffy behind the plate, and he can also go with Robertson or Turowski.

"The whole mystery is our catching," Draiccho said. "We're going to have to work at the catching spot."

Centrella is solid at third base, but the rest of the infield will be juggled around with seniors Brendan Donahue and Dan Long getting their share of work. The strength of the defense is in the outfield with senior captain Tim Pezzulo in center and junior Dan Dorsey and Turowski at his sides.

"With those three guys out in the outfield, it's going to be tough not to track down a ball," Draiccho said.

As for the offense, Quincy is counting on Centrella to have another strong year with the stick. But the kid who may do the most damage from the plate is sophomore Dave Germain.

"He's going to hit," Draiccho said. "He was the best hitter at the junior varsity level last year where he hit .600 as a freshman."

So it will be the development of the young guns — the Germaines, Centrellas, Turowskis, Robertsons, Boyles, Muollos — that will determine the success of the 2000 season, and next season.

"The strength we have to look at is that we are a young team," Draiccho said. "It's a future thing. And that's not to take anything away from the seniors. You have two guys that have played a lot in Pezzulo and Tower, the captains. They're going to emerge as leaders on this team and help the young guys."

Raiders Relying On Seniors To Lead Way

Host Canton, Brighton This Week

With game shows sprouting up on television like spring flowers, here's a trivia question to get you thinking about the North Quincy High School baseball team and the 2000 season:

Which of the following is NOT true about last season?

A) its run production had trouble winning soccer games; b) its pitching staff was Atlanta-like; c) it made the postseason; d) it had a rookie head coach; e) all are true.

Answer: C.

After starting last season 2-0, North Quincy finished 8-12 and found itself sitting in the stands, rather than on the diamond, when tournament play rolled around. The team had outstanding pitching, but an inconsistent offense which led to some one-run losses.

So what's in store for this season? Much of the same. There are familiar faces as 11 players return from last year's club, including nine seniors which will be counted on to lead North Quincy to the promise land.

"We're relying strongly on the seniors," said second-year coach Larry Taglieri. "The senior leadership that we have, we're banking on their experience equating to a little more success on the field for us."

North Quincy opened its season yesterday (Wednesday) at home against Canton, which it beat, 11-8, in last year's opener. Tomorrow NORTH QUINCY COACH Larry Taglieri (center) and senior captains Joe Flynn (left) and Bill O'Toole will try to lead the Red Raiders back to the postseason.

(Quincy Sun Photos/Tom Gorman)

(Friday), it hosts Brighton at Adams Field at 3:30 p.m.

The strength of this ballclub will be its pitching. The three-man starting rotation from last year is back with another year under its belt. The trio — seniors Rob Celata, Matt McCann and junior Keith Doherty — has been together on the varsity level for three years and has the ability to carry this team on its arms.

But North Quincy doesn't just have three aces in its hand — it has a full house. The Red Raiders have plenty of hurlers should there be an injury or a rough outing by one of the Big 3. Seniors Brian Deptula, T.J. Bell, Dan O'Toole and co-captain Joe Flynn are all capable of stepping on the mound and getting batters out.

"Those guys could pitch on any team in this league," Taglieri said. "Pitching is the strong point of our club. Anybody would want the pitching staff that we have at North Quincy High School. We're going to play solid defense and we're going to pitch well."

Defensively, the Red Raiders can flash some leather. Guys are still battling for positions but a couple spots are a sure bet. When not on the hill, Doherty will be anchoring the outfield as the starting center fielder, and senior John Gavin has made a smooth transition from third to second base.

Bell, Celata and O'Toole will share first base duties and senior co-captain Bill O'Toole and Deptula will split time behind the plate. Senior and three-year varsity member Chris Walsh will see time at shortstop and in left field.

Juniors Sean Crowley, Chris Doherty and Chris Lockhead will be in the infield, and junior Mike Keddy and sophomore Pat Bregoli are battling for the right field job.

So the Red Raiders have strong pitching and a flashy defense, but the million dollar question is who's going to hit?

"That's what it is going to come down to," Taglieri said. "We have to hit. They know it. I know it. But I don't want them going up there thinking about it. We have to prove that we can hit."

"Last year our run production was down and we lost some 3-1, 3-2, 5-4 games. If we can put some runs up we're going to win our fair share of ballgames this year."

North Quincy can't rely on one or two guys to shoulder the offense. All 15 players will have to contribute if this team wants to put some runs on the board to support its pitching staff. "All the guys are going to be counted on to hit," Taglieri said.

The Red Raiders came up short of the playoffs last year and they're determined to qualify in 2000.

"The team has its sight set on the tournament," Taglieri said. "There's no doubt about it. We sat down and talked about team goals and that's what the guys want. That's what they're shooting for."

SENIOR MATT MCCANN fires to first base during a recent practice. But it will be his throws from the mound as a starting pitcher that North Quincy will rely on.

JUNIOR KEITH DOHERTY takes his cut at a recent practice. Doherty anchors the starting pitching staff, but he'll also be counted on to contribute with his bat.

SENIOR BRIAN DEPTULA is a member of North Quincy's strong pitching staff and will see some relief work this season.

A Thought For The Week

Couldn't it be said that there is greatness all around us - if we only had eyes to see it? Couldn't it be said that frequently the potentially great people are not outstanding in any way?

The baby a mother holds in her arms may be a leader in the world in some future decades... The businessman who knows how to get along with people and bring contending groups together is a person marked for recognition and praise in future years.

Couldn't it be said that greatness is not primarily a matter either of birth or position - it is a matter of sincerity, honesty and generosity? There is a lot more greatness in our midst than we are able to see or willing to admit as greatness. The time to be great is right now. The way to be great is to do little things in a great fashion.

Heads of state all over the world are people of importance and influence - but not all of them are great. There are great people occupying thrones and people even greater who are seldom out of the kitchen or the office. It would be wonderful if the scales were to drop from our eyes and we would behold greatness as it manifests itself around us.

Couldn't it be said that the place to be great is where we happen to be? The time to be great is right now...

William Esselstyn, Mary Kuropatkin New Vice Presidents At Colonial Federal

Colonial Federal Savings Bank President and CEO Robert Guarneri announces William Esselstyn and Mary Kuropatkin have been named vice presidents at the local mutual bank.

"Bill Esselstyn was instrumental in our successfully preparing for Y2K," Guarneri said. "And, given the importance of technology to Colonial Federal moving forward, it was clear that he is the perfect choice to be our first-vice president of Information Services."

Naming Mary Kuropat-kin, vice president of Retail Banking, was also an obvious choice, Guarneri said. "She makes a very hectic job look easy," he said.

Esselstyn joined Colonial Federal in 1987. A graduate of Eastern Nazarene College, he serves as treasurer and church board member at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene.

Kuropatkin joined Colonial Federal in 1985. She is currently working toward a business degree at Emmanuel College.

With full-service offices in Quincy, Weymouth and Holbrook, Colonial Federal Savings Bank has been a "neighborhood bank" since 1889. All deposits are insured by the FDIC.

The phone number connecting all offices is 617-471-0750.

Community Policing, or I wouldn't have sent the money down," Sheets said.

Proponents of the measure, who successfully moved the matter out of the finance committee with a 7-2 vote, countered McCauley's charges and said the need for a captain to run the city's Community Policing Program, and not political motivations, was behind the unusual move to override a committee chairman's wishes.

"You shouldn't pre-judge us on why we made our decisions," said Councillor Timothy Cahill, whose motion to bring the matter out of committee was seconded by Councillor Gregory Hanley. "As a former chairman of Finance, I realize this is unique, but we are a group of nine. No one councillor can control debate for more than two weeks at a time."

At issue is whether a sixth captain's position is being created solely to create openings at the level of sergeant and lieutenant.

Kevin Madden, director of Personnel for the city, explained the state's certified civil service promotions lists for sergeants and lieutenants have already expired while the promotions list for captains will not expire until 2001.

More importantly, however, the city has requisition lists used for promotion which must be used within three weeks or become invalid. Even with a granted extension, the requisition lists for all three positions expire April 7, not affecting the list for captains but effectively invalidating the names currently up for the positions of lieutenant and sergeant.

The recent retirement of Capt. Donald Riley, who was in charge of the city's Community Policing efforts, coupled with the additional captain's position demands that two lieutenants be promoted to captain, two sergeants be promoted to lieutenant, and two officers be promoted to sergeant.

Patrolmen, Madden said, are usually brought on the force as a group.

John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary, said that the new captain's position would result in one less patrolman than budgeted (166), but not one less patrolman on the street during any given time because shifts would be arranged accordingly.

Hanley, who sponsored the measure, said the sixth captain realizes a campaign promise he made to Community Policing, especially in the Germantown and Houghs Neck neighborhoods. A captain in charge of community policing, Hanley argued, would lend enough weight to effectively combat drug problems, youth crime, and other neighborhood problems.

Councillors Joseph Newton, Patrick McDermott, and Michael D'Amico echoed Hanley's stance that Community Policing had been proven a success and deserved a high level of commitment. Councillor Daniel Raymondi, a long-time advocate of Community Policing, said he had been in favor of putting a captain in charge of Community Policing for the past four years. What's new, Raymondi said, was that Quincy Police Chief Thomas Frane was also in favor of the decision.

McCauley disputed whether Chief Frane was really in support of the measure, saying the chief's written rationale clearly stated the proposal was not initiated by him. "He's doing a little dance," McCauley said.

McCauley also called the decision to have a captain replace a lieutenant in an administrative role "a nice trick" although he did not elaborate. It was that administrative shift which originally created the void at the top of community policing.

McCauley put the responsibility for the situation squarely on the shoulders of Mayor James Sheets. "He's the guy I blame because he's the one who has to set the policy," McCauley said. "McCauley offered this solution for putting a captain in charge of Community Policing without adding a new position: 'Name a new captain to replace Capt. Riley or juggle your captains.'"

The new position, McCauley said, would cost the current appropriation of $30,000 approved Monday night and $120,000 annually beginning next year. Factoring in the subsequent promotions and raises, McCauley estimated a $400,000 or more expense over the next few years.

Sheets answered Tuesday by saying he was ready to make a precedent-setting decision to break down the sergeant's tie scores to the hundredth eight weeks ago, regardless of the captain situation.

"We've never had a situation with a rounded test score tie with men sworn in the same year, same month, same day," the mayor said. "I agree with Councillor McCauley on one thing: the responsibility does rest here. I made the decision that we need a captain in charge of Community Policing."

Council President Paul Harold voted in favor of the sixth captain but against moving the matter out of committee, saying that it went against the spirit of the entire committee system.

GETTING PUMPED!

Few things are more aggravating than getting into a car that cranks but fails to start. When the odometer reads in the neighborhood of 100,000 miles, the source of the no-start problem may well be the electric fuel pump. It may no longer be capable of pushing fuel forward with the sufficient pressure. Other symptoms, short of failure to start, include momentary engine cut-out, hesitation, low power and stalling. If the fuel pump is the culprit (after ruling out the spark plugs and the camshaft as possible sources), it is likely that the fuel filter is plugged with debris. As a consequence, the fuel pump has had to work harder, which has resulted in its premature demise.

Have Combined 110 Years Experience Standing Room Only As 6 Promoted In Police Dept.

Six members of the Quincy Police Department with a combined 110 years of experience are wearing shiny new promotional badges this week.

It was standing-room-only in the City Council chambers last Thursday as family, friends, and colleagues attended the swearing-in ceremonies.

The six officers and their new ranks: William Falco and James McNeil, to captain; John Kelly and John Dougan, to lieutenant; and Thomas Corliss and Kevin Tobin, to sergeant.

Mayor James Sheets called the officers "outstanding individuals" and praised both the department in general and Chief Thomas Frane in particular, saying much of the city's quality of life depended on their efforts.

The mayor also noted the dramatic change in police work over the last few decades, from apprehension and enforcement to prevention. "It's much cheaper to prevent crime than to apprehend and prosecute," Sheets said.

With that in mind, Sheets commended the city's recent Community Policing efforts and reaffirmed his support

D'Amico Takes Heat On His Top $19,030

Council Mailing Costs Running Nearly $50,000

By CRAIG SALTERS

From July 1 of 1999 until the budget ran out April 5 of 2000, the City Council spent $32,505.44 on postage for mailings over 500 pieces.

Add the envelope, paper and processing, and labor costs and the total rises to $43,869.05.

Add to that a $5,000 emergency appropriation passed at last week's council meeting and the grand total comes to $48,869.05.

And that figure does not take into account mailings of less than 500 pieces or the fact that the fiscal year doesn't end until June 30.

These facts and figures came from Charles Phelan, director of Data Processing, whose office handles council mailings of over 500 pieces, with mailings less than 500 handled by the council office staff.

Phelan addressed a meeting of the City Council's Ordinance Committee Monday night as councillors debated a proposal by Council President Paul Harold to create individual postage accounts with set limits for councillors.

Currently postage costs come out of the Treasury budget and there are no limits for councillors.

Phelan provided a complete breakdown for mailings over 500 pieces, including the exact amounts (postage & costs) for each individual councillor.

Councillor Michael D'Amico, who was forced to defend his mailings after arriving late from a community meeting in his ward, topped the list at $19,030.08.

Other councillors on the list, in order of total expense, were: Bruce Ayers, $4,518.08; Daniel Raymondi, $4,019.24; Timothy Cahill, $3,756.61; Patrick McDermott, $3,576.28; Stephen Durkin, $3,459.90; and Gregory Hanley, $1,072.73.

Harold, Councillor Frank McCauley, and Councillor Joseph Newton are not on the list because they have not had mailings of over 500 pieces.

The Ordinance Committee did not vote on the issue but agreed to re-convene before next week's council meeting in the hopes of reaching a consensus.

The compromise proposal most discussed Monday night was a Raymond plan where ward councillors would receive $7,000 per year, instead of Harold's proposed $3,000, and Councillors-at-large would re-

Hanley Seeks Vital Center At Former Boat Yard

Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley wants to transform the former Hurley's Boat Yard, at the basin of Sea St. at the Quincy Yacht Club, into a vital center for both the city and the Houghs Neck community.

It will take time, Hanley acknowledges, but he envisions sub-dividing the currently unoccupied shell at Hurley's and creating offices for the city's dive team, harbormaster, and special operations unit, as well as an office for Community Policing and space for Houghs Neck community groups.

The idea, said Hanley, is a significant community and police presence.

To do that, Hanley has

been conducting preliminary meetings with the various groups as well as with Mayor James Sheets, gathering input and enlisting support for what Hanley calls a long-term effort to create a "sustainable" presence at the site.

"There's no rush," said Hanley. "What we want is a brand new facility at the end of five years."

Hanley said he would meet again with the mayor in the next few weeks to discuss initial funding for the project. Eventually, Hanley wants a combination of public and private financing at the facility.

The city, Hanley said, signed a five-year lease in 1999 with the MDC, the site's current owner.

Hanley credits former Ward 1 Councillor and City Council President Peter Kolson with the original plan to acquire the former of an officer with a captain's rank to run the program.

Chief Frane also made remarks, thanking the mayor for his support of the department regardless of political pressures. "He's always stood up for us," Frane said.

Frane added that the six officers promoted that day had a combined total of 110 years of experience, contributing leadership to what he called, "the finest police department in Massachusetts, in my somewhat prejudiced view."

Ward 1 Councilor

Gregory Hanley, chairman of the Public Safety Committee and staunch advocate of a sixth police captain for Community Policing, recalled the difference police officers made in directing his own life as a youth in Germantown.

Hanley singled out Officer Paul Quinn, past president of the Quincy Patrol Officers Association, as someone who took an active role in the neighborhoods before the term "Community Policing" had even been coined.

Past QPD officers were not forgotten at the event. Mayor Sheets began the ceremonies with a moment of silence for retired Quincy Police Officer Anthony Pollara, a 32-year veteran who died April 3. Hanley called the audience's attention to a plaque and grassy mall just outside city hall honoring former QPD Capt. William McIntyre, father of former mayor James McIntyre.

Live up to that standard, Hanley urged the promoted officers.

Former Mayor and current Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin was given the honor of swearing in the two new sergeants, one of which was Kevin Tobin, his nephew.

Fair Split Debated Raymond: 'Important To Hear Business Leaders On Hotel Tax'

By CRAIG SALTERS

Councillor Daniel Raymond said Tuesday it was important for councillors to pay attention to city business leaders concerning a fair split of the proposed Hotel/Motel occupancy tax.

In fact, Raymond said, last week's City Council public hearing was convened to do just that, even though it was not a legal requirement.

"It's important to listen to the business community because it is the first time the city is entertaining a Motel/Hotel tax," Raymond said.

Raymond, who originally proposed 100 percent of the new tax revenue go towards the purchase of open space in the city, revised the tax so that 10 percent goes toward the promotion of tourism.

At last week's public hearing, business leaders wanted a 30 percent cut for tourism.

But time is of the essence, Raymond warned, since the tax is in the form of a home rule petition which must go before a State Legislature which breaks mid-summer.

"It's important that the council move on it. This was introduced Feb. 7 and there still has been no debate by the full council,"

Raymond said.

The continuation of last week's public hearing was scheduled for Monday night but was cancelled in deference to Councillor Patrick McDermott, who was unable to attend the hearing. The matter will now be discussed by the full council as an April 18 agenda item.

The council's 10/5 speaking limit will be waived but there will be a time limit of one hour on the issue.

Quincy business leaders presented a calm but united front at last week's public hearing to discuss the proposed Motel/Hotel tax.

Citing a dire need for coordinated tourism promotion in the city, business owners asked that 30 percent of expected revenue, rather than the currently proposed 10 percent, be earmarked for that purpose.

The lion's share of the new revenue stream would still fund the purchase and preservation of open space in the city.

In the long run, business leaders promised, the investment would pay for itself and then some.

"All good business plans have a plan B," said Jack McDonald, owner of The Common Market Restaurant in West Quincy, who pointed out tourism was the third largest industry in Massachusetts.

Councillors spoke both for and against the proposed change, as did residents, but the discussion, which will be continued at a later date, was absent any of the angry words and side-taking which marked the city's recent increase in commercial property tax rates in December.

No one, regardless of their stance on percentages, spoke against the tax itself.

"We are missing the boat when it comes to tourism in Quincy," said Robert Galligan, co-owner of the Best Western Adams Inn in North Quincy.

To prove his point, Galligan noted the large number of European guests at the Adams Inn, drawn by room rates lower than those of Boston, who don't know what to do with themselves the day of their flight and Paper is the most valuable item to recycle, reminds Rosemary Nolan, DPW program manager.

Acceptable paper items for recycling include: white and colored office paper; receipts, fax, and telex sheets; interoffice

Legislation Recognizes Official State Korean War Memorial

Legislation has been enacted recognizing the Korean War Memorial located at the Charlestown Navy Yard as the official Korean War Memorial of the Commonwealth, announces Sen. Michael Morrissey.

The Korean War Monument's upkeep is presently funded through annual state budgets. In fiscal year 2000, the Legislature allotted $10,000 for the maintenance of the existing Korean War Memorial, and through this legislation the monument will now be recognized as the official Korean War Memorial of Massachusetts.

Morrissey co-sponsored the legislation that officially recognizes the Korean War Memorial. "This formal recognition of the Korean War Memorial will serve to honor Korean War Veterans as the nation and Commonwealth mark the 50th anniversary of the onset of the Korean War on June 25, 2000," Morrissey said.

4-Year Terms: A Bad Idea

Frank McCauley has had some good ideas during his many years in elective office.

But he just came up with one that isn't.

The same bad one he has come up with for the second time.

He wants four-year terms for the mayor and city councillors and managed to get a home-rule petition calling from them through the City Council on a squeaker 5-4 vote last week.

Fortunately, that vote didn't automatically create those four-year terms.

The petition still has to get through the state Senate and House of Representatives and the governor's office. And, if it does, it will become a ballot question next year.

McCauley, now a councillor, made the same petition attempt as mayor some years ago but it got shot down in the House.

Hopefully, for Quincy's sake, this one will bite the dust, too, either on Beacon Hill or here at the ballot box.

Four-year terms benefit the incumbent serving four-year terms. Not the people.

"The trouble with two-year terms," McCauley has said, "is that you get elected and before you know, it's election time again."

That might be an inconvenience to those in office. But not to the voters who like them to be accountable every two years.

"Four year terms," McCauley says, "would give the mayor and councillors more time to concentrate on their duties and not on running for re-election."

But it would also give them more time for coasting on the job between elections.

Four-year terms are political comfort cushions.

The best argument against four-year terms is electing the wrong mayor. Or the wrong councillor—especially the wrong ward councillor.

Having to wait four years to correct election mistakes is a long wait. Too long.

A mayor and councillors doing their job right should have no fears about facing the jury—the voters—every two years. And shouldn't have to spend a lot of time and money campaigning for re-election.

McCauley's petition -- if successful -- would require a change in Quincy's Plan A charter which is looked upon as the ideal form of city government.

"If it ain't broke, don't fix it," said Tim Cahill, one of the four councillors voting against McCauley's petition.

"This system has worked fine. . . four years is a long time to wait if your (constituents') phone call aren't getting returned."

Dan Raymondi, who also voted against the petition, may have summed it up best in just four words when he called it "The Incumbent Protection Act."

Interestingly, Cahill or Raymondi could be James Sheets's successor in the mayor's office but neither is looking for four-year comfort.

Voting against the petition with them were Council President Paul Harold and Stephen Durkin.

The present two-year term, Durkin said, "keeps you on your toes."

Harold noted that with the recent exception of Weymouth, most towns converting to a city government have two-year and not four-year terms for mayor and councillors.

Sheets, now in his sixth term, obviously has had no problem running every two years.

He is signing the petition, he said, to send it on its way to Beacon Hill as the next step in the process.

But he doesn't say he favors four-year terms. He's willing, he said, to "let the people decide."

That was the reason given by three of the four councillors who sided with McCauley.

Michael D'Amico, Patrick McDermott and Joseph Newton expressed concerns four-year terms would distance councillors from the voters. They, like Sheets, they said, supported the petition to let the people make the call.

But the people didn't ask for the petition. Or to make the decision. There was no public clamor or outcry from them. And, apparently, there wasn't even a request.

It looks strictly like Frank McCauley's baby.

Because of "growing demands" on the mayor and council, he says "the four-year term makes more sense."

He says four-year terms are a state and national trend and the right thing to do.

Well, if they are a trend, a number of towns switching to city government in the past four or five years didn't get the word. They opted for two-year terms. Among the recent: Amesbury, Agawam and Greenfield.

Weymouth is an exception. Not the rule. And there are those on that side of the Fore River bridge who think the four-year terms there are a mistake.

If four-year terms ever become a reality here, they should be limited as to how many a mayor or councillor could serve. Like, maybe two.

Frank McCauley has served the city well as a school committeeman, city councillor and mayor but he is off the track with this home-rule petition.

"The time has come," he says.

Let's hope not, Frank.

He was a wealthy paper merchant with a business in Boston. He kept his boat at the Squantum Yacht Club where he also was Commodore. This estate had over three acres of land surrounded by Waterson and Wollaston Aves., Fenno St. and what is now Greene St.; which had not been built between Waterson and Wollaston Ave. It also included a pond of almost one-acre. Today the pond has been filled in and the land around the perimeter of the estate has been developed into several lots with both apartments and single homes. This driveway, the old stables in the rear and the large house survive. But the house has been divided into apartments and to some degree shows its age.

issues. Officer Don Soutters and Sandy Hovey from the South Shore Elders also spoke on financial safety. Officer Robert Hanna spoke on motor vehicle safety. Officer Tom Collins brought K9 dog Liche and Officer Ryan brought Patriot (a horse).

It was very good and we certainly learned from it.

Responds To Giarratani Letter On USS Salem

Open Letter to Sal Giarratani:

Sal, I have been reading your letters for three years in The Quincy Sun and haven't read any yet that are of any interest or educated value to anyone.

Your comment on the great ship the USS Salem was the last straw.

Calling the Salem the USS Minnow is as low as you can get; I'll bet you are for Jane Fonda. I'm sure the Vets of the Salem would like you to come to their next reunion of the ship and tell them how you feel.

And Sal: keep watching, the Gilligan's Island show is about your speed.

I'd like to say a lot more but I'm sure they can't print it.

Defends Bush Visit To University

Editor, The Quincy Sun: Governor Bush is not my choice for the presidency; Pat Buchanan is. But I feel I ought to write a line or two in his defense against all those who protested his visit to Bob Jones University, criticizing him why did he not tell the students that he disagreed with their criticism of the Catholic Church and their position on interracial dating.

When Governor George W. Bush went to Bob Jones University, he did not accept their invitation in order to criticize them. Gov. Bush went to Bob Jones University in order to inspire them. He went to ask them to line up behind his program. He went to ask them to vote for his program and his philosophy. By asking them to vote for his program, he asked them to abandon theirs. There was no need to say anything else. Gov. Bush did not need to apologize for his visit. If I were he I would have fired all my advisors who advised me to apologize.

Quincy's Yesterdays Three-Alarm Fire Evacuates Lincoln Theater

By PAUL HAROLD

A smoky three-alarm fire hit the Lincoln Theater on Washington St., forcing 100 theater patrons and 40 women bowlers from the building.

Theater owner Alcide Beaumier of Claremont Ave. said that despite the $25,000 damage, he hoped to have the theater re-opened by next week. Most of the damage was to the bowling alleys in the basement that were flooded by water sprayed on the fire in the upstairs auditorium.

There was no panic nor were any patrons injured during the evacuation. The fire was discovered minutes after the start of the feature film, "The Sundowners."

GOAL REACHED FOR TEAM TRIP

Louis Hack, fund chairman for the QHS basketball team, reported that the drive went over the top this week. The 19 team members would visit both New York City and Washington.

James Carter, director of health education for the school system, added his thanks to that of Hack's to all the contributors who helped make this "richly deserved trip" possible.

Contributors listed this week included the Zoia girls, the Papile family, the teachers and students of Central Junior High School and faculty at QHS.

SQUANTUM'S 'OLD FAITHFUL' ERUPTS

Squantum's "old faithful" erupted this week resulting in citizen complaints to city and state health officials. The grease pot was a vent off the beach that allowed the gases to escape from the sewer main that connected Calf Pasture in Dorchester to Moon Island.

Snug Harbor School Participates In 'Read Across America'

The Snug Harbor Community School recently participated in the National Education Association's Read Across America Day.

The event was part of a national celebration of Dr. Seuss's 96th birthday on March 2 to promote reading and adult community involvement for the school's students. Second grade teacher Denise Ready coordinated the activities at the Snug Harbor School.

The staff and students of the Snug Harbor School came together as a community to celebrate "Read Across America Day." Art teacher Kenneth Walsh involved all students in making a bulletin board continuing a large map of the United States. Each time a child read a book, or had a book read by a teacher, a circle with the student's name on it was placed on the map.

In preparation for the event, students in each classroom decorated their door to illustrate their favorite books. These decorations were highly creative and made the school shine!

On the actual day of the event, the school was visited by 25 members of the community who read to all of the classrooms from preschool through grade five. These community members represented the school department, the police department, the fire department, local churches, community and civic groups, city government, the YMCA, Altrusa International of Quincy, and retired employees of the school.

The school also held a pancake breakfast to celebrate the achievements of the "Double Figure Club." Membership to the club requires a students to read and pass a test on 10 or more books from the school's Electronic Bookshelf program. The breakfast was coordinated by Media Specialist Peggy O'Neill with the assistance of Writing Workshop teacher Mary O'Connor.

In the afternoon older students read to younger students as book buddies. Teachers also walked their classes around the building to view the decorated doors.

According to Principal Allan Osborne and Assistant Principal Robert Limoncelli, the event was well received by students, teachers, and the community. Reading is a top priority at Snug Harbor School, they said.

Easter Squash Casserole

For a change this Easter, and with the family's approval, I am preparing a brunch at noon rather than a dinner as per usual.

And our children will have more time to visit their in-laws.

One of the foods that I plan to have with the ham, eggs, sausage and then some will be a praline squash casserole. It can be prepared a day ahead and refrigerated before baking.

Praline Squash Casserole

1 large fresh butternut squash (packaged fresh are usually available)
4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs slightly beaten dash of pepper
Topping
1/2 cup packed brown sugar

1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup chopped walnuts

Cook squash, strain and mash. Add butter, salt and pepper and mix. Add the eggs and mix well. Pour into buttered casserole or small Pyrex square dish. Mix the ingredients for the topping and sprinkle over squash. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. (Since there will be quite a large group at our brunch, I naturally will triple the recipe.)

P.S. In the recent recipe for Fettucini & Trimmings, I sure hope you didn't throw away those clams if you used fresh ones, because of my little play on words using "chuck" instead of "shuck". My cousins Marion and Lou, fans of the recipes, laughingly called this to my attention!

Rick Iacobucci Recognized United Way Presents Award In Memory Of Quincy Native

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay recognized its most dedicated agency speakers for their powerful presentations on the impact of United Way's support on their community, during its second annual Speaker's Bureau Recognition Event recently.

Top honors was an award named for Quincy native Rose Mary Kirwin. Kirwin, who passed away last fall, was born and raised in Quincy. She was a community champion and a true United Way friend. She worked at United Way-affiliate Center House and was United Way's top speaker, sometimes fulfilling up to 40 speaking engagements in a year.

In Kirwin's memory, the United Way presented the first annual Rose Mary Kirwin Award to Sister Barbara Whelan for representing Kirwin's fervor and commitment to the community. Whelan is executive director of Bridge Over Troubled Waters in Boston, a United Way affiliate agency that provides services for run-aways and homeless youth. During the 1999 campaign season, Whelan spoke at over 40 engagements. She also opened the doors of her agency to enable individuals United Way also presented The Pillar Award to five affiliate agency speakers who helped lay the foundation for a successful United Way Campaign. Among the recipients was Quincy resident Rick Iacobucci, of Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts. During the 1999 campaign season, Iacobucci spoke at about 20 engagements.

Throughout the year, United Way's speakers bureau helps potential donors understand the impact of their support to the United Way. Representatives from affiliated agencies deliver presentations at organizations and companies throughout eastern Massachusetts.

Park Dept. Launches 'Environmental Treasures'

The Quincy Park Department is launching an 'Environmental Treasures of Quincy' program to educate residents about the many sensitive and unique environmental areas within Quincy.

In conjunction with Earth Day 2000, the first event will be held April 22. The event is open to the general public at no cost.

Created with the help of resident Sally Wen, who also serves as the chairwoman of the Recycling Commission, the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program will feature an educational tour of a different location each month. A knowledgeable guide will instruct a 1-2 hour educational tour and explanation of the site and its environmental significance.

The first Environmental Treasures program will feature the many gardens at the Adams National Historic Site on Adams Street, including the daffodils which will be in full bloom at this time. The host will be Bob MacKenzie, chief gardener of the Adams National Historic Site, who will conduct a tour of the grounds, discuss "historic gardening", integrated pest management, composting, and answer questions. The walk will begin at 10 a.m. in the event of rain, the event will be postponed to the following Saturday, April 29.

"The city of Quincy is fortunate to possess a tremendously diverse variety of environmentally significant areas. Within our salt marshes, freshwater ponds, rivers and streams, parks, twenty-seven miles of coastline, and the expense of the Blue Hills Reservation are an incredibly unique variety of environmentally significant and delicate areas. An important component of protecting those areas is the education of the public that surrounds and utilizes these areas. Through the Environmental Treasures program, we hope to educate the people of Quincy so that they might develop an appreciation and a sense of ownership for these environmental treasures," said Thomas Koch, Executive Director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments.

Future Environmental Treasures programs will include tours of local salt marshes, coastal areas, the Blue Hills Reservation, Quincy's fresh water resources, bird-watching expeditions, and many other significant environmental areas in Quincy. Some of the walks will be geared specifically toward senior citizens and children.

"Rather than isolating the celebration of Earth Day to one specific day, the Environmental Treasures program will allow us to celebrate Earth Day year-round through these monthly tours," said Owen.

The Park Department is also seeking to organize an Environmental Treasures advisory Council which would meet to help select potential sites for the tours and develop a network of guides and speakers to host the tours. Interested Quincy residents can contact the Quincy Park Department at 376-1254. Space on the Advisory Council is limited and will be assigned by the Quincy Park Department.

For more information on the Environmental Treasures program, call the Park Department at 376-1254.

Earnings Cap Repealed Working Seniors Can Expect Social Security Refunds, Says Delahunt

Congressman William Delahunt projects that more than 22,000 Massachusetts seniors will receive retroactive refunds this spring as a result of legislation, just signed into law, removing the earnings limit on Social Security beneficiaries.

"In addition to refunds, the earnings limit repeal means an increase in benefits starting by June," said Delahunt, who supported the recent legislative effort to lift the cap. As co-chairman of the House Older Americans Caucus, Delahunt championed the rights of older local residents who needed and/or wanted to keep working.

Until now, working seniors were penalized by lower Social Security benefits. Under the old law, those aged 65-69 could earn up to $17,000; but for every three dollars earned above this threshold, they lose one dollar in Social Security benefits.

"The earning test was an anachronism," Delahunt said. "It shortchanged seniors as well as the economy, which is in dire need of the skills and talents of older workers."

The legislation passed last month -- retroactive to Jan. 1, 2000 -- affects 800,000 Americans who are either working or are dependents of workers. In addition, there are another 100,000 who have not filed claims for benefits because of the resulting penalties. The elimination of the earnings test means affected seniors in Massachusetts will receive an average of $6,200 in additional benefits this year -- and that spouses and dependents will receive, on average, an additional

Delahunt said that, with the bill now signed into law, there is no reason for lengthy delay. Each eligible beneficiary should anticipate a retroactive check by June 1, and revised monthly benefit payments thereafter.

The new law repeals the earnings limit for seniors age 65-70. Seniors age 70 and over were already exempt. Beneficiaries between 62 and 64 years old are still subject to the cap.

Social Security Administration officials have requested that beneficiaries wait to be contacted with information about the impending refunds. If affected beneficiaries start calling the agency, the resulting workload could actually delay the processing of the checks.

Today's cars are available as base models that come with an array of standard features. On top of these, buyers can choose options to customize their purchases. Chief among these, in terms of resale value, is an automatic transmission. This feature generally outsells manual transmissions (in models in which both are offered) by about 9 to 1. Air conditioning brings the next highest rate of return in resale value. In fact, it comes standard on most mid-size and luxury cars. Beyond that, such safety components as antilock braking systems (ABS) and traction control are also high-value features. And, side-impact airbags are becoming more widely available. Each of these features speaks to the public's desire for increased convenience, comfort

Impact Quincy Receives Grant To Battle Underage Drinking

Impact Quincy has been awarded a two-year, $250,000 grant to specifically target underage drinking in the city.

A third year and an additional $125,000 is available with federal approval.

The award, which was announced at a City Hall ceremony Friday, will allow Impact Quincy to develop a media campaign using local role models such as Quincy police officers, teachers, and fellow students to curb alcohol use by youth ages 12-17.

"No actors," said Program Manager Alejandro Rivera Friday. "Real names, Real faces."

The media campaign will include newspaper, radio, transit billboards, posters, flyers and television ads.

The non-profit Impact Quincy is a coalition for the prevention of alcohol, tobacco, and other drug problems and is a program of Bay State Community Services.

The grant is funded by the Center of Substance Abuse Prevention and administered by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health as part of its MassCall program.

Quincy was only one of 23 Massachusetts communities to be awarded funding.

ing.

Mayor James Sheets welcomed the news in remarks at Friday's ceremony. "This (grant) allows us to fight the battle against substance abuse, particularly among our youth," Sheets said. "In a very real sense, we're building for the future."

Police Chief Thomas Frane praised Impact Quincy's community-involvement component, emphasizing how well the upcoming media campaign would dovetail with such QPD initiatives as the "Cops in the Shops" program and Community Policing efforts.

"The true fabric of a community is represented in their children," Frane added.

In addition to the immediate goal of reducing underage drinking, Impact Quincy's media campaign hopes to increase community awareness of the issue and change social norms which contribute to the problem.

The larger, community-awareness effort will include educating liquor retailers, offering positive tips for an alcohol-free prom, and encouraging a dialogue between teens and adults on the issue of teen drinking.

Rivera emphasized that the MassCall program, which will be coordinated in all 23 communities by the state DPH, will use "scientifically-validated substance abuse prevention approaches" and, with minor modifications in each community, have goals which can be measured using "a strong evaluative component."

Rivera also stressed the flexibility of the program to allow for input from such sources as Impact Quincy's Advisory Board, the schools, the police, local businesses, and the students themselves. "This is truly a community effort," Rivera said.

The Impact Quincy Advisory Board is represented by the following community systems: Quincy Police Department; Licensing Commission; Quincy Public School; Commission on the Family; Equal Opportunity Office; City Health Department; CHNA 20; Quincy Hospital.

Quincy Mental Health; Cambridge Prevention Center; South Shore YMCA; Intercity Council; Father Bill's Shelter for the Homeless; Lions Club of Quincy; Quincy Cable TV; Germantown Neighborhood Center; Germantown Human Relations Committee; and Harvard Vanguard.

Mystery, anyone?

Two stone carved globes once adorned the entrance to North Quincy High School but are no longer there.

Anyone know where they might be?

Executive Director Sharon Beals and members of the Beechwood Aviation History Information Center are trying to learn their whereabouts.

No, the two globes were never airborne.

But there is a connection to the Beechwood Aviation History Center.

Joseph Delear, father of Frank Delear, one of the original contributors to the Aviation History Center was the stonemason for the globes.

The Delear family lived in Squantum from 1919 to 1946.

Frank and his brother,

Walter, watched their father carve the world continents and attended North Quincy Junior High School (now North Quincy High School) when the globes were placed at the school's entrance believed to be 1926 or 1927.

Beals says if anyone knows what happened to the globes she would appreciate a call. She can be reached at 471-5712.

Stop & Shops Raise $3,200 For Two Local Food Banks

More than $3,200 was recently raised at two local Stop & Shop Supermarkets for two Quincy-based food banks.

Fundraisers at the Stop & Shop in North Quincy generated $1,855 for Interfaith Social Services. The Stop & Shop located on Southern Artery raised $1,387.

Each store coordinated fundraising events such as barbecues, carnivals and bake sales. The fundraising drives were part of the supermarket's "Food for Friends" program.

Last year, Stop & Shop donated more than $12 million in products, cash and services to The Second Harvest National Food Bank Network. The total donation equates to 32 million meals.

Many of these funds were generated at the grassroots level by the efforts of associate volunteers participating in programs like Food for Friends.

The Food for Friends has three components: a chain-wide food drive with participation by local media; a supplier supported circular page; and store-level fundraisers, where each store "adopts" a local agency that feeds the hungry.

Home Depot 6 A.M. Opening Put On Hold

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Even after a plea from Sue Silva, manager of Home Depot requesting a permit to open the store at 6 a.m. for a trial period from April to October, it did not sway the License Board at Tuesday's meeting as they continued the hearing until a Monitoring Committee meets with Home Depot.

Silva explained that the reason for the request for an early opening was so that contractors would not have to "fight early morning traffic, could arrive early, pick up their material and move on". She said many of them now are parked about 6:30 a.m. just waiting for the doors to open.

She said only the lumber part of the store will be open and not the rest of the store.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the License Board does not have jurisdiction over the hours of operation, but instead the request belongs with the city council.

Silva said that most of the other Home Depot stores including those in Rockland and Avon are open at 6 a.m. with some of them open 24 hours.

Gorman said there was deterioration outside the store, but complimented Silva on a "vast improvement" inside the store.

Assistant building inspector Roger Wallin, sitting in for Walter White said the store was in "extremely poor maintenance" and that the running of the trucks inside the store when crowded presented a "safety hazard".

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said he didn't think a change of hours was necessary stating that the 7 a.m. opening was working.

He added that Home Depot is in the "center of the neighborhood" and said he had received many complaints that the "upkeep has been deplorable."

Silva said a chain link fence was being constructed near the apartment house which abuts Home Depot.

D'Amico said he will set up a meeting with Home Depot and his Monitoring Committee including some of the abutters who are employed at home Depot.

Silva said she would be willing to meeting at least once a month with the committee.

Chairman Joseph Shea, who said even though Home Depot was a "success story" and has given to charitable events, said he would send a copy of the Planned United Development with a request to clean up Bates Ave. before any action is taken.

Shea said that Silva's request for the trial period from April to October would even be more noisier to neighbors since windows are open in the summer.

Silva has been manager of the Quincy store since last August and had previously been at the Rockland Home Depot.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said the License Board in the future, should be made aware of any change of managers.

Board Gives Owner Week To Clean Up Junk Yard

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Following a non-compliance order from the Department of Environment Protection (DEP), the License Board Tuesday voted unanimously to give Sugarman's junk yard a week to clean up his property of debris inside and outside the building or his scrap metal license will be rescinded.

The motion was made by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, and seconded by Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

The DEP had given David Sugarman, the owner of the junk yard seven days of receipt of their letter dated March 6 to comply with the requirements. These included activities at the location in non-compliance with one or more laws, regulations, orders, licenses, permits or approvals enforced by the department.

However, according to Gallahue, Sugarman had not done so and said the DEP was scheduled to re-inspect the junk yard in about two weeks.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said Sugarman was in violation of the city ordinance and has been using his yard as a "transfer station," which needs a special permit, rather than the business of scrap metal, the only license D'Amico said that Sugarman has.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he could not believe that a family business such as Sugarman's for so many years, did not understand the non-compliance letter from the DEP.

D'Amico said Sugarman has been a "thorn on his side from Day 1", and that he was "destroying the quality of life in the neighborhood."

Gorman said Sugarman cannot operate receiving solid waste at that site because his scrap metal license was issued for the receiving of rags and metal only.

Neighbors, who are due in court with Sugarman today (Thursday) over the hours of operation, echoed frustration over the many years they have complained also about dirt, soot, clouding their area.

Shea, who recounted another case of a junk yard "down the street" from Sugarman's, which had resulted in a court case that has taken five years to resolve costing the city a lot of time and money.

He said the junk yard owned by Henry Gregoire, who still owes the city a quarter of a million dollars in taxes is finally going to vacate.

D'Amico recounted how Sugarman posted a "for sale" sign on his property that had some people "wishful thinking" only to begin operating a different kind of business. He said Sugarman, after four years of non-compliance is saying "I can get away with this".

Gorman noted that for years, Centre Street was the "hub" of industry from monument companies to stone cutters, but now that Crown Colony has been established, Sugarman, now the only business in the area is practically "extinct."

Atty. David Flaherty, representing Sugarman said he believed that Sugarman was still in the business of scrap metal, with only a few private customers. He said the public did not have access to the yard, but this statement drew negative reaction from the abutters as well as D'Amico. Flaherty said Sugarman is in the process of removing full containers of trash from his property.

After the meeting, neighbors said as they were walking out of City Hall that they didn't hold much hope in the board's decision, as Sugarman has promised for years to comply, but then reverts back to the same violations.

Sugarman is supposed to attend the board meeting on April 18, which Shea promised the neighbors to be held promptly at 10 a.m.

Supermarkets To Face Penalty On Stray Shopping Carts

The City Council recently passed a resolution to fine supermarkets whose carts are left in city neighborhoods and must be returned by the DPW.

The resolve, which passed unanimously, asks City Solicitor Stephen McGrath to draft an order to fine and/or assess a charge to supermarkets whose carts are found in the neighborhoods "for DPW services in collecting said carts."

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin co-sponsored the resolution along with Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, who has worked on similar solutions to the problem in the past.

The carts, Durkin said, present and ongoing problem and detract from the residential neighborhoods.

McDermott agreed, adding that, although the problem may seem insignificant at first, the carts were making areas "unsightly."

boat yard, but said now is the time to take the next steps of planning and financing.

If the renovated boat yard becomes a reality, Hanley said, it will become part of an overall strategy to revamp the waterfront area.

For instance, Hanley said he has been working with such groups as Community Policing, DARE, Quincy Recreation Dept., and the Beaches Commission on projects like a proposed in-line skating park at Brill Field.

Hanley said the overall cost of the in-line skating park was estimated at $109,000. He said $25,000 was available from Stop &

Shop mitigation funds and $26,000 could be shaved off the estimate by having the Parks Department handle construction, leaving a little over $50,000 in needed financing.

Another part of the plan, Hanley said, involves improvements to Perry Beach.

Bureau Drawer Thrift Shop Bag Sale

The Bureau Drawer Thrift Shop, 776 Hancock St., Quincy, will hold a $3 a Bag Sale Wednesday, April 12 through Saturday, April 15 and Wednesday and Thursday, April 19 and 20.

The thrift shop is open

Hanley said the point of all these improvements was quite simple: "To get kids off the corner. To give them something to do both day and night."

Centrally located on the Fore River, the former Hurley's boat yard is Quincy's only public boat landing.

Wednesday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Council Mailing Costs Running Nearly $50,000

ceive $500 per year, instead of Harold's proposed $1,500.

Also, Raymond's plan would allow councillors to acquire postage funds from other sources and roll over money not spent in one given year to the next.

Harold said he was willing to discuss the actual dollar amounts on the proposed ordinance but reiterated his position that individual accounts with set limits were the best way to deal with a problem that seemed out of control.

"I'm looking for a management tool to handle this issue," Harold said of the accounts. "If it's up to me (as Council President) to make a decision of each mailing, not a lot of mail is going to leave this office."

McCauley agreed that the mailings had reached a crisis point. "The mailings are way out of hand," said McCauley. "And, frankly, these mailings seem somewhat self-serving. I've noticed that the mailings tailed off dramatically right after the November election."

But many councillors defended the mailings as absolutely essential to informing the public and placed most of the blame for out-of-control mailings at the doorstep of Councillor D'Amico.

D'Amico's name directly.

McCauley himself blamed D'Amico when he pointed out D'Amico's 50,978 mailings and asked, "C'mon, how do you justify that?"

D'Amico was adamant that his mailings were critical for keeping good lines of communication in his ward, especially during a time of increased development at sites such as Crown Colony.

"I wouldn't have changed one of those mailings," D'Amico said, adding that many council members don't see the behind-the-scenes work that goes into his many community meetings or the thousands of people who've participated in local government because they had been informed on a certain issue, such as a recently proposed pawn shop in West Quincy.

D'Amico said he had been looking into ways to make the mailing system more efficient. He mentioned his 200-member e-mail bank, more bulk mailing, and a "reverse 911 system" used in Cambridge where residents of a particular area receive automated phone messages.

"We can make it better, and I challenge you all to do that," D'Amico said.

Although Raymond proposed the amendment to Harold's original proposal, he made it clear he was no fan of limiting legitimate council mailings.

"Why are we at the point where we're trying to limit the City Council from doing its job?" Raymond asked. "We are the closest elected officials to the people of this city and one of our most basic functions is to notify people of the things around them. That's our job."

Raymond echoed earlier statements by other councillors that the clear majority of councillors were "acting in good faith" in terms of mailing costs. He also said ward councillors had no "crystal ball" to predict how issues like Highpoint would arise in a ward during a given year.

Councillor Durkin asked for more leadership on the issue but said the Council President should not decide on individual mailings. If that were the case, Durkin warned, political considerations could enter into the equation.

Cost-cutting measures were proposed by Newton, who asked if some future mailings could be put on generic postcards or letters. He also floated the idea of tri-folding to do away with the need for some envelopes.

Reached at his office Tuesday, Mayor James Sheets applauded Council President Harold's efforts to manage the situation but emphasized just how important mailings were to councillors.

Said Sheets: "Having been a ward councillor for 16 years, the ability to communicate by mail with your constituents is your lifeblood for keeping people informed. I think the councillors, particularly the ward councillors, should have adequate postage, and they are the most qualified to decide that amount."

"You really shouldn't cut a councillor's postage unless there is true evidence of abuse and I've never really seen it. It's money well spent."

At the meeting Phelan also informed councillors that the mailing database is updated monthly from the voter information system and that pre-sorted mailings from his office cost 30.5 cents in postage, as opposed to the usual 33 cents.

Council members also requested costs for mailings under 500 pieces from the council office and mailing cost averages for the past three years.

Trios and a certain person, place, thing or event.

Clues to the answers will be displayed on windows of QCBPA members along Hancock St. in case you need a little extra help in putting the connections together.

The contest forms have been distributed to the schools and one appears below on this page.

Once the form with your answers is filled out, it may be left at one of the QCBPA businesses displaying an identifying answer card.

It may also be left at the QCBPA office, 1416 Hancock St. or The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St.

Deadline for turning in your entry is Monday, May 1.

The winner of the four Britney Spears Concert tickets will be drawn from the correct entries Friday, May 5 at The Sun office.

The concert will be Monday, Aug. 28 at 7:30 p.m. at the Tweeter Center in Mansfield.

Each child is entitled to only one entry but each child in a family may enter.

Entry forms were distributed through the Quincy schools this week. They may also be obtained at the QCBPA office or at The Quincy Sun.

"The QCBPA is sponsoring this event to encourage local families to discover Quincy's rich Presidential history and to rediscover Quincy Center," said Richard Gormley of Fleet Bank, the association's president.

"The children and their families will have the educational pleasure of solving this Presidential Tribridge as well as visiting our fine stores and dining spots in Quincy Center.

"This family activity also mirrors a national trend that encourages local residents to discover the fun of community shopping."

Christmas Parade Theme To Be Selected Friday

The Quincy Festival Committee will meet Friday at 7 p.m. in the Park and Recreation conference room, 100 Merrymount Parkway, to select a theme for the 48th annual Quincy Christmas Parade.

For the past several weeks those in the Quincy-South Shore area were invited to submit suggested themes for the annual holiday parade which is to be held Sunday, Nov. 26.

This year's parade, the first of the new millennium, offers a wide latitude in selecting a parade theme.

Selecting an appropriate theme at this time of the year gives organizations and special marching units ample time to plan their float entries. Prizes are awarded float entries in the various categories based on the parade theme.

The contest winner will receive an appreciation gift and be invited to ride in the parade as a guest of honor.

Be A Big Winner!

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Expectant Mothers Need Calcium While Pregnant

Before birth, a baby relies on its mother's blood supply for vital nutrients necessary for growth. Consequently, health experts advise expectant mothers to get adequate amounts of vitamins and minerals to stay healthy and possibly prevent pregnancy-related complications. One of the most important nutrients needed during pregnancy is calcium. The Institute of Medicine reports that a developing fetus uses as much as 250 to 300mg of calcium daily from the mother's blood supply.

"Because most women are only getting half of the recommended daily amount of calcium, it's especially important for them to meet the 1,000mg requirement while expecting," says Nancy E. Sandbach, MS, RD, LDN, director of nutrition education for New England Dairy & Food Council. "The nutritional demands on pregnant women's bodies are especially great during the last trimester when a baby's skeletal growth peaks and teeth begin to form. If a mom-to-be does not consume adequate calcium in her diet, the baby will rob calcium from her bones."

All women ages 19-50, not just those who are pregnant or lactating, need 1,000mg of calcium per day. Yet, USDA statistics show that nine out of 10 women fall short of this recommended value. Calcium helps keep bones strong and allows for normal blood clotting and muscle contraction. "A woman who does not consume enough calcium is at greater risk of developing osteoporosis later in life. Delicious, natural sources of calcium such as cheese and other dairy foods can make meeting calcium needs easy."

Recent studies suggest that proper calcium intake during pregnancy can help women maintain normal blood pressure—pregnancy-induced high blood pressure (hypertension) occurs in 10 to 20 percent of all pregnancies. Meeting calcium needs also may help reduce the risk of preeclampsia, a potentially life-threatening condition caused by hypertension most likely to occur during the late stages of pregnancy. The Journal of the American Medical Association reported that increasing calcium intake to 1,200 to 1,500mg per day could help reduce this risk.

Get Empowered While Pregnant

Women's overall nutrient needs are much higher during pregnancy—a main reason doctors prescribe vitamin and mineral supplements. "That shouldn't create a false sense of security or diminish the importance of eating right," Sandbach says. "When a woman's primary calcium source is dairy products, not only does she receive calcium, but also several other important nutrients such as protein, phosphorus and riboflavin."

Dairy foods can be an easy and delicious way to meet calcium needs before, during and after pregnancy. Cheese packs a one-two punch with its high calcium content and good taste. Just one ounce, or one slice, of cheese adds 200mg of calcium to meals or snacks—that equals 20 percent of the recommended daily calcium intake.

Pregnancy Considerations
"Pregnant women should be more aware of pre-existing conditions or new reactions to foods since they are considered an at-risk population," comments Sandbach. She advises women to talk with their doctor or registered dietitian about special nutritional concerns early in their pregnancy. One special consideration may be the inability to tolerate lactose—the sugar found in some milk and dairy products. Research shows that if a woman is lactose intolerant, she may actually experience an improvement in tolerance to the lactose in dairy foods while pregnant. Aged cheeses like Cheddar and Swiss contain minimal amounts of lactose and are easily consumed.

Chiropractic Update

Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

ARM & SHOULDER PAIN

Arm and shoulder pain can have a number of causes, but the large percentage of cases are caused by misalignment of one or more spinal bones (vertebrae), improper posture, spinal curvatures, occupational stresses, or injury to the spine. Any of these conditions may cause irritation or impingement of the nerves supplying the arms, shoulder and neck. Arm and shoulder pain does not always mean trouble where the pain is felt.

The degree of pain may vary between slight and intermittent, to excruciating. But do not be fooled by the degree of pain; sometimes a slight pain goes along with a serious condition while intense pain may be a symptom of nothing more than temporary muscle soreness caused by a weekend of unusual activity.

It should be apparent to anyone that arm and shoulder pain may indicate a serious condition. But whether the problem is serious or not, the pain can become quite debilitating. Fortunately, the doctor of chiropractic is eminently qualified to correct arm and shoulder problems. The chiropractors education and experience have been directed to such problems that involve the spine, nerves, muscles and joints of the human body.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Raymondi: 'Hear Business Leaders On Hotel Tax'

are completely unaware of Quincy's 17 historical sites, including the nation's first railroad, the nation's first blast furnace, and the birthplaces of two American presidents.

Meanwhile, Galligan said, he has no maps or brochures to hand them.

Donald Uvanitte, chairman of Quincy 2000, said he was disturbed that users of the Harbor Ferry service were greeted with pamphlets touting the town of Salem but nothing promoting Quincy sites. "That is unconscionable," Uvanitte said.

The town of Salem came up again when McDonald informed councillors that the Adams Mansion received 50,000 visitors per year while Salem received over 1 million visitors annually. Salem, McDonald said, had an Office of Tourism with a three-member staff and a $250,000 budget.

Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000, echoed Galligan's earlier claim that $110,000, roughly the amount tourism would receive in 2004 under the current tax plan, was just not enough to mount a successful promotional campaign for the city.

Mannarino also pointed to a study by Yeager and Associates which estimated $19.5 million in revenue for every 250,000 visitors annually, a number Mannarino said was a reachable goal.

Caryn Smith, a member of the QCBPA board of directors and owner of Caryn's Corner on Adams St., put it simply: "Advertising costs money. No investment brings no return."

Maralin Manning, executive director of the QCBPA, said past efforts to coordinate tourism had been uneven and underfunded and reminded councillors that, without the attraction of the city's hotels and motels, there would be no occupants to tax.

Robert Curry, owner of Ace/Curry Hardware, listed such sites as Marina Bay, The USS Salem, the soon-to-open Quarry Hills golf courses, and Wollaston Beach. "This is our chance to do something special," Curry said.

Edward Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership and owner of Keohane Funeral, said he was "fervently in favor of open space" but advised councillors only the 30 percent split would be large enough to truly promote tourism.

Joanne Dondero, owner of Abigail's Crossing in Quincy Center, said, "If I had to depend on tourism for my business, I'd be out of business." Dondero later remarked that many of the tourists who come to her business are lost Europeans searching for Boston's famed Quincy Market.

The 30/70 split met with some support among councillors. "This is a reasonable proposal to consider," said Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott. "We should show them (business owners) a commitment to tourism."

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said he was glad tourism was once again a focus in the city. "If we're serious about tourism, we're going to have to allocate resources to do just that," D'Amico said.

Raymondi remained steadfast on the 90/10 split currently proposed. "This is a long-term quality-of-life investment which will not be dependent upon future administrations," Raymondi said. "Those families who plan to live in Quincy are putting their trust in us."

But Raymondi added he was "most pleased" that public debate was on 90 percent versus 70 percent rather than on the proposal itself.

Mayor James Sheets, asked to comment on the meeting, said that he was still very much in favor of the 90/10 split but "could live with 70/30." The mayor then said any amount for tourism more than 30 percent would not be acceptable.

Speaking on behalf of the 90/10 split at the meeting was Doug Gutro, past president of the Ward 5 Community Association and long-time advocate for both Wollaston Beach and the Souther Tide Mill. "There are fewer and fewer places (in Quincy) to get away from it all," Gutro warned.

ROBERT GALLIGAN

"It's likely too late for Lot 23 and HighPoint, but I think it's time to look to the future."

Gutro asked councillors to heed the advice of Mark Twain: "Buy land; they ain't making any more of it."

Thomas Koch, director of the Parks Department and chairman of the Mayor's Open Space Committee, said he favored the 90/10 split because there were still parcels of land in the city which needed to be preserved. Koch also said the newly created Open Space Fund would not only purchase new parcels but could be used to renovate Veterans Stadium, repair boat-houses, playing fields, and courts across the city, and assist in the planting of trees. "A lot more needs to be done," said Koch.

Sally Owen, a resident and member of the Recycling Commission, praised the plan for its flexibility but said she favored the 90/10 split right now to restore the city's wetlands and reduce the risks of flooding.

The proposed tax, which would create the city's first-ever fund specifically targeted to purchase open space, is in the form of a home rule petition originally sponsored by Raymondi and incorporated into Project Prosper, the mayor's aggressive open space initiative.

The plan calls for a gradual room tax for all motels and hotels in the city, starting in July of 2001 with a one percent tax and increasing one percent annually until the legal maximum of four percent in 2004.

The local tax would be on top of a statewide 5.7 percent tax on motels and hotels.

With the expected construction of a 461-room Marriott Hotel at Crown Colony in the next few years, bringing the number of hotel rooms in the city to over 600, the city could eventually generate an estimated $500,000 to $750,000 in revenue from the tax.

The petition is currently in the Ordinance Committee of the City Council, but the mayor has requested the matter be handled quickly so that the petition can go to the State Legislature in the next few months.

North Quincy Sewer Collapse Forces Emergency Repairs

A collapsed sewer on Rawson Rd. forced an estimated $20,000 in emergency repairs and the set-up of a by-pass pumping operation to prevent sewage from backing up into area homes.

The sewer, at the intersection of Rawson Rd. and Billings Rd., was built in 1903 and is part of the North Quincy Interceptor, which serves most of North Quincy and Wollaston east of Hancock St. and west of Quincy Bay.

McLaughlin Bros. of Brockton, currently under contract by the city for another project, completed the replacement of the manhole and pipe section Friday but follow-up work is still underway.

The Rawson Rd. Sewer section had been scheduled for rehabilitation in 2002 as part of the third and final phase of rehabilitation of the North Quincy Interceptor, a project instituted by Mayor James Sheets in 1998.

City workers discovered the collapsed sewer when working on Hollis Ave. A 24-hour by-pass pumping station was then set-up.

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton thanked the workers at the Sewer, Water, and Drain Department for "stepping up to handle the problem before residents of North Quincy experienced raw sewerage back-ups in their homes."

DPW Commissioner David Colton thanked the residents of Rawson Rd. and the otherwise quiet neighborhood for "putting up with the noise while we nipped a potentially serious public health problem in the bud."

Mayor Sheets said that he would place an appropriation from the Sewer Rehabilitation Fund before the City Council to cover the cost of the emergency repair.

Registry Expands Hours For Road Tests

The Registry Of Motor Vehicles is now offering road tests on weekdays from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Registry and State Police agreed to the change in hours to better accommodate Registry customers,

Registrar Daniel Grabauskas said. "The Cellucci-Swift Administration is dedicated to improving Registry services for our customers across the state."

Hours for road tests were previously 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The 8 a.m. start time often meant that test applicants had to arrange to meet troopers at off site locations and wait in their cars for the test to begin.

100,000 people on the South Shore are now benefiting from a recent transfusion.

Credit Scores And Loan Approval

By CAROL BULMAN,
President

Conway Financial Services

What's your credit score? If you're like me, you have a hard enough time remembering the birth dates of your children, never mind your credit score. But is your credit score something you need to know?

You don't necessarily have to know what your score is, but if you're in the market for a mortgage, this figure will be used in determining the interest rate you will play — and whether you will qualify for a mortgage at all.

This score is derived from a secret formula compiled by a company called Fair, Isaac & Co.; the formula reflects the probability that you will repay your debt on time. Since Fair, Isaac & Co. produced the formula, credit scores are sometimes referred to as FICO scores.

CAROL BULMAN

Historically, a lender reviews a borrower's credit report, which shows existing credit and past credit accounts. It also will indicate open balances and your repayment history. All of these factors are considered in determining your credit worthiness. Credit scores are a more statistical approach for determining the same thing.

A lender will order a credit report through one of three credit bureaus: Experian, Equifax and TransUnion. That data is sent through a statistic model to determine the score, which ranges from 360 to approximately 900 — 360 being the worst, 900 the best.

Your full credit profile, including information on employment and assets, is considered together with your credit score. The score reflects your history of paying your debts in a timely way, the number of credit cards you have and whether you have an outstanding lien or bankruptcy in your file.

The advent of credit scores has led to more lending based upon the existence of risk, a concept known as risk-based pricing. The interest rates on loans offered to consumers are based on the borrower's level of risk.

Should you be concerned about the result of your credit score if you are contemplating the application of a mortgage? Most certainly, but there are steps you can take to better position yourself:

1. Be sure that you pay your bills on time. The longer your history of timely payment, the better your score will be. Don't waste any time — start paying on time now!
2. It's best to pay down your credit cards as much as you can prior to applying for a mortgage. If you have to decide between paying down credit cards or making a larger down payment, talk to a mortgage specialist to determine which would make the most sense.
3. Avoid opening up any additional credit accounts before you apply for a loan. The more inquiries from different credit grantors, the lower your score.
4. Don't be tempted to take out new credit cards or increase your credit limits. This also will adversely affect your score.
5. Cancel any credit cards you are not using.

The Federal Trade Commission recently sponsored an inquiry into the concept of credit scoring because lenders do not disclose to customers how the score is determined. This mysterious stance is holding Fair, Isaac open to questions regarding equality and fair credit.

It's difficult to say how this will turn out, but for now the logical thing for consumers is to maintain good credit. The better your credit, the higher your score, and that's your ultimate goal as a future mortgage applicant.

As a consumer, you have the right to obtain one free credit report per year. If you're contemplating a home purchase, review your credit to determine that it accurately reflects your situation. Errors in credit files sometimes can be time-consuming to correct, so it's imperative that you try to fix problems as soon as possible.

For a full credit analysis, please contact a Conway Financial representative and we will be happy to give you a pre-qualification over the telephone.

Carol Bulman is president of Norwell-based Conway Financial Services, a mortgage brokerage firm owned by Jack Conway and Company that maintains correspondent lending relationships with some of the top lenders in the East and originates a full line of mortgage products.

Pitching Pair Celata, Doherty Coming Up Aces

Duo Leads North To 2 Wins

By CHRIS POISSON

It's only two games, but the North Quincy baseball team has shown that its pair of aces is as safe a bet as a Pedro win.

Rob Celata and Keith Doherty took the mound for the first two games of the 2000 season last week and the Southpaw Express delivered the Red Raiders a 2-0 record.

The duo combined for 10 innings of scoreless ball, allowing four hits while striking out 12 and walking one. You can't ask for much more from your starters.

Doherty, a junior, tossed four innings in Friday afternoon's 8-0 drubbing of Brighton at Adams Field and in the season opener last Wednesday, Celata, a senior, pitched like the gusty wind that day, breezing through six innings in a 6-2 win over Canton.

You may recall North Quincy got off to a 2-0 start last season and then dropped 12 of 18 games to miss the after-hour party, the state tournament. You may even recall the two games after the 2-0 start, the 5-4 heart-breaker to Silver Lake and the 21-2 debacle to Taunton.

Guess what? North Quincy hosted Silver Lake

Tuesday and Taunton comes to town today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. to kick off the first wave of Old Colony League action. If you're suddenly having flashbacks of a year ago, there's no need to panic.

"I think these two wins are a little bit different," said North Quincy coach Larry Taglieri. "We're playing better baseball right now than we were last year at this point. It's good to go in the league 2-0."

So how are the Red Raiders, ranked No. 10 in the Globe Top 20, playing better baseball? Well, they're getting better performances in the three basics of baseball: pitching, defense and hitting.

"When we put those three things together, we're going to be a tough team to beat," Taglieri said.

Heading into the season, the constants were the pitching and defense and the variable was the hitting. So far, the only variable has been the New England weather. Offensively, North Quincy has been swinging some sweet sticks as it has scored 14 runs.

"We definitely improved," Taglieri said. "They worked hard in the off-season on their hitting and it shows."

Against Brighton, North Quincy did all of its damage in the first two innings. It opened the game with a five-run blitz as it sent 10 men to the plate. Senior co-captain Joe Flynn led with an infield hit, stole second and scored when Doherty (2 for 2, RBI, 2 runs) singled him home with one out.

Senior Dan O'Toole and junior Chris Lockhead (2 for 3, 2 RBIs) each added two-out RBI singles to make it 3-0, and they later scored when the Brighton third baseman overthrew first on sophomore Pat Bregoli's grounder.

In the second, Doherty (single) and senior Chris Walsh (walk) reached base with one out. Senior Brian Deputa (1 for 1, RBI, 2 walks, 2 runs) followed with a single to left to plate Doherty, and Walsh came all the way around to score when the ball scooted by the left fielder. Lockhead came through again with another two-out RBI single to make it 8-0.

After retiring the side in LEFT-HANDER KEITH DOHERTY allowed just two hits and walk as he fanned five in four innings of shutout ball. The junior also went 2 for 2 with an RBI and two runs scored.

the fourth, Doherty turned the ball over to senior right-hander Matt McCann, who pitched two strong innings as he struck out three and allowed only a bloop single. Senior T.J. Bell pitched the seventh.

McCann rebounded from a shaky first outing when he relieved Celata in the seventh inning of the first game and gave up two runs on a triple and two walks. But McCann's frozen hands were to blame as he never really warmed up after sitting six innings on the bench in the cold weather.

In the Canton game, the Red Raiders were retired in order in the first inning but batted around in the second frame to score four runs.

Celata led with a double to right, moved to third on senior John Gavin's single, and later scored on O'Toole's one-out double over the right fielder's glove.

With two outs, Lockhead reached on an error that scored Gavin. O'Toole came across when the Canton catcher threw the ball into the outfield on Lockhead's stolen base. And Lockhead scored the fourth run when Doherty beat out an infield hit.

North Quincy added a run in the third on Flynn's two-out RBI double, and a run in the fourth when Doherty scored on a passed ball after reaching base with his second hit of the game.

Quincy Battles, Bows To Taunton

Opening the 2000 season on the road against perennial powerhouse Hanover is a tough assignment for many, especially for the young Quincy baseball team.

Surprisingly, Quincy (0-1) found itself within striking distance of an upset before bowing out, 8-5, late in the game Friday afternoon.

Quincy battled Taunton Tuesday and today (Thursday) it travels to Barnstable for a 4 p.m. game. Saturday, it faces Silver Lake in the home opener.

In the bottom of the fifth inning, junior John Luo (2 innings, 2 hits, 1 walk, 4 strikeouts) relieved junior Peter Turowski on the mound with his team trailing, 6-4. Hanover quickly greeted Luo with two singles and then junior shortstop Mark Robertson committed an error and the Indians built a comfortable 8-4 cushion.

"He's raw in his first season back in two years," said coach Michael Draiccho of Robertson. "He'll have to adjust a little."

"I'm happy with the guys," he added. "They hung in there and played well. We had the lead two times. It was a back and forth game. It could've went either way."

Offensively, Turowski and senior captain Joe Tower combined for all seven of Quincy's hits. Turowski went 4 for 4 with two RBIs and Tower went 3 for 4 with two RBIs.

"Hopefully, we'll get the bats going with the other guys," Draiccho said.

Quincy jumped ahead 2-0 in the first inning when Turowski belted a two-run triple that scored junior Dave Centrella and sophomore Dave Germain, both of whom had walked.

Turowski, who gave up six runs on eight hits in four innings pitched, had three of his four strikeouts in the bottom half of the first, but Hanover managed to push two runs across the plate to tie the score at 2-2.

In the third, Quincy battled back to regain its two-run lead. Turowski led with a single, moved to second on a passed ball, and scored on Tower's single. Tower advanced all the way to third base on another passed ball and scored on junior Joe Duffy's sacrifice fly to make it 4-2.

But Hanover evened it at 4-4 in the bottom half and then grabbed a 6-4 lead in the fourth (double, walk, triple) before opening it up in the fifth.

In the sixth, the Presidents put the first two runners on base but came up with nothing.

Tower stroked an RBI double in seventh for the fifth run.

For Hanover, Matt Cartwright pitched five innings with eight strikeouts to pick up the win. He also went 2 for 3 with three RBIs. Ryan Hilyard, Gary Mahler and Brandon Condon each went 2 for 3 at the plate.

$441,968 Grant To Quincy Schools

The Department of Public Health has awarded a $441,968 to the City of Quincy for school health services, announces Sen. Michael Morrissey.

The school health grant, to be allocated to the city over five years, may be used to provide school-age children with a variety of health services from hearing and vision screening to programs that will increase enrollment in programs like Mass Health, the state's public health care insurance program.

"Children who are not healthy cannot learn to their fullest potential," Morrissey said. "The Legislature has made a strong commitment to improving education and the health care of children by allocating $7.4 million statewide for school health services."

Quincy will receive $73,968 during the present fiscal year, FY 2000, and $92,000 annually for the following four fiscal years.

"The program will allow funding for early identification of children at risk for various behavior, health and education problems," Rep. Ron Mariano said.

The school health services grant program is also available to private and parochial schools.

"The school health services grant can fund the development of individualized health care plans for students with special health care needs like asthma or diabetes and can be used to link school health services with local health agencies," said Rep. Steve Tobin.

"The program is funded through the tobacco settlement fund and cigarette tax revenues and this is exactly the type of initiative that should be funded by these sources," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

The program also offers a source of funding for school nursing services.

eternity based on biblical reality of life after death and beyond the grave.

A cast of more than 50 people from The Lord's Planting Church act out a series of skits about people who live life, make choices, die and find themselves outside heaven asking the question, "Angel, is my name in your book?"

Walk For Hunger To Benefit Six Local Food Programs

Six local agencies will benefit from funds raised during Project Bread's Walk for Hunger on Sunday, May 7.

The Walk for Hunger provides funding for more than 350 emergency food programs in 124 communities, including six programs in Quincy.

Local recipients are:

Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion at the Quincy Crisis Center; Interfaith Social Services, Inc. Pantry Shelf, Quincy Community Action Programs, Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition which manages Father Bill's Place, Salvation Army/Quincy Temple

Corps, and Seaside Advocacy Group.

Despite economic prosperity, an alarming number of working families at the low end of the wage scale have fallen further behind, said Ellen Parker, executive director of Project Bread.

"Soaring rents, escalating health and child care costs, and the recent spike in the price of home heating fuel have all contributed to the growing number of families and individuals turning to food pantries and soup kitchens for emergency food," Parker said.

Registration for the Walk for Hunger will take place Sunday, May 7 from 7 to 9 a.m. at the Boston Common.

The Lord's Planting

Pastor Bill Donahue will preach the sermon, "The Kind of Worshippers the Father Seeks" at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. worship services Sunday at The Lord's Planting, Quincy Foursquare Church, 65 Newbury Ave.,

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Someone once said that Reading is magic. It enables us to experience and ponder the past. It helps us to live more happily and wisely in the present. And it permits us to cope with the future.

Dr. Samuel Johnson's injunction: "Keep your friendships in repair," should be applied to books as well as to persons. Books are friends at all times if we treat them well; we can enjoy their companionship when human friends have passed beyond our reach or have grown out of us. In every phase of life they are loyal friends, and, if they show signs of wear, that only proves how much we care for them. They repay by linking youth with middle age and refreshing us in our late 50's, 60's and 70's as they inspired us in our early 20's...

Unlike friends who never answer letters, our books always speak when we open them.

The resolution, with was sponsored by Councillors Daniel Raymondi and Gregory Hanley, was a response to firefighters' concerns about the safety of the Quincy Point plant as well as the overall preparedness of Quincy firefighters to battle the unique chemical hazards found there.

Those concerns were voiced over the course of several meetings of the council's Public Safety Committee, which was in itself convened as a result of a January letter from the firefighters union to Chief Thomas Gorman saying the plant was too dangerous.

The resolution calls for the hiring by the city of an independent fire protection engineer to determine safety hazards at Twin Rivers as well as a complete listing of all chemicals used there.

Other requirements of the resolve include: a second pair of turnout gear for Quincy firefighters; training for all Quincy firefighters in the hazards presented by fatty-acid production; washers and dryers for all fire stations; implementation of all recommendations made to the Public Safety Committee by June 1; and the remedy of all 12 potential problems listed by Twin Rivers.

In addition, the city will adopt the industry safety standard NFPA 1500 as a city ordinance, subject to approval by City Solicitor Stephen McGrath.

The action comes in the wake of several incidents at the former Proctor & Gamble site, one of which claimed the life of employee Joseph Conti in March of 1999.

Board Continues BFI Hearing

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board continued a hearing regarding complaints against Browning Ferris Industries, (BFI) located on 22 Nightingale Ave.

An abutter complained about old refrigerators, stoves, air conditioners left practically in his back yard on 17 Intervale St. Moe Bhargi said he had spoken to manager Rick Biagetti about the problem of oil spillage on his property. Bhargi said if the soil is contaminated, it should be an environmental issue.

Biagetti said guards are posted on the weekend when most of the appliances are collected. However, Bhargi said security doesn't arrive until 3 p.m. thus giving neighborhood kids a chance to "tinker" with the appliances.

Biagetti said BFI is under contract with the City of Quincy to pick up all appliances. Since they cannot be dumped as trash, they are collected daily for recycling material.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman asked Biagetti if BFI was picking up TV sets, computers and monitors since he had seen many of them lining streets in the city. Biagetti said BFI had stopped picking those items up on April 1.

Gorman said he was setting up an in inspection with his hazardous material department and would do so immediately.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he plans to re-visit the site.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, after reviewing pictures distributed by Bhargi showing the appliances said he wasn't aware of the problem and suggested a fence be constructed within 30 days.

Other abutters complained about the odor coming from the parked trucks over the weekend and questioned why the trucks were being washed on a Tuesday instead of a Friday.

Baguette said sometimes trash remains in the trucks on Fridays causing the odors.

He said the company uses a non-chemical substance used from cherries and apples to de-odorize the trucks and said he was in the process of trying to bring the trucks back empty. He then commented "I am doing everything I can, I understand where they're coming from."

He said they began to get quotes for the new fence this week, and would start "immediately" after the bidding is accepted.

Biagetti will report to the License Board after the fence is constructed.

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. (Make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days. You must be published and it will be granted to you."

O Glorious St. Therese, whom Almighty God has raised up to aid and inspire the human family, I improve your Miraculous Intercession. You are so powerful in obtaining every need of body and spirit from the Heart of God. Holy Mother Church proclaims you "Prodigy of Miracles...the Greatest Saint of Modern Times." Now I fervently beseech you to answer my petition (mention here) and to carry out your promises of spending Heaven doing good upon earth...of letting fall from Heaven a Shower of Roses. Little Flower, give me your childlike faith, to see the Face of God in the people and experiences of my life, and to love God with full confidence. St. Therese, my Carmelite Sister, I will fulfill your plea "to be made known everywhere" and I will continue to lead others to Jesus through you. Amen."

Two Indicted For Bogus Driver's License Scheme

A scheme centered around the Quincy Registry of Motor Vehicles office has led to the indictment of two men for allegedly trading real Massachusetts driver's licenses for cash and reaping more than $500,000 for the scam artist.

According to Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating, several hundred bogus licenses were issued to illegal immigrants -- without any kind of test -- in exchange for $1,000 and $1,500 payments.

Two men accused of illegally securing Massachusetts driver's licenses for hundreds of illegal immigrants were indicted by a grand jury April 4. They indictments came following a 10-month investigation by Keating's office.

"State Police from this office and from the State Police Registry Compliance Unit have uncovered approximately 400 licenses illegally acquired during this 14-month scheme," Keating said after the indictments were made public.

Michèle Joacine of 10 Hazelwood Ave., #13, in Dracut, was indicted on five counts of making a false statement in an application for a license to operate motor vehicles; 6 counts of falsely making or leading another to falsely make a license to operate a motor vehicle; 5 counts of theft of telecommunications services under $5,000; and 2 counts of violating by conspiring with Robert Limage.

Limage of 38 Winslow St., Hyde Park, was indicted on two conspiracy counts.

Joacine is alleged to have reaped at least $500,000 from the scheme. He will be summoned to Norfolk Superior Court for arraignment in the coming weeks, along with Limage.

According to Keating, Joacine used a network of operatives in various communities to make it known that genuine Massachusetts licenses could be had at a price of $1,000 to $1,500. Joacine then paid a clerk at the Quincy RMV office -- whom the registry had hired as a temporary employee through a temp agency -- to process the applicants as if they were out-of-state transfers, even though they had no out-of-state licenses to turn in, Keating said.

"These are serious felony violations," Keating said. "But beyond that, even beyond creating false identities, this conduct created a very real public safety hazard by putting hundreds of drivers on the street without ascertaining whether they might be a menace on the road.

"There were no vision tests to determine whether they could see well enough to drive safely, no road tests to ascertain whether they even had the physical capacity to control a motor vehicle," he said. "We have no indication whether they had ever driven a car before in their lives."

State Police Sgt. Peter Silva and his Compliance Unit at the Registry of Motor Vehicles initially uncovered evidence of this public safety threat and brought the case to the Security Administration's Inspector General. The Registry also participated in this investigation and made their considerable resources available to us.

SCINTILLATING SYDNEY

As the site of the 2000 Olympic Games in September, Sydney promises to be even more hectic, rowdy and exciting than it already is. Australians and tourists alike bask in this city's outdoor life and wildlife. With 40 beaches, including the famous Bondi Beach, Sydney captivates the lover of sun, sand and surf. Water sports are particularly popular, as are many other outdoor activities such as golf, tennis, cricket, rugby and soccer. When the sun sets, the more spirited travelers will want to hit Kings Cross to join in some raucous nightlife. For those who want a taste of Australia's unspoiled beauty and its fauna, the Taronga Zoo, Sydney Harbour National Park and spring or fall visit to Kuring-gai Chase National Park are good spots.

Olympics or otherwise, anytime is a great time to visit Australia. And when you put your travel plans in the hands of the professionals, there are only a few things left for you to do. We'll tell you all about them at PRIME TRAVEL. Being seasoned travel agents means we've got lots of experience dealing with the details. Call us, 617-472-3697, the next time you want to focus on the fun of the trip rather than the hassles of making it all work out. We're located at 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay.

P.S.: For the most ideal, comfortable weather, choose a Sydney Harbour National Park and spring or fall visit to Kuring-gai Chase National Park are good spots.

Police Believe He Is Linked To Wave Of Break-Ins Burglaries Suspect Held On Heavy Bail

By CRAIG SALTERS

A short-time West Quincy resident police believe responsible for a wave of bold burglaries in the city that unnerved homeowners was held in heavy bail in Quincy District Court Tuesday where he was arraigned on six charges.

Robert Nickerson, 45, of 53 Copeland St. pleaded innocent and was ordered held in $500,000 surety and $50,000 cash bail by Judge Gregory Baler.

His case was continued to May 16 for a 9 a.m. conference at the Quincy court and he was remanded to the Norfolk County House of Correction in Dedham.

Nickerson petitioned for a reduction in the bail which will be heard in Superior Court at Dedham.

Nickerson was charged with three second-offense counts of unarmed burglary, an attempted burglary, larceny from a building, and possession of a Class B drug.

The burglaries he was charged with were: Ellerton Rd., along with larceny of a purse containing $50, April 7; Montilio St. and Adele Rd., April 16; and an attempted burglary on Bunker Hill Lane, also April 16. Date of the drug possession was April 16.

Police arrested Nickerson at his residence Sunday morning and Police Captain Robert Crowley said they believe he is linked to nearly 30 break-ins in several neighborhoods which began March 24 with burglaries on Grogan Ave., Common St., and Jenness St. in West Quincy.

In most of the cases lights were left on in the homes allowing purses and wallets left in view to be seen from the outside.

Police zeroed in on the Copeland St. area after a woman searching for cans and bottles in a trash can just outside the suspect's 53 Copeland St. residence came across an abandoned pocketbook containing identification from one of the crime victims.

Sgt. Peter Turowski, who supervised the patrol officers in the investigation, later found a second pocketbook in the trash cans, this one without identification, at which point police placed the area under surveillance.

When police received word of a botched burglary attempt at 175 Bunker Hill Lane early Sunday morning, officers watched the suspect run into his apartment and, after searching the apartment and making sure he matched the description, made the arrest shortly thereafter.

At the time of the arrest, Crowley said, 16 QPD officers were involved in the investigation aided by canine officers from both the MBTA and Braintree police departments.

"I have to give much of the credit to Sgt. Peter Turowski, along with the several patrol officers involved in the case," Crowley said.

In 1991, Crowley said, Nickerson was sentenced to 12-15 years in prison for burglary.

A second-offense unarmed burglary is a 20-year felony, Crowley said, carrying a mandatory minimum of five years if convicted.

Crowley said Nickerson had lived at the 53 Copeland St. residence for roughly seven to eight months.

Patrol officers participating in the investigation included: Officer Thomas Cleary; Officer Joseph Lencki; Officer Lisa Linkey; Officer Buddy Johnson; Officer David Levine; Officer M.J. O'Brien; Officer Brian Mahoney; Officer Daniel Darling; and Officer John McGovern.

Affordable Housing Appeal

A PLEA FOR more affordable housing was made at a meeting of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organizations at United First Parish Church last week. Here, Rev. Sheldon Bennett cites the need backed by participants at the left: Lou Finfer of the GBIO; Fr. William Mullen of St. John's Church; John Hunt (GBIO) and Ann Yeomans of First Parish Church.

Sheets Asks $239,851 For QYC Dredging

Mayor James Sheets sent a $238,851.54 appropriation before the City Council Tuesday night, the city's share for dredging the Quincy Yacht Club basin at Houghs Neck.

As part of a 25/75 percent matching grant, the state will contribute roughly $750,000 to the project, allowing dredging to begin as early as next month.

"I don't see a problem with it," Sheets said of the appropriation, which he expected to be sent to the Finance Committee for discussion and voted on at the next council meeting. "With three dollars for every one dollar, it makes good management sense, good fiscal sense."

It also makes good practical sense, the mayor

3 Liquor Licenses Suspended Seven Days For Sale To Minors

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board, standing by its policy regarding the sale of liquor to minors, issued in 1992, suspended liquor licenses in three establishments based on a sting operation held March 2 by Det. Lieut. Robert M. Perchard, liquor inspector and License Board agent.

It was the first offense for all three.

Victory Supermarkets, 475 Hancock St., Atlas Liquors, 659-665 Adams St., and Joe's Market Place, 260 Centre St., all received a seven day suspension.

The motion to suspend all three was made by Police Chief Thomas Frane and all seconded by Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

Atty. Robert Fleming, representing Victory Supermarkets, told the board he thought they were "sending the wrong message to companies who did everything they could" even installing a prompter on every cash register automatically asking for an ID. He said the companies are not "criminally responsible."

He said then you get an "errant clerk" even with the Board 'Holding' License Until Junk Yard Cleaned

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board voted unanimously Tuesday to hold the retail scrap metal license of David Sugarman, owner of Sugarman's on Centre Street until all dumpsters are removed and the area cleaned to the satisfaction of the board.

The motion was made by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman who said he plans to visit the site on a daily basis to make sure that all violations are attended to.

Atty. Dave Flaherty, representing Sugarman said some dumpsters had been removed as well as the trucks. Also that the hours of operation were beginning at 8 a.m. instead of earlier.

There is a court case pending in which neighbors of Sugarman are going to court fighting the hours of operation.

After the vote, Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico who earlier had urged the board to suspend the license, showed pictures taken April 14 and April 17 depicting "not much improvement", he said.

D'Amico said Sugarman had had "four years of second chances, four years of promises not kept" and said "four years is enough."

He said Sugarman is in violation of operating a transfer station without a license, having a re-investigation by the Department of Environmental Control (DEP) and a court case pending about the hours of operation. He said he is in clear violation of the Quincy Zoning By-Laws.

D'Amico claimed Sugarman is operating a transfer station without a license. He only has a scrap metal license.

He said dust and debris continue at the site and said the abutters sat in the City Hall chambers said they "were tired of complaining all these years" for nothing. He said the neighbors quality of life has "gotten no better."

Flaherty said he would wait until the DEP has re-investigated before commenting on the issue.

D'Amico said "the time has come for this issue to be resolved."

On Hotel Occupancy Tax Revenue:

How Much For Open Space, Tourism?

How much of the revenue from the city's proposed hotel/motel occupancy tax should go to open space and how much to promote tourism?

That question was to go back before the City Council Tuesday night with the possibility the answer could be delayed until early next month.

The Quincy Business Council arm of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce voted Friday to request a continuance of the discussion and vote on the proposed home rule petition.

The delay would allow tourism expert and consultant Daniel Yeager of Yeager and Associates the chance to prove the necessity of a 70/30 tax split between open space and tourism, respectively.

The current proposal brought forth by Councillor Daniel Raymond calls for 90 percent of revenue to go to open space acquisition (as well as historical and seashore preservation) and 10 percent to go towards the promotion of tourism.

Many business leaders, led by Quincy Partnership President Edward Keohane of Keohane Funeral Home, believe only a 30 percent split of the new revenue is enough to create a maintain a strong promotional presence for the city.

"For every one dollar spent, we'll get eight dollars back," Keohane said at Friday's meeting, referring to research done by Yeager and Associates.

PATRICK McDERMOTT

And there were indications from some councillors that letting business make its case with the help of Yeager was worth delaying action on the petition until the next council meeting May 1.

Councillors Timothy Cahill and Gregory Hanley, who were the invited guests at the QBC meeting, both said postponement was an option but one which required much work on the part of business.

"An extra two weeks makes sense," said Cahill, but he also made clear business would get more from the council if it could show exactly where money for tourism would be spent.

Hanley suggested business leaders use the time before the meeting to lobby their councillors aggressively and effectively. "Politics is a compromise and we're impartial," Hanley said. "It's important to hear arguments from both sides."

Speaking to The Sun Tuesday, Councillor Patrick McDermott called a delay "a reasonable step," saying he wanted to make sure he had enough information to make a sound decision. "They have a plan, so it's reasonable to listen to them and let them convince us," McDermott said. "Bob Galligan (co-owner of the Adams Inn) knows the business (of tourism) and we should listen."

Save Gas and Money

McDermott also addressed the time factor of the occupancy tax. "I know there's a certain degree of pressure," McDermott said, referring to the fact that the State Legislature, which must approve the petition, ends its session mid-July. "But I worked at the Legislature for two years and this (passing petitions) is a routine practice. When things need to get passed, they can get passed in the blink of an eye."

At the Friday meeting of the Quincy Business Council, business leaders unanimously voted in favor of the 70/30 split and the request to delay the vote.

Mark Bertman, owner of Rogers Jewelry, expressed his disappointment that a city like Quincy received only 50,000 visitors annually while communities like Cambridge and Plymouth enjoyed tourism booms. "We're throwing a big party but we can't send out the invitations," Bertman said of the lack of coordinated tourism efforts. "We have a beautiful home and no one's going to find it."

Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000, emphasized that promotion needed both staff and resources to succeed and that one without the other was pointless. "If you don't give it (promotion) the proper funding, it will fail," Mannarino told Cahill and

4-Year Terms: McCauley's Response

Councillor Frank McCauley takes exception to our column last week in which we strongly opposed his proposed four-year terms for the mayor and city councillors.

We called it a bad idea that would benefit incumbents and not the people who, we believe, prefer to have their elected officials accountable every two years. And, we referred to four-year terms as "political comfort cushions" for incumbents.

In fairness to McCauley, we are turning this week's column over to him for his response, which follows:

McCauley's Response

On Nov. 7, 1916, Quincy voters went to the polls to elect a president, a governor and other state and county officials.

In addition, Quincy voters by a wide margin, voted for a change in the city charter. Effective in January 1917, the membership of the city council was reduced from 23 to 9 and the terms of office for mayor and city councillor were increased from one year to two years. These terms have remained in effect since that time, a period of 83 years.

It is time to make another change in the term of office for these positions. School committee members have been serving four year terms for almost half a century. Four years for school committee members have worked well and should work as well for mayors and city councillors.

A study of terms of office for cities of comparable size around the country indicates that four-year terms predominate. Of 47 cities in the 80,000 to 120,000 population category 37 or 78.7% have four-year terms for their mayors while 10 or 21.3% continue to have two-year terms.

Thirty or 63.8% of these cities have four-year terms while 17 (36.2%) have two-year terms for city councillors. In recent years some of the major cities in Massachusetts have increased the terms of their mayors to four years including Lawrence, Malden, Newton, Waltham and most recently Weymouth. Mayors of Boston have had four-year terms for many years.

The responsibilities of the offices of mayor and city councillor have increased substantially since the terms were last increased in 1917. The office of mayor, which was part-time until Mayor Walter Hannon made it a full-time position back in 1973, is now a seven day a week job. Mayors in recent years have spent much time on Capitol Hill and Beacon Hill lobbying for state and federal assistance for our city. The council's role has expanded, particularly in the area of projects located in Planned Unit Development (P.U.D.) zoned areas. The Highpoint project alone, occupied a large amount of the city council's time for over a year.

Henry Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun, in his editorial of April 13, opposing the four-year concept, stated that four-year terms allow elected officials "more time for coasting between elections" and that "four-year terms are political comfort cushions." As an elected official who has served this city for over 25 years in elective office, I find these comments insulting.

Some people have registered opposition to the plan because voters would only get the opportunity to vote for local officials every four years instead of every two years. A review of the voter turnout for the five city elections in the 1990s indicates very little interest in these elections. The percentage turnouts for these elections are as follows: 1991 - 39%; 1993 - 32.2%; 1995 - 45.1%; 1997 - 33% and 1999 - 35%. Maybe if citizens had the opportunity to vote only every four years the turnout would be higher.

The city council by a 5 to 4 vote adopted the home rule petition on April 3, and since Mayor Sheets has promised to sign the legislation, it will go on to the legislature. Councillors D'Amico, Hanley, McDermott and Newton joined me in supporting the petition. Although they disagreed about the need for the change, they correctly felt that the voters should have an opportunity to vote on the issue. Councillors Cahill, Durkin, Harold and Raymondi opposed the petition.

Councillor Cahill, safely ensconced in a six-year term as County Treasurer, commented, "If it ain't broke don't fix it!" Councillors Durkin and Raymondi who between them served five four-year terms on the school committee, were also opposed. However, I don't recall either of them suggesting that the school committee four-year terms be reduced to two-year terms.

The final "no" vote was cast by Council President Paul Harold, who has been an al but announced candidate for mayor for the past several years, disappointed his many supporters by opting to seek the position of County Register of Deeds. You guessed it! The $85,000 position carries with it a six-year term!

In conclusion, Henry Bosworth does not come to his position on this issue with pristine motives. It should be pointed out that The Quincy Sun derives substantial revenues every two years from political ads placed by mayoral, council and school committee candidates. This revenue would be cut in half with four-year terms.

In recent years there has been a dearth of outstanding candidates for public office. Perhaps the prospect of running for a four-year term instead of continually running for office would encourage some "non-political" types to temporarily put aside their successful careers and offer their strengths for the public's advantage.

I have nothing to gain by a four-year term because by the time it would take effect, hopefully, I'll be sitting on my sundeck overlooking Quincy Bay and reminiscing about the "old days" to my 12 grandchildren and anyone else I can get to listen!

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 postcard view of the Park and Downs Union Congregational Church at Rawson Road and Hamilton St. in Wollaston. The name 'Park and Downs' was used to identify this neighborhood because it was where the Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Park real estate developments met. Before it was developed, this area of Quincy was known as Massachusetts Fields. That name survives only the old school building across from the church that is now condominiums. Since this photo, the church has added a large wing in the rear, as well as the beautifully trimmed privet hedge that has adorned this corner for many years.

Volunteering: 'Necessary' As Everything Else

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Like many people, I find that so many "necessary" things crowd my life. I work (outside the home), I shop for groceries, I try to keep informed on the issues of the day, I pay bills. Although there's not much time left over, one of the best choices I have made over the past eight years is to volunteer for the American Cancer Society.

I love it. Through volunteering, I receive a satisfaction that runs deeper than I get from doing almost anything else. In fact, I often find the time I've donated is the best part of my day! Through my work with the American Cancer Society, my fellow volunteers and I bring hope to people whose lives have been turned upside down.

Some volunteers give cancer research and some provide office support. All of them are determined to make the future a place where fewer people will have to hear the words, "you have cancer."

On the occasion of National Volunteer Week, I want to thank all those with whom I volunteer. Your example has been an inspiration to me. Your expertise has made all the difference in many a project and your selflessness has not gone unnoticed.

If you haven't tried volunteering, ask yourself why not? What could more important than knowing that, because of you, someone's future is brighter? Plus, you'll find that you can't sincerely try to help another without helping yourself as well.

Then, just maybe, you'll find that volunteering becomes as "necessary" to you as everything else you do -- as necessary as it has become for me.

Responds To Giarratani's Letter

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Over the years, I have read letters from Sal Giarratani in The Quincy Sun and The Patriot Ledger and most of them have been of the negative variety.

Mr. George Nowe's letter which appeared in your paper of April 13th criticizing Sal Giarratani about the USS Salem was well within what I would call a good slap in the face.

I am wondering whether Mr. Giarratani was ever in the military — probably not. If he was, have him re-enlist for further training.

Quincy's Yesterdays Della Chiesa Will Not Seek Fifth Term

By PAUL HAROLD

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa ended speculation this week by announcing that he would not seek a fifth term as mayor. However, he said it was too early to announce his intentions regarding his state representative seat that was not up until next year.

Della Chiesa was the city's longest serving mayor, having served under both Plan E and Plan A forms of government.

"The time has come when in deference to my wife's wishes and my own that I announce that I will not seek re-election," he said.

Speculation on his replacement centered first on those candidates who had run against Della Chiesa for the mayor's post: Rep. James McIntyre and Rep. Joseph Brett. Also mentioned were Council President Joseph LaRia, Councillor George Burke and Dr. Charles Djerf.

Upon Della Chiesa's announcement, Louis Caruso of Brook Rd. announced his candidacy for mayor.

DUANE PROPOSES QUARRY-FILL PLAN

Herbert Duane, Sr. of the John Duane Demolition Co., proposed a plan to fill the city's quarry dumps with heavy demolition materials.

The plan was 75 percent cheaper than other plans presented to the city and would allow for the reclamation of valuable land for future development. It would meet all the specifications of both the state and local health departments.

He proposed bulldozing materials on those quarries half filled: Hardwick, Djerf and Hitchcock. On those partially filled with water, he proposed the use of a crane-filling.

ENC BREAKS GROUND FOR STUDENT CENTER

Wesley Angell, building committee chairman for Eastern Nazarene College, broke ground on the Wollaston campus for a new student center. Among those on hand for the ceremony was College President Dr. Edward Mann, for whom the center would be named.

Biagini Family Visits Ellis Island Roots

Quincy residents and sisters Gianna Balducci and Mabel Biagini traveled to Ellis Island in New York this past September to commemorate Gianna's coming to America in December of 1920.

They were accompanied by three carloads of family members, 12 in all, who included children, grandchildren, and five great grandchildren.

"I enjoyed the trip very much," said Balducci, whose full maiden name is Giovanna Louisa Columbia Biagini. "I'm glad I was able to see it again after all these years."

The highlight of the trip was Balducci finding her name on a memorial wall at Ellis Island, a wall which honors the millions of immigrants who came to America via the island. "Gianna was ecstatic," said Biagini, a well-known accordionist in the city. "It was quite emotional. There were just thousands of names on that wall."

The wall project, started by Lee Iacocca of Chrysler, lists the names of immigrants and the date of their arrival for a $100 donation. Proceeds benefit the restoration of Ellis Island and the Statue of Liberty.

Balducci credits both the $100 donation and the idea for the New York trip to her daughter Sandra and son-in-law Richard Carter, who both attended the celebration.

The weekend was capped off by a dinner at Casa Bella restaurant in the Little Italy section of New York City and attendance at an Italian Street Festival.

Balducci said conditions at Ellis Island were a lot better now than they were a full eight decades ago when the six-year old landed with her mother Angelina after a 15-17 day journey by boat. "Back then, it wasn't very pleasant," Balducci recalls.

Balducci and mother Angelina left Ancona, Italy for America in 1920 to join Balducci's father, Peter Biagini, who worked as a stonecutter at the Quincy quarries.

She later married Amadeo Balducci of Quincy.

The illustrated program surveys the "patriot painters" who recorded the American Revolution and the early years of the Republic. Dr. Marchione focuses on the three greatest of these artists: John Trumbull, known as the "Painter of the American Revolution;" Charles Wilson Peale, a portrait painter who is also reputed to be the country's first museumkeeper; and Gilbert Stuart, the premier portrait painter of this era.

Marchione will discuss the major works of these artists and how the artists' lives and philosophies were bound up with the great events of their times.

Marchione is curator of the Brighton-Allston Historical Society, Associate Professor at the Art Institute of Boston, a member of the Boston landmarks commission, and the author of several books.

DAFFODIL DAYS, The American Cancer Society's annual fundraising campaign, was in full swing recently as boxes of the flowers were unloaded at the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home in Quincy. Volunteer drivers delivered 344 boxes of daffodils in Quincy, helping to raise over $140,000 from the South Shore. The daffodil is the first flower of Spring and the symbol of the ACS. Helping unload are, from left: Julie, Natalie, Mitch, and Allison Rosen of Hingham; Cindi Morrel Brown of Quincy; Fall River florist George Souza; and Russell Dupuis of Quincy.

Adams Mansion Gardens Tour Saturday Launches Quincy Treasures Program

The Environmental Treasures of Quincy program will conduct its inaugural program tour Saturday at the Adams National Historic Site on Adams St.

The tour of the many gardens of the Adams Mansion property will begin at 10 a.m. The Environmental Treasures program is free and open to the public.

Bob MacKenzie, chief gardener for the National Park Service site, will host the tour. The highlight will be the daffodil gardens, which will be in full-bloom at the time of the tour. MacKenzie will discuss "historic gardening," pest management, and composting and will answer questions. The first 30 people to arrive at the tour by bike, carpool, or foot will receive a prize.

The Environmental Treasures of Quincy program was initiated by the Quincy Park Department to help educate residents of the many significant and sensitive environmental areas in Quincy with the hope that increased awareness will lead to a better appreciation of Quincy's many resources. Future walks will include tours of Quincy's coastline, fresh water resources, Blue Hills Reservation, salt marshes, parks, a bird-watching expedition, and much more.

"The Quincy Park Department is appreciative of the National Park Service's assistance in helping us launch this valuable program," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments. "The Environmental Treasures program will give residents a chance to learn about their local environment, ecosystems, habitats, watersheds, and other environmental resources while enjoying a nice day outdoors."

For more information on the Environmental Treasures of Quincy program, call the Park Department at (617) 376-1254.

ALP SENIOR LIVING

CAN LESS BE MORE?

The older we get, the fewer calories we need. This is due, in part to the fact that we tend to expend less energy engaging in physical activities. We also tend to lose lean muscle tissue, which requires a lot of calories to sustain itself. Even though our caloric requirements may drop, we need as much, or more, of daily life that you seek as certain nutrients to maintain our bodies. Older adults need to make sure they get sufficient levels of such nutrients as vitamin D, B6, B12, folate, calcium and riboflavin. The key to getting sufficient quantities of these, and other, nutrients is to select nutrient-dense foods. Remember how you told your children to eat their vegetables? Now it is your turn.

You may need fewer calories, but that doesn't mean that the pleasure need go out of eating. Taking care of your needs for nourishment can be something which feeds the spirit as well as the body. At MARINA PLACE, we offer the kind of physical support for the activities of daily life that you seek as well as medication and rehabilitative care. For more information about our independent assisted living options, call 617-770-3264 (Four Sea-port Drive). We have easy access to area shopping, dining and cultural activities.

P.S. It is never too late to build muscle tissue by engaging in strengthening exercises.

Spring HOME IMPROVEMENT

Succeeding At House Painting: Preparation Is The Key

Painting the interior or exterior of a home is a no-brainer—providing you've done the really important work of preparing the old surfaces for their new topcoat.

Paint needs proper adhesion to last through years of weathering, washing, rubbing, rough-housing and all of the abuse that the world can throw at it. It doesn't matter which paint you buy. If you don't put it onto a clean, solid surface, it won't last.

Watch professional painters work, and you'll see that they often spend more time getting ready to paint than actually brushing, rolling or spraying the stuff on. They know what it takes to do a good job. The most important preparation steps include:

- Wash down all surfaces to be painted. For interior walls and ceilings, use a strong TSP (trisodium phosphate) solution, rinse with clean water and allow the surface to dry well before you repaint. Plaster can be scrub-brushed, but drywall needs a gentler touch with a damp, not wet, sponge. Exteriors may be power-washed—use an appropriate cleaning solution that sprays-on with the water, and be careful not to damage surfaces with the high-pressure stream.

- Scrape or sand away old paint that's not well-adhered. Blistering, peeling and flaking paint can be removed by hand or with portable sanding machines. If you're working indoors, wear a dust mask that protects you from inhaling potentially harmful paint particles, especially if the house is older and there is any possibility of lead paint. For exterior walls, pros today also use power washers to blast away not only grime but loose paint as well.

- Clean out loose or damaged surface areas and patch them with a repair compound. Wood siding can deteriorate in places where water has penetrated the protective paint layer. Interior drywall and plaster can also be damaged from impacts, or can begin to crumble in spots from age and water infiltration. Both areas are easily fixed with an all-purpose repair compound such as Patch-A-Wall Spackling Paste, one of a line of House & Home Restore products from Red Devil. Quick-drying, sandable and paintable, PREPARE INTERIOR walls for painting by filling gouges and irregularities. Squeeze Patch-A-Wall Spackling Paste from the tube onto the damaged area, then use a putty knife to feather the material smooth with the wall surface. Sand the patch after it hardens.

Patch-A-Wall comes ready for use without mixing or kneading, and it can be cleaned up with water before it permanently sets. Homeowners will also like its handy squeeze tube with convenient, built-in dispenser—as you use the material, you turn a knob that rolls up to the empty tube, ensuring that the entire contents are utilized with no waste.

- Recaulk gaps, joints and edges where materials—especially dissimilar materials—meet. This includes where siding boards butt together, where the siding butts against the window and door moldings, where window sashes are permanently attached to their jambs, and where the glazing (glass panes) joins door and window frames. Another House & Home Restore product, Premium Window & Door Caulk, can be used to provide a water-tight seal around exterior windows, doors and moldings. This paintable, mildew-resistant sealant also helps to prevent drafts and cold spots indoors, which increases your home's energy efficiency. And, like Patch-A-Wall Spackling Paste, it comes in an easy-to-handle tube with its own roll-up dispenser.

For more information on how to buy and use caulking products, call toll-free 1-800-4-A-DEVIL.

Mass. Electric Cable Project Seminar At NQHS

By BETTY YAU

Members of Massachusetts Electric's Dorchester-Quincy Underground Cable Project Team recently presented educational seminars about the project to ninth and tenth grade students at North Quincy High School.

"The Cable Project Team has been the guest of the North Quincy community for five years now," said Cable Project Manager Victor Antonello. "Since this project directly impacts the residents of North Quincy, we wanted to offer these educational presentations as a token of our appreciation to the community."

The Dorchester-Quincy Cable Project is a $25 million joint effort of Massachusetts Electric and New England Power. Two new 115-Kilovolt underground electric transmission cables have been installed over 3.3 miles in Dorchester and North Quincy.

The cables connect Boston Edison's Dewar St. (Dorchester) substation to Massachusetts Electric's North Quincy substation on Spruce St. Both substations are being modified as part of the project. The new cables will maintain the reliability of the electricity supply in Quincy by providing an alternate source of electricity.

Planning for and construction of the Cable Project has been ongoing for the past five years. Work on the transmission cables was completed in January. The team is now working on completion of the substation modifications. The entire project is expected to be finished late this year.

The planning, design, and construction of the Cable Project required the expertise of highly-trained specialists in many areas, including electrical engineering, civil engineering, and environmental science.

The seminars were designed to bring the project to life for the students and to show them the opportunities available for future career choices in the electric utility industry.

The three 90-minute interactive programs at North Quincy High School featured an explanation of the project's electricity distribution system and how electricity is delivered to local homes and businesses and an overview of the project, including purpose, scope, and description of its major components.

On display were cable equipment and safety devices; selected students were asked to don safety gear and attempt to manipulate hand tools and equipment.

The students were also introduced to the specialized drilling equipment and techniques used to cross under Dorchester Bay from the rainbow gas tank on Morrissey Blvd. over to Squantum Point and learned of the measures taken to accommodate local environmental sensitivities, such as marine wildlife and bird sanctuaries.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS urged students to take an active interest in science and to be aware of technological advancements in the community.

ANGIE MELCHIN, left, and Meghan McCombs examine an aerial photograph of Mass Electric's Underground Cable Project.

MARY YOUNG, North Quincy High School Science Department administrator, enjoyed her role as coordinator of the educational seminars.

AILEEN DUFFY, left, Mass Electric project administrator, and Betty Yau, community relations specialist, try on protective gloves and helmets that were displayed at the seminars.

WILLIAM SETOW, a student at North Quincy High School, demonstrated a keen interest in the Mass Electric Underground Cable Project.

PAUL RICHARDS, environmental engineer for the cable project, discussed the ecological safeguards and measures that were taken to protect local bird sanctuaries and marine wildlife.

PATRICK McDERMOTT, Ward 3 councillor, cited the Mass Electric substation as a benefit to the entire city.

Transport Workers Union Endorses Harold For Register Of Deeds

The Transport Workers Union of America, Railroad division, Local 2054 of Quincy, announces its endorsement of Paul Harold for Norfolk County Register of Deeds.

Harold, who is President of the City Council, is seeking the Democratic nomination for Register of Deeds that will be voted on in the Democratic primary Sept. 19. Incumbent Register Barry Hannon announced earlier this month that he would not seek re-election.

In the endorsement, Union President Daniel Maguire said of Harold, "Our endorsement is based on your record of support for labor during your time served in the State Senate and most recently as Quincy City Councillor. As Register I know you will continue to support labor's priority issues and needs."

Harold said that the union endorsement was particularly important in drawing attention to the election of the new Register. "The Register of Deeds position is an important county post but normally of limited visibility. This endorsement will help prioritize the election of this post among union members and their families and serve as a guide for all Democrats in the September election."

WJDA Takes Two First Place Mass Broadcasters Awards

For the second consecutive year, Quincy radio station WJDA was the recipient of two awards at the 2000 Massachusetts Broadcasters Association (MBA) Star Awards.

The awards ceremony was hosted by nationally known humorist Dick Flavin of Quincy last week at the Boston Museum of Science Cahners Theatre.

The MBA Star Awards recognize excellence in television and radio broadcasting. More than 50 stations entered competition categories ranging from newscast to air personality. The event was sponsored by ASCAP.

WJDA received First Place in the "Retail Commercial Campaign" category for a series of commercials written and produced for The Smoke Shop in Woblaston. Another First Place honor was received in the "Service Commercial" category for a commercial for B&D Catering in Weymouth. The commercials were written and produced by Debbie Logan and Dennis Knudsen.

Established in 1954, the Massachusetts Broadcasters Association is a non-profit trade association for radio and television stations in Massachusetts. Its purpose is to assist with broadcast industry and general business related challenges. MBA members are offered legal hotlines, lobbying representation, updates on industry trends, and opportunities to network with other broadcasters.

MWRA To Build Two Covered Water Tanks In Quincy Blue Hills

The MWRA plans to construct two covered reinforced concrete water tanks of 12.5 million gallons capacity each in the east end of the MDC Blue Hills Reservation in Quincy.

The MDC said the project will provide its south water system with necessary distribution service.

The MWRA is replacing all of its uncovered water storage facilities in the distribution system with covered storage, in order to keep previously treated water from being re-exposed to possible airborne and runoff contamination.

Covered storage is an essential component of the MWRA's Integrated Water Supply Improvement Program, which also includes, pipeline rehabilitation, watershed protection, the construction of the Walnut Hill Water Treatment Plant in Marlborough, and the construction of the 17.5 mile MetroWest Water Supply Tunnel, which will run from Marlborough to Weston.

When the tanks are completed, the tanks will be back-filled, covered with top soil and meadow grass. MWRA has been studying all of the project alternatives with the assistance of a project working group, consisting of representatives of the affected communities, the MDC, the Friends of the Blue Hills, Massachusetts Audubon Society and other interested parties.

For more information on the project call MWRA Community Coordinator Michele Gillen or Ted Cosgrove at 617-788-1170.

Ward 5 Assn. To Hold Seniors Planning Seminar

The Ward 5 Community Association will host a planning seminar for senior citizens Tuesday, April 25 at 7 p.m. at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, Beale St.

The meeting is open to the public. Coffee and refreshments will be served.

Featured speaker will be Timothy McAloon, Esq., Ward 5 Community Association treasurer and a lawyer with a specialty in estate planning, wills, taxes, and other issues pertaining to senior citizens. He will discuss proper planning strategies for seniors that will benefit them and their loved ones.

The meeting will be held near the senior housing complexes at 80 Clay St. and 91 Clay St. Residents from throughout the area are welcome to attend.

"Unlike other seminars, there will be solicitation or pressure on seniors to sign-up or purchase any goods or services," said Ward 5 Community Association Dave Murphy. "This seminar is being conducted in an effort to educate our seniors about the benefits available to them hidden within the myriad of laws and regulations that concern their estates, taxes, insurance plans, and other important issues.

"I encourage everyone, not just our seniors to take advantage of this opportunity," Murphy added.

McAloon authors the "Legal Corner" article that appears in the Ward 5 Community Association newsletter. His article in the March 2000 newsletter addresses issues concerning the changes in the Senior Pharmacy program and Senior Pharmacy Plus program.

For more information, or to become a member of the association, call Murphy at (617) 479-3631.

How Much For Open Space, Tourism?

Hanley.

Robert Galligan, co-owner of the Adams Inn, echoed earlier comments by Keohane and dispelled the idea that the tourism money would somehow benefit hotels only. "It (advertising/promotion) doesn't bring people to the hotel, it brings people to the state or, in this case, the city," Galligan explained. "It helps them choose where they will spend their taxable income."

Joseph Hajjar, owner of the Yard Rock Blues Club and no stranger to promotional efforts such as the very successful summer Blues Fest, looked at the bigger picture, arguing that money for tourism was less about percentages and more about how the city viewed itself.

"This city, in my opinion, has to make a decision: big league or minor league," Hajjar said. "We have to define ourselves."

The proposed home rule petition calls for a gradual room tax for all hotels and motels starting in July of 2001 until it reaches the legal maximum of four percent in 2004. The local tax would be on top of a statewide 5.7 percent tax on motels and hotels.

Regardless of the split, the majority of the new revenue would create the city's first-ever fund for the acquisition of open space, as well as the restoration and maintenance of historical sites, parks, and coastal areas.

When the tax reaches its maximum, and with the expected construction of a 461-room Marriott Hotel at Crown Colony, the city could eventually generate an estimated $500,000 to $750,000 in revenue.

Sheets Seeks $190,000 For Park Department To Maintain School Grounds

Mayor James Sheets sent a $190,000 appropriation before the City Council Tuesday night to allow the Parks Department to become responsible for the city's 20 public school grounds.

The appropriation provides a $120,000 capital outlay for equipment and $70,000 for salary and support.

If all goes well, Sheets said, the Parks Department, under the leadership of executive director Thomas Koch, could begin work on school grounds by late Spring.

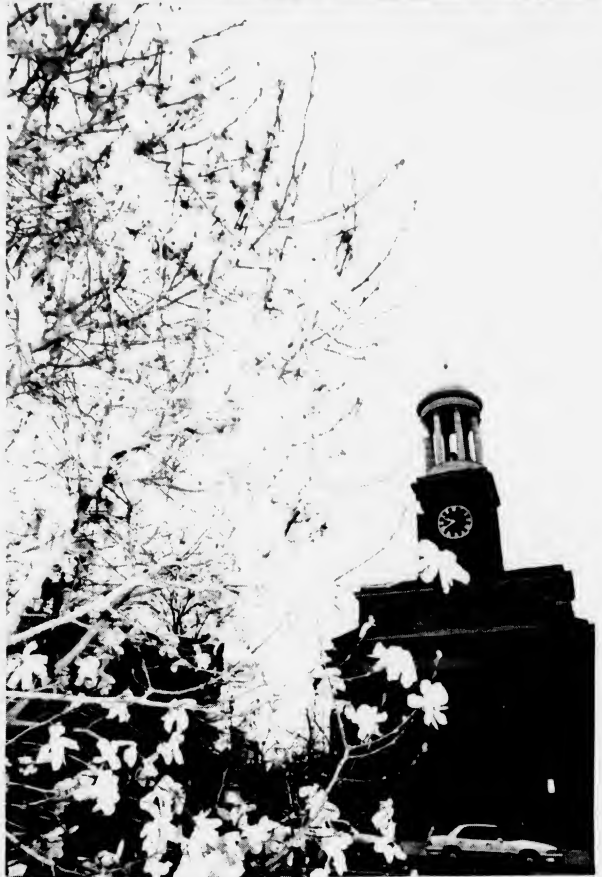

The mayor said he foresaw no difficulties with the appropriation because the council has already gone on record in support of the proposal, voting March 20 to adopt the plan.

At first, Sheets said,

Koch and his department would target four or five schools a year for a thorough beautification, after which only regular maintenance would be required.

"We've gotten nothing but positive feedback on the greening of the schools program," Sheets said.

Previously, maintaining school grounds had been the responsibility of the School Department.

Quincy High NEASC Evaluation May 7-10

As Quincy High School readies itself for a May evaluation by the New England Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges (NEASC), the school received a recent visit from the NEASC evaluation chairperson.

Robert Chiappetta, of the Newtown Public Schools of Newtown, CT, made an all-day preliminary visit to QHS and met with Supt. Eugene Creedon, QHS Principal Robert Keuther, the school's chairpersons for each Standard of Learning, and the Faculty Steering Committee.

He toured the facilities and shared information about the upcoming evaluation, which will take place May 7-10.

Chiappetta will head a 16-member team, comprised of educators from the New England area, which will review the school's self-study documents prepared over the last two years. The team will meet with teachers, administrators, parents, students, and local representatives with the goal of assessing Quincy High's impact on student learning.

The team will also tour buildings and attend classes. From their observations the team will formulate a report, to be filed with the NEASC office, which will include perceptions of Quincy High's strengths and needs as well as a recommendation toward continued accreditation.

By the coming fall a preliminary report of NEASC findings will be sent to Principal Keuther for review and comment. Later in the year NEASC will inform the school of its official statement of accreditation.

Quincy High School last received its accreditation in 1990.

Money-Saving Tools Seminar For Homebuyers

A regional seminar Monday, April 24 will help first-time homebuyers save money on their mortgage.

Representatives of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and Jack Conway & Co. will discuss the benefits of Federal Housing Administration (FHA) loans, which allow first-time buyers to purchase a home with a downpayment of three percent. FHA loans also allow the entire downpayment to be a gift.

Participants in the seminar will be eligible to receive a free financial analysis and a copy of their credit report, said Carol Bulman, president of Conway Financial Services. Potential buyers who attend the seminar and complete the credit consultation will receive a certificate that entitles them to a half-point reduction in the upfront mortgage-insurance premium on FHA loans — a savings of $750 on a loan of $150,000.

"It's a fantastic opportunity for people to learn about their financing options and see which loan programs are available to them," Bulman said. "Anyone thinking about buying a home in the Brockton area and surrounding communities is encouraged to come and have their questions answered."

The homebuyer education seminar will be held April 24, from 7 to 9 p.m. at Massasoit Community College Conference Center (formerly Christo's II), 770 Crescent St., Brockton. The free event, sponsored by Jack Conway & Co. in partnership with HUD, is the only one of its kind in the area.

In addition to the financing discussion and an outline of the homebuying process, information on HUD-owned properties and other homes currently for sale will be provided.

Other seminars are scheduled to be held during the next two months in Dorchester and the Fall River/New Bedford area, Bulman said.

Reservations are not required, but are preferred since space is limited. For reservations, call (888) 831-1181.

Flynn & Co. Brokers $4.5 Million Sale Of 3-Acre Weymouth Site

Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc. CEO Dan Flynn III has negotiated the $4,500,000 sale of 500 Washington St., Weymouth.

The 3.2-acre site was sold by South Shore Entertainment Group of Weymouth to Opportunity Acquisition Fund, LLC of Waltham.

The site is slated to be the future home of a new CVS

Pharmacy. Demolition of the existing 14,000 square-foot building on the site will begin this spring. The building is the former home of the Sports Resort nightclub. Construction of a new 12,000+ square foot building will also begin this spring under the supervision of Boston-based Marlin Development.

"The development of this site will allow the area to capitalize on its huge potential," Flynn said. "At the junction of two major routes, the site offers great exposure to traffic flow, conditions under which a retail business will thrive. This is an ideal site for a pharmaceutical operation."

Protect Yourself From Mosquitoes

What can be done to reduce the number of mosquitoes around the home?

Mosquito breeding around the home can be reduced significantly by reducing the amount of standing water available for mosquito breeding.

- Dispose of tin cans, plastic containers, ceramic pots or similar water-holding containers that have accumulated on your property. Do not overlook containers that have become overgrown by aquatic vegetation.

- Pay special attention to discarded tires that may have accumulated on your property. The used tire has become the most important domestic mosquito producer in this country.

- Drill holes in the bottom of recycling containers that are left out of doors. Drainage holes that are located on the sides collect enough water for mosquitoes to breed in.

- Clean clogged roof gutters on an annual basis, particularly if the leaves from surrounding trees have a tendency to plug up the drains. Roof gutters are easily overlooked but can produce millions of mosquitoes each season.

- Fix any holes in screens and make sure they are tightly attached to all doors and windows. Inspect weather stripping around all doors.

- Turn over plastic wading pools when not in use. A wading pool becomes a mosquito producer if it is not used on a regular basis.

- Turn over wheelbarrows and do not allow water to stagnate in bird baths. Both provide breeding habitat for domestic mosquitoes.

- Aerate ornamental pools or stock them with fish. Water gardens are fashionable but become major mosquito producers if they are allowed to stagnate. Clean and chlorinate swimming pools that are not being used. A swimming pool that is left untended by a family that goes on vacation for a month can produce enough mosquitoes to result in neighborhood-wide complaints. Be aware that mosquitoes may even breed in the water that collects on swimming pool covers.

- Use landscaping to eliminate standing water that collects on your property. Mosquitoes will develop in any puddle that lasts more than four days.

Personal Protective Measures:

- Avoid outdoor activities at dawn and dusk when mosquitoes are most active. If you must be outdoors wear long-sleeved shirts, long pants and use mosquito repellent that contains DEET and follow the directions on the label.

- Cover up the arms and legs of children playing outdoors near swampy areas.

- When outdoors, cover babies' playpens or carriages with mosquito netting. Don't camp overnight near freshwater swamps where mosquitoes are most active.

- When camping outdoors in tents in other areas, make sure your tent is equipped with mosquito netting.

Freshman Pitcher Muollo Gives Presidents' Hope

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School baseball team caught a glimpse of the future Monday morning but, unfortunately, it was still the present day and the Presidents dropped their fifth straight game.

Freshman pitcher Rob Muollo gave the Presidents four strong innings, allowing one unearned run, before running out of gas in the fifth as Scituate scored four times on its way to a 9-0 win in the opening round of the Brian F. O'Donnell Memorial Tournament at Hull.

Sophomore hurler Jesse Cole (3-0) overpowered Quincy, tossing a complete-game one-hitter with 12 strikeouts and two walks. The only hit he allowed came with two outs in the sixth inning when junior Dave Centrella stroked a single past the glove of the second baseman.

Cole has not allowed an earned run in 24 innings pitched this season, and he has 27 strikeouts.

"He threw some heat," said coach Michael Draiccho. "We only got one hit off him. We're not going to hit a kid throwing that hard that we haven't even seen yet. And the cold weather I think was a little bit of a factor. But we can't come up with any excuses."

Quincy (0-5, 0-3) played against Hull in the consolation game yesterday (Wednesday) morning. Scituate (5-2) faced Hingham in the championship game in the afternoon.

Earlier in the week, Quincy lost three league games. It fell to Taunton, 15-4, last Tuesday and traveled to Barnstable last Thursday where it lost, 13-7. In the home opener Saturday morning, Silver Lake crushed the Presidents, 24-4.

The Presidents were short-handed against Scituate and Silver Lake as four starters were suspended for two weeks (four games) for violating team rules. They missed yesterday's game and will also sit out next Wednesday's home game against Falmouth.

"It really hurts us a lot, counting on guys that were starters," Draiccho said. "It's just unfortunate. But that's the rules and that's what they have to live by. They know the rules."

After giving up the unearned run in the first inning, Muollo cruised through the next three innings with some help from his defense as two men were thrown out at home. In the fifth, Muollo gave up four runs on three hits, two walks and a balk.

"He did a great job on the mound," Draiccho said. "He had trouble in one inning. But overall he has pitched as good as anybody else that has pitched for us. He's going to be with us the rest of the year."

Senior John Cooper pitched the final two innings. He gave up a leadoff hit in the sixth but then retired the next three batters to get out of the inning. In the seventh, though, Scituate reached him for four runs on a single, walk, double, triple and a double to make it 9-0.

In Saturday's game, Silver Lake roughed up starting

Raiders In Run, Hit Drought

North Quincy baseball coach Larry Taglieri has no explanation for his team's performance the last two games.

The Red Raiders have not scored a run in two games and of more concern, it has only three hits during that span.

Three hits. This is a team that made opposing pitchers look like they were little leaguers, scoring 24 runs in its first three games, all of which were wins.

Tuesday afternoon, Milton strolled into Adams Field and pitchers John Bono and Jimmy Moonan combined for a one-hit shutout in an 11-0 non-league win. Last Thursday, it was Taunton's Sean Nunes who handcuffed the Red Raiders with a two-hit shutout in a 2-0 victory.

North Quincy did pull out a 10-9 win over Silver Lake in extra innings last Tuesday — but that seems like ages ago.

"I wish I knew what the hell it was," said Taglieri, who watched his team fall to 3-2 overall after the loss to Milton. "We just have to keep working. It's the quarter point of the season and if we hit better, we're going to achieve the goals that we set."

Senior Matt McCann started on the hill against Milton and struggled early on, loading the bases after the first three batters. Shawn Wilshire ripped a two-run double to center and Milton scored on a passed ball and a wild pitch to make it 4-0 after one inning.

Senior co-captain Joe Flynn started at catcher for the first time this season, replacing senior Brian Deputa who has struggled, and pitcher John Lupo for 10 runs on 13 hits in just three innings. Cooper pitched the fourth and fifth innings and gave up five runs. Freshman Mark Lopez finished the game.

Senior co-captain Tim Pezzullo had a two-out, two-run single for Quincy in the fourth inning.

In last Thursday's game, Quincy led 4-2 before Barnstable erupted for seven runs in the fourth inning to pull away with the win. Junior Peter Turowski (3 RBIs) and Centrella (3 runs) each had two hits for Quincy.

In the Taunton game, Quincy committed eight errors to take away any chance it had of taming the Tigers in the league opener.

Taunton scored three unearned runs off Lupo in the first inning as his defense made three errors behind him. The Presidents, though, answered in the second when Joe Duffy crushed a two-run home run.

But Taunton took a 9-2 lead in the bottom half of the inning when Quincy made three more blunders that led to six runs. Taunton added three runs in the third and fourth innings to grab a commanding 15-2 lead.

Cooper and Senior Dan Long kept Taunton off the scoreboard in the fifth and sixth innings. Quincy added two runs in the seventh on senior co-captain Joe Tower's two-run double to account for the final score.

battled back there.

"Joe Flynn is a captain and that was the fourth position he played this year, and he'll probably play more than that before the season is over," Taglieri said. "He's the kind of kid that will do anything for you and the team."

In the fourth inning, Milton grabbed a 6-0 lead. Chris Burke led with a double and scored when Mark Daley smashed a two-out single up the middle. Mike Nilond followed with a single to knock McCann out of the game.

Senior T.J. Bell came in and walked the next two batters to load the bases, and Daley scored from third when a pitch got by Flynn.

In the bottom half, the Red Raiders loaded the bases with no outs when Chris Walsh walked, Rob Celata singled and John Gavin reached on an error. But Bono settled down and retired the next three batters to escape the jam.

"That was the ballgame right there," Taglieri said. "It was 6-0 and we had a chance to get back in it. We have to capitalize and we didn't. You're not going to win too many games scoring zero runs."

Milton scored five runs in the fifth, all with two outs, to make it 11-0. Nilond had a two-run single and Matt Hollisey a two-run double.

In the Taunton game, junior pitcher Keith Doherty (1-1) picked up the tough loss in his second start of the season. The left-hander went the distance, allowing only five hits and two unearned runs.

The Tigers scored the only run they needed in the first inning without a hit. Junior Derek Sanchez led with a walk, stole second and third, and scored when Deputula's pick-off throw from behind the plate hit him in the back.

North Quincy had a chance to tie the score in the second when Walsh reached second with no outs. But Nunes got Deputula to pop to short and then he fanned Lockhead and O'Toole.

In the fifth, the Red Raiders again got the lead man on when Lockhead was hit by a pitch. But rather than bunt him to second, North Quincy opted for O'Toole to swing away and he weakly popped up to first baseman Mark Foley in foul territory. Junior Mike Keddy followed with a strikeout and then Chris Doherty drilled a single to right but was thrown out at first after taking too many steps towards second.

If O'Toole had moved Lockhead to second, he would have easily scored the tying run on Doherty's hit as right fielder C.J. Askew bobbled the ball. And Doherty could have held up in a rundown to make sure he crossed the plate.

Taunton added an insurance run in the sixth. Keith Doherty struck out Mark Wakefield but the ball got by Deputula to allow Chris Ciesluk to score from third.

In the Silver Lake game, North Quincy held a 9-6 lead after five innings but the Lakers battled back to send the game into extra innings.

In the bottom of the eighth, Keith Doherty and Walsh each drew two-out walks to bring up Deputula who hit a grounder to short. But the shortstop bobbled the ball, couldn't get the force out on Walsh at second and his throw home was not in time to nail the hustling Doherty for the winning run.

Flynn and Bell each went 2 for 4 with 2 RBIs and Lockhead went 2 for 3 with an RBI and two runs scored.

Notes: In the fourth inning of the Taunton game, Flynn made the defensive play of the year when he snagged a ball tailing away from him in deep left-center...Co-captain Bill O'Toole, who has played in only one game this season because of a sore arm, may be back sometime this week.

A Thought For The Week

It is Easter - the occasion for Christians to rejoice again the celebration of the Resurrection. It is Easter - the occasion for a new beginning in our lives; an occasion for renewal of the spirit. It is Easter - a time of awakening to new understanding of what is important in life; a time to find new depths of thought and feeling within ourselves. It is Easter - a time of hope and promise of new life and bright days.

Easter comes garlanded in crocuses and hyacinths, its triumphal procession is attended by pink and white dogwood and yellow forsythia and flowering crab. Animals are born and nibble the tender green grass of yet another spring. Birds that fled the blasts of winter return and flash their various colors from tree to tree. The sun that stood aloof dips down to color the gardener's face as he entrusts to the good earth, the seeds that will blossom into flowers and floods of varied hue.

Easter's message, like that of Christmas, is of good tidings and great joy. It speaks to the eternal abundance of life.

Easter is a hopeful holiday and we hope our readers will enjoy it to the fullest...A JOYOUS EASTER TO ALL...

New Law Removes Barriers For People With Disabilities

By LAURIE ZASTROW

A new law recently signed by the President removes barriers requiring people with disabilities to choose between health care coverage and work.

The new law expands the choices of people with disabilities in obtaining vocational rehabilitation (VR) services.

"The Ticket to Work and Work Incentives Improvement Act directs the Social Security Administration to establish a "Ticket to Work and Self-Sufficiency Program." This program will provide Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) and Supplemental Security Income disability beneficiaries with a ticket they may use to obtain VR services, employment services or other support services from an approved provider of their choice, including state VR agencies.

In addition the law provides expanded availability of health care services:

- States could choose to provide Medicaid coverage to more people ages 16-64 with disabilities who work.

- States may permit working individuals with incomes above 250 percent of the federal poverty level to buy-in to Medicaid.

- A new Medicaid buy-in demonstration project was created to provide medical assistance to workers with disabilities who are not yet severe enough to cause them to stop work and file for benefits.

- Medicare Part A premium-free coverage was extended for SSDI beneficiaries to return to work for 4 1/2 years beyond the current limit.

Other provisions of the law include expedited reinstatement of benefits without filing a new application and prohibition for continuing disability reviews due to work activity for beneficiaries who have received Social Security disability benefits for at least 24 months.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

HEALTHBEAT

Coumadin And Careful Monitoring

By JACK ANSELL, M.D.
Quincy Medical Center

I recently saw a patient in consultation who asked, "I was diagnosed with a heart rhythm disturbance called atrial fibrillation, and now have to take an anticoagulant medication called Coumadin every day, perhaps for the rest of my life. What does this drug do, and why must I have my blood checked so often?"

Coumadin, one of the most widely prescribed drugs in the United States, is used by patients with certain medical conditions to prevent or treat the formation of dangerous blood clots in the arteries or heart. It works by blocking the action of vitamin K, which plays a major role in blood clotting.

While Coumadin is a very effective drug, it poses some serious risks for uncontrolled bleeding, and therefore its use must be monitored carefully by a physician, or health care professional.

Blood clotting is essential for human life, as it allows the body to defend itself against blood loss from injury. When a blood vessel is severed, the blood thickens, or coagulates (clots), thereby plugging up the vessel and preventing too much blood from escaping. If blood did not clot in this fashion, even the most insignificant cut or internal injury could lead to fatal blood loss. However, blood clotting can create problems for certain individuals, particularly those with conditions that put them at risk for "emboli," blood clots that form in the arteries or the heart. Depending on where these clots form or lodge, they can create roadblocks that prevent oxygen-rich blood from reaching essential organs, such as the brain or heart, and lead to life-threatening heart attacks and strokes.

People with heart rhythm disturbances, artificial heart valves, phlebitis (blood clots in the legs) or, in some cases, those who have had a stroke or heart attack, are particularly susceptible to developing emboli. For such patients, Coumadin can be lifesaving. However, the danger of Coumadin is that, at certain dosages or under certain conditions, it can prevent blood from clotting when it needs to clot. Because Coumadin's effect varies among individuals, and even in the same individual over time, it must be monitored closely and frequently to ensure that proper dosage is always being taken.

Many factors can alter the delicate balance of Coumadin's effect on the blood, so patients must keep their doctor informed about virtually any changes in their daily habits or health. These include changes in their diet or consumption of alcohol, illnesses, use of other medications (including over-the-counter drugs), and weight loss or gain. Even something as ostensibly healthy as going on a weight-reduction diet (which often includes eating copious amounts of vitamin K-rich foods, such as salads) must be reported to your physician. Patients must also avoid activities that could put them at risk for bleeding, such as contact sports or even skiing.

Coumadin's action is monitored with a blood test that checks the time it takes for the blood to clot. To ensure that the prescribed dosage is within a therapeutic range, patients just starting the drug must have their blood checked at least once a week for several weeks, every two or three weeks once they are stabilized and, eventually, once a month (if they are stable) for as long as they take the medication.

The most serious risk posed by Coumadin is major (often internal) bleeding, which may require transfusions and sometimes hospitalization. Less than five percent of patients suffer an episode, which, on rare occasion, can be fatal. However, with good, well-coordinated care, the rate of major bleeding drops to an average of about two percent.

Symptoms of bleeding that should be brought to a physician's attention immediately include obvious external bleeding from a cut or other injury, as well as signs of internal bleeding, such as black and tarry or blood-tinged stools, pink urine, bleeding gums, or nosebleeds.

Thus, Coumadin is a very effective drug in preventing strokes and other blood clotting diseases. At the same time, it can be dangerous if not monitored carefully by a physician or health professional. It is essential to be on the lookout, and to report to your doctor, any signs of bleeding or other changes that might affect your response.

added, given that silt build-up at the yacht club was making things hard for boaters.

"This (the dredging) hasn't been done in 30 years," Sheets said. "It's very difficult right now for boats to maneuver at low tide. In two or three years, the increased silt will make it difficult even at high tide."

Although the mayor foresaw no timetable problems, he said the city was aware that the dredging schedule was dependent in large part on the smelt breeding season this summer.

Essentially, if dredging does not take place before June, the project will have to wait until October.

safeguards provided by Victory, who either through a lapse of attention, or was tired or who didn't care even with a prompter in her face causing an "horrendous position for the License Board and the company."

Stating that the "punishment doesn't fit the crime" Fleming said maybe the clerks who sell the liquor to minors should get a $2,000 fine and a possible jail sentence rather than have the company punished.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman explained the policy as being "consistent" and alluded to inconsistencies prior to the adoption of the 1992 policy regarding the punishment for the sale of liquor to minors.

Stating that some establishments would receive a "slap in the hand" while others were given suspended license, Gorman said the policy adopted in 1992 states that first offenses for everyone would be a seven day suspension.

Gorman said stores have to be "more diligent, card everybody and then you won't get caught."

Frane said the guidelines are in effect and that the rules were in place when the sting operation by Perchard was conducted.

During the meeting, Building inspector Walter White tried to amend Frane's motion by giving a year's probation to the companies and if they were in violation at the end of the year, the license would be then be suspended.

However, the motion failed and the board voted to suspend.

During the sting operation in which Perchard visited 19 stores, three were found in violation. Each time, he would send a 19 year old man without an ID and with a marked $10 bill to enter the store and purchase a six-pack of beer. Each time, when the man would come out, Perchard would go back in the store, return the beer and retrieve the bill and then talk to the store managers.

David E. Schurga, manager of Joe's Market Place and Brian Timberlake, manager of Atlas Liquors and Arthur DiGeronimo, owner of Victory Supermarket all told the board about the safeguards used in their stores, their "flawless" records, plus courses all employees took including the TIPS course. All said the sale "just slipped through the cracks" appealed to the board for consideration.

Chairman Joseph Shea said "we do not single anyone out" and said in the case of Atlas Liquors, who told the board they do not sell "milk or bread" the store depends solely on the sale of alcohol.

Frane who said he understood some of the hardships, said "clearly a mistake was made" likened the violation to someone who purchased the liquor, and then got in a car and "killed someone".

Shea said each of the companies has five days to appeal following a letter from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC). The dates of the suspensions will be heard at the next meeting.

Sachem St. Area Sewer Project Shows Positive Results

Mayor James Sheets announces that the infrastructure work in the Sachem Street area, including West and Elm Avenues has begun to yield good results. He said the objective to replace sewer lines and keep contamination out of storm drains.

As part of the program in the sub-area 7 (Sachem Street), old sewer pipes have been replaced with new ones. Weekly coliform readings are being taken at Outfall 7, and since the first of the year (through March 17) 11 samples have been taken. The result of the test he said had remarkable

'I Feel Vindicated'

Ethics Commission Won't Pursue Cahill Complaint

The Massachusetts Ethics Commission will not pursue a conflict of interest charge brought against Councillor Tim Cahill involving the controversial Highpoint development on Quarry St.

Cahill said he and his attorney, Thomas Kiley, were so informed by the commission last Friday.

"I feel vindicated," said Cahill.

The civil complaint was brought last year by the South Shore Building and Trades Council which had also brought a criminal conflict charge that did not go far in Quincy District Court.

TIM CAHILL

'This is a clear vindication.'

The union alleged Cahill violated the conflict of interest law by participating in

City Council discussions and voting on the Highpoint matter because members of his family own property near the site and could benefit.

Kiley said the Ethics Commission which has been investigating the matter since early last year "found that its normal presumptions concerning the financial effect of a project on nearby properties are offset in the Highpoint case."

Kiley said the Commission's Enforcement Division "has decided not to even allege that Councillor Cahill violated the (conflict) law."

The Commission's report, he said stated: "Three real estate appraisers contacted by the Ethics Commission and familiar with the Highpoint project opined that the project was not likely to have an impact on property values."

The ruling further states, said Kiley, that "on balance it appears that the evidence is sufficiently equivoical (counterbalanced) to prevent the commission from concluding that you violated section 19 by participating in the PUD permitting process for the Highpoint Development Project."

Suggests Tourism Assistant To Events Coordinator Hanley Proposes 80/20% Split On Hotel/Motel Tax Revenue

Greg Hanley, chairman of the City Council's Ordinance Committee, proposes a compromise split of hotel/motel occupancy tax revenue with 80 percent going to open space and 20 percent to tourism promotion.

Hanley also says he does not feel the need for an independent tourism bureau with a $330,000 budget as proposed by tourism consultant Dan Yaeger of Yaeger Associates.

Related Story On Page 16

Instead of an independent bureau, Hanley suggests that a Tourism Administrative Assistant be assigned to City Events Coordinator Rhonda Merrill.

This, he says, would eliminate overhead and other costs of an independent bureau and scale the budget down to $205,000 — $170,000 for marketing and $35,000 for the tourism administrative assistant.

Yaeger was to meet informally with the City Council Tuesday night in support of the business community's request of a 70/30 percent split in the hotel/motel tax revenue, with 70 percent for open space and 30 percent for tourism.

An Open Letter To Community:

They Vow To Right A Fundraiser Wrong

EUGENE CREEDON

The following open letter to the Quincy Community is from School Superintendent Eugene Creedon and Quincy High School Principal Robert Keuther, regarding a promised fundraising program book that was not produced.

Dear Community of Quincy:

In the fall/winter of 1999 Quincy High School embarked on a telemarketing fundraising campaign hiring the Celebrity for the Stars Foundation, Inc.

We followed all Quincy Public Schools procedures including researching and referencing the company's fundraising activities. The fundraising effort included sponsors being promised an advertising program book that was to be presented at a Harlem Rockets Comedy Basketball Show on April 28, 2000.

Recently, we received information from the Mansfield Police Department that the Celebrity for the Stars Foundation had allegedly defrauded the Mansfield Athletic Department by not arriving at their scheduled event, presenting the guaranteed program book and giving them the amount fundraised. Investigation produced information that this was the Foundation's second scheduled event that they had not attended.

At this time Quincy Public Schools is working in conjunction with the Quincy Police Department and State of Massachusetts Attorney Generals Office to follow all appropriate nec-

The programs, called "FAC" or Family Assistance Conference and "Program Success," are a collaborative effort involving the Quincy School System, Quincy Police Department and Quincy District Court which work together in the best interests of families and children.

The Quincy School System will receive the Quincy Court Outstanding Program Award. Accepting the award in behalf of the school system will be Janet Powell, director of Pupil Personnel. Powell is involved in both programs. Making the presentation will be Judge Mary McCallum, juvenile court judge and Quincy Police Chief Thomas Frane.

- Meter 29, which is located on Adams St. and Beale St.

- Meter 85, Beale St. and Summit Ave.

- Meter 166, Furnace Brook Parkway at Copeland St.

- Meter 199, West Squantum St. at Amsterdam Ave.

"After 11 years of Cleaner, Greener Quincy, all of our parks, playgrounds, open spaces and business districts are much cleaner and more beautiful," Sheets said. "However, the true measure of our success has been the continued commitment of our volunteers who have taken great pride in keeping our city beautiful year-round. I appreciate the help of everyone who participates in Cleaner, Greener Quincy and I look forward to seeing everyone again on May 13."

This year's program will concentrate mainly on cleaning the City's public beaches. Crews from the Park Department and Department of Public Works will target eight separate City beaches as part of this year's Cleaner, Greener Quincy cleanup.

"Cleaner, Greener Quincy 2000 will represent the first major step toward keeping our public beaches clean and attractive to residents. Through the help of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and the Quincy Park Department, our City beaches will soon return to being the attractive, recreational amenities that they once were," Sheets said.

Sheets said anyone who would like more information above may call the Quincy Park Department at 376-1254 to arrange for tools and trash pickup.

In conjunction with

Cleaner, Greener Quincy, the Park Department will be conducting the annual "Yard Care Conference"

Saturday, April 29. Experts in lawn care, gardening, tree care and other topics will help residents carry the spirit of Cleaner, Greener Quincy to their own properties.

"The Park Department aims to empower residents with the knowledge and the confidence to tackle those persistent problems that we all face with our yard or garden. If one person in each neighborhood decides to improve their property, we find that it has a domino effect and soon the entire neighborhood is more beautiful," said Thomas Koch, Executive Director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments.

The Park Department will also be holding the third annual "Neat Neighbors" contest, which recognizes those residents that maintain their yards and/or properties in the spirit of a Cleaner, Greener Quincy. The nominations will be open from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

Sheets: How Many Terms?

Political question of the week and maybe the next few years:

How long will Jim Sheets be mayor?

The answer: probably as long as he wants.

Unless, of course, something unforeseen and dramatic happens to turn things politically upside down.

Right now a seventh term looks like a sure thing.

And if you're wondering if Sheets is going for it, he is.

"I'm definitely running again next year," he says.

Paul Harold's surprise decision to run for Norfolk County Register of Deeds takes him out of the mayoral picture for next year whether he wins or loses that county seat.

If he wins he will be out of the mayoral scene for at least six years. It's a six-year term.

But Harold's decision, says Sheets, has nothing to do with his own plans to seek a seventh term.

Sheets says he still has projects he wants to see completed while still in office among them Squantum Gardens and the Quarry Hills Golf Course.

"Not just to be there to cut the ribbon," he says. "But to see they are done the way they should be done."

And, he hasn't given up on the Fore River shipyard. He thinks ships will be built there. And that even Sotirios Emmanouil might yet be the one to build them.

Of the potential mayoral candidates frequently mentioned, Harold was considered the most likely to have taken Sheets on.

The two others -- Tim Cahill and Dan Raymond -- appear willing to bide their time and wait for Sheets to step down.

Sheets hasn't had a heavy-weight challenger since moving into the mayor's office in 1990: token opposition twice and three historic free rides.

A lot of people thought the big showdown was coming next year with Harold as that first major challenger.

And many of his long-time supporters are disappointed that it's not going to be.

Talking with Sheets you sense that he might be a little disappointed, about that himself. Like he had been getting ready for battle and now the battle isn't there. A letdown of sorts.

Sheets has already made political history as the longest serving mayor under the Plan A form of government. When he completed his fifth term (10 years) he topped the late Charles Ross who had held the record with nine years.

Completing his current sixth term will give Sheets 12 years.

Only one other mayor, Amelio Della Chiesa, served 12 years, eight under Plan A and four under Plan E.

Plan E mayors, however, didn't run the city. A city manager was the chief executive. The mayor was actually a city councillor elected by his council colleagues. He presided over the council as the council president does today and as mayor was a ceremonial figure and official city greeter.

A seventh term for Sheets would give him the undisputed mayoral longevity championship with 14 years.

And, the question: how many more after that?

ister of Deeds, says he won't file them.

And, Councillor Mike D'Amico has indicated he won't file his either.

That apparently will leave Paul Harold and Mary Ellen Cronin, vice chairwoman of the Zoning Board of Appeals as the only Quincy candidates.

Durkin and D'Amico bowed out because they didn't want to split that crucial Quincy vote with Harold.

But so far it doesn't seem to bother Cronin. She has said she's in the race all the way.

A RECEPTION for Joe Finn, one of the impressive new kids of the political block, is set for Wednesday, May 3 at 6:30 p.m. at the Wollaston Yacht Club, Quincy Shore Dr.

Finn, in his first bid for elective office last year, pulled a strong vote in the City Council at-large race.

He finished fifth just 79 votes behind City Council and Ward 1 Councillor President Peter Kolson who lost his bid for an at-large seat.

The reception is sponsored by the Joe Finn Committee. Tickets are $50.

Disaster Prevention Course At Curry Hardware May 6

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts and City of Quincy will offer helpful tips and disaster prevention techniques Saturday, May 6 from noon to 2 p.m. at Curry Hardware, 370 Copeland St.

The purpose of the course is three-fold: to protect people and structures, and to reduce disaster-related costs.

The public is welcome to attend.

The how-to-course, entitled "Prevention Before A Disaster -- Learn How to Protect Your Home From Damage," will be led by a professional waterproofer from B-Dry System M/E, Inc., who will educate community members on how to protect property from floods and other disasters.

Attendees will also learn how to add waterproof veneer to exterior walls, how to keep wet basements dry, the importance of flood insurance and more.

The course is the first in a series of programs being offered to disaster-prone communities. In the last decade, more than 115 Quincy households have experienced repeated flood loss.

In addition to keeping families safe, the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay aims to help people protect their properties and minimize the costs of disaster response and recovery.

The programs are a result of a grant by the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

For more information, contact Sara Lewis, mitigation officer at the Red Cross, at 617-375-0700 ext. 881.

Scenes From Yesterday

The Beach and Pumping Station, Houghs Neck, QUINCY, Mass.

THIS IS A POSTCARD view of the Nut Island pumping station at the end of Houghs Neck as it appeared shortly after it began operating in 1904. The "pumpy," as it was called by the locals, was the discharge end of a seventeen-mile sewer tunnel built by the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission. It served a large section of Greater Boston receiving sewerage by gravity from the distant western suburbs, as well as the greater Quincy area and discharging the waste into Boston Harbor. Considering its mission, the pumping station was not visually offensive when first built, but for almost 100 years, its foul odors have plagued the surrounding area. Now with the harbor cleanup pretty much completed, that nuisance is gone and Nut Island has become a beautiful seaside park.

D'Amico Responds Regarding His Council Mailings

(The Following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun by Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico for publication)

Dear Neighbor:

Since the day I took an oath to represent the people of Ward 4 in 1996, my primary goal has always been to return local government to the very citizens it is meant to serve. That means that you should know what your elected leaders are doing on your behalf; you should have a place at the table of decision making; and you should expect accountability for every tax dollar spent.

Toward that end, I believe communicating with you is the most essential part of my job. And that's not about to change! Our Honorable Mayor James A. Sheets occupied my seat on the Council for 16 years and agrees with me that the small percentage of our annual city budget earmarked for mailings "is money well spent." Our citizens overwhelmingly agree as well. To the great chagrin of The Patriot Ledger's editorial staff, my constituents have honored me with the largest district vote in Quincy for the last two municipal elections. In doing so, they have repeatedly affirmed the unique way in which I have accommodated the public process to their needs.

It seems, however, that our Councillors-at-Large (Tim Cahill, Paul Harold, and Frank McCauley) don't feel the same way. Each has leveled public criticism, some more colorful than others. But, the credibility of their position must be called into question because they themselves do not deal directly with any particular issues or constituents as ward councillors do every day! Still, The Patriot Ledger saw fit to join them in irresponsibly railing against the high number of mailings I send to my constituents without stopping once to evaluate why that is. That's disappointing because the residents of this City deserve more than political pontificating from their officials and a blind eye from their local news source. So, let's set the record straight, shall we?

In Ward 4, prior to my having been elected, a 700-foot radio tower found its way to people's backyards and many wondered how it got there. BFI expanded its facility and neighbors asked why a decision had been made at City Hall which would compromise their quality of life indefinitely.

Brewer's Corner had become home to an underground element of druglords and gang-violence while people were left in the dark as to what, if anything, was being done about it. Today, all that has changed for one reason. Ordinary citizens have been empowered to steer an era of unprecedented growth, the likes of which could have only been imagined.

Because of my mails, hundreds of people have become involved in Neighborhood Task Forces I created to monitor construction of the West Quincy Golf Course and Crown Colony. A 200-member Crime Watch program helped make Ward 4 the first area to pilot Police Foot Patrols on its streets. And notices I've sent about important neighborhood meetings have brought large numbers of residents together to enact a South Quincy Traffic Masterplan thought to be all but impossible just five short years ago.

And what if the people of Ward 4 opted for the politics of miscommunication instead of offering me their support in 1995? I have publicly disclosed every piece of mail sent to my constituents to answer that very question. I urge Tim Cahill, Paul Harold, or Frank McCauley to peruse these "readings in progress" and cite one clear example of an issue not worthy of the postage it received. The Patriot Ledger artfully

Watch meeting as an advertisement for a barbecue. So much for intellectual honesty in journalism.

The solution to bloated mailing costs is not to sever ties between you and City Hall as some in the press have stopped short of advocating. Even Councillor-at-Large and fiscal conservative Frank McCauley has gone on the record to say that we have never gone "in the red" on account of serving our constituents. A few of my colleagues need to put politics aside long enough to realize the price of excluding people is far greater than the cost of including them. I know I will never forget who I represent even when others do.

Let's handle this matter with common sense. I believe the city should consider $20 postcards as an alternative to $33 letters. Modern innovations such as the internet should be embraced, not ignored. That is why I recently established a first of its kind "Ward 4 E-mail Bank" which has already compelled hundreds of residents who can't attend neighborhood meetings to communicate with me on-line!

I'm proud of that and I want you to know I will continue to reach out to every corner of this community in pursuit of your input. Together, we will continue to lead the way in addressing the issues that touch us all!

Yarrington Opposes Whitwell Street New School Site

By PAUL HAROLD

George Yarrington, spokesman for the Quincy Taxpayers Association (QTA), opposed the purchase of Faxon Family property on Whitwell St. for a new school. He argued that it made more sense to build a larger school on the proposed Furnace Brook Parkway site, rather than two small schools on the two sites.

Yarrington was the only person at the public hearing speaking against the land-taking proposals that were intended to relieve overcrowding at both the Cranch and Wollaston Schools.

Among those advocating the two school plan were Dr. Walter Wrigley, chairman of the citizens advisory group and Mrs. Donald Dupee, mother of three students attending the overcrowded Cranch School.

MAJOR STREET CONSTRUCTION ANNOUNCED

DPW Commissioner Charles Herbert announced a major street construction program costing over $400,000. Six streets would be reconstructed under Chapter 90 by which the state would pay half the cost.

Also included in the work would be all or portions of streets recently accepted by the city: Huntley Rd., Joan Drive, Puritan Drive, Keyes Street, Miles Drive, Priscilla Drive, Sheldon Street, Weston Ave., and Ratchford St.

HULLS FOR ATOM SUBS

COULD BE BUILT AT FORE RIVER

Following the Quincy Shipbuilding Committee's recent visit to Washington, it was speculated that work from Electric Boat could be sub-contracted at Fore River. Specifically, the hulls for atom submarines would be done here.

For many months Electric Boat sought to induce all types of Quincy shipyard workers to relocate, with no success. The new strategy would bring the work to the skilled work force at Fore River.

George Daly, Jr., chairman of the Quincy Shipbuilding Committee, huddled with Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, at the Neighborhood Club, to discuss potential new contracts for the shipyard.

"A friend of mine introduced me to photography in 1978 and I have been pursuing it ever since," says Quincy photographer Darren Golden whose exhibit entitled "Everyone called her Sally" is featured in South Shore Conservatory's Staircase Gallery through the end of April.

Golden's photographs, some of which took first place in the Quincy Art Festival in 1999 and second place in the 1999 Quincy Blues Festival and Art Show, explore the relationship between man-made objects and nature.

"My approach to photography is to explore the juxtaposition between the man-made, the natural world, and the quality of light," he says. "Much of my work concentrates on the relationship between the man-made world and nature, and how quite often as man's objects deteriorate, they acquire an organic atmosphere and so mimic nature."

Golden, a South Shore Art Center artist, started studying photography in high school, and worked as a stringer for the Billerica News during that time. After graduation he joined the U.S. Navy and found himself taking photographs of Russian trawlers for intelligence purposes.

He continued exploring art photography when his enlistment with the Navy expired. His studies included the use of infra-red film, pin hole cameras, and medium-format photography.

"My major influences have been the work of Ansel Adams for his technical expertise and Joel Meyerowitz for his aesthetic sensibilities," says Golden.

Several private collections in Boston, New Hampshire, Arizona, and Long Island have Golden's work.

Admission to South Shore Conservatory's Staircase Gallery at 1 Conservatory Drive, Hingham, is free. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday, 9 a.m. to noon.

MIKE WANKUM, meteorologist for WB56's Ten O'Clock News, visited with Merrymount School fourth and fifth graders recently as part of Wankum's Wonderful World of Weather, a lecture series designed to promote science study and explore the world of meteorology.

Meteorologist Mike Wankum Visits Merrymount School

Merrymount School fourth and fifth graders got a visit recently from WB56 Meteorologist Mike Wankum of The Ten O'Clock News.

Wankum appeared in conjunction with his school lecture series, Wankum's Wonderful World of Weather, which promotes science study and makes meteorology fun and interesting for today's youth.

The lecture series presents an overview of meteorology in a manner designed to pique student interest. Wankum describes meteorology as a study of air masses and explains to students how he examines these air masses to create weather forecasts.

He also discusses severe weather and lightning safety. His review of current affairs, such as global warming and hurricanes, are traditional student favorites.

While at WB56, Wankum uses state-of-the-art weather equipment to formulate three different forecasts during The Ten O'Clock News: "Early Bird Weather," the main weathercast, and "The Travelers Weather Report."

A highly decorated weathercaster, Wankum has won four Emmy Awards for Best Weathercast--Individual Achievement from the National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences (one from the Washington, D.C. regional chapter and three consecutive Emmys from the New England regional chapter). He has received numerous state, local, and national awards for coverage of severe weather patterns and for his civic involvement.

Easter Leftover Ham Pot Pie

If you have any leftover ham as we have at our house, and you don't want a ham sandwich, here is a recipe for pot pie that we use all the time. It's simple and after you have scraped the ham off the bone, put the bone in the freezer and later on you can make a great pea soup.

Ham Pot Pie

1 or 2 cups of leftover ham (more if you have it)
1 package of frozen mixed vegetables (slightly cooked)
1/2 cup milk
1 egg
1 cup Bisquick baking mix
2 cups cream sauce (recipe below)

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Mix cream sauce, vegetables and ham until blended.

Place in a 9 inch pie plate or casserole dish.

Mix the milk, egg and baking mix and pour over ham mixture. Bake for about 30 minutes or until top is browned.

Here is the recipe for basic cream sauce.

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2-3 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
salt and pepper to taste
Melt butter, add flour and stir then add milk and whisk cooking until smooth.

Commission Won't Pursue Cahill Complaint

Cahill said that in addition to the appraisers contacted by the Ethics Commission, he personally engaged the services of the real estate company of Meredith & Grew of Boston.

Cahill said their opinion also was that Highpoint development "would have no impact on the financial interests of members of Cahill's family."

Cahill's sister-in-law and her husband owned a home that abutted the rear property on Churchill Road and his mother and father a home on Packards Lane which is a dead-end street that runs into the property.

"This is a clear vindication," Cahill told The Sun Tuesday. "I did not do anything that could affect my family's financial interests. I was not fined. The allegations from the beginning were baseless and were alleged to intimidate me and keep me from voting on this project."

Cahill said he is now free to participate in any discussion or vote on Highpoint in the future.

On Monday, Cahill made a formal written disclosure to City Clerk Joseph Shea pursuant to the State Conflict of Interest law which will be maintained as a public record.

"While it is certainly a matter of public record that members of my family own property which abuts or neighbors the proposed Highpoint development, I have never before made such a formal written disclosure on this matter.

"I have been informed by the State Ethics Commission that I must do so before participating in the Highpoint related matters.

"Without this filing, disclosing that my parents and in-laws live in the area most directly affected by the Highpoint development, a reasonable person might otherwise conclude that my action will be based on my family's private interest as neighbors to the project and not on its merits.

"Regardless of such perceptions, my participation in the past has always been on the merits as will my future actions on the project."

A criminal conflict of interest complaint was brought by the South Shore Buildings Council last year in Quincy District Court.

The Plymouth District Attorney's office was asked to investigate the complaint as a neutral outsider.

While the investigation was proceeding, Asst. Dist. Atty. Patrick Bomberg told Judge Mark Coven his office would not continue the investigation "in the interests of justice."

Quincy Community Action 35th Anniversary Celebration, Food Center Fundraiser May 4

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will celebrate its 35th anniversary Thursday, May 4 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

The celebration is also a fundraiser for the agency's Emergency Food Center. The food center provides fresh and nutritious food to nearly 2,000 unduplicated individuals annually and relies on private donations for operation.

"We are always amazed and grateful for the generous support we receive for the food center from residents and businesses in Quincy," said QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo. "Without the help of the community, we could not deliver this service to those in need."

The 35th anniversary festivities will include the election of officers to QCAP's Board of Directors and the induction of new Board members. The scheduled keynote speaker is Jim St. George, executive director of the Tax Equity Alliance of Massachusetts (TEAM) and the TEAM Education fund. These organizations are the leading research and advocacy groups in the state promoting tax fairness and adequate funding for important public services.

QCAP will also recognize several community members for 'Extra Mile' Community Awards for their ongoing support and service to the agency's clients and programs.

"This year our Board of Directors wanted to express their appreciation of some of the many people in the community who help us help others. It really is an example of how the community comes together to help improve someone's situation. We are so pleased to honor these individuals," Strollo said.

Award recipients include:

William Babbitt, vice president and loan officer at South Shore Savings Bank for his work with QCAP's Housing Program; Jim Balnis of Wanna Bagel and Jay Davis of Graeber and Davis for their fundraising efforts on behalf of the Emergency Food Center; Dave Clark, Ethel Frank and Don Pace of Heritage Church in Braintree for their support of QCAP's Head Start children and families; and Nick and Felix Tenaglia of City Fuel Corporation for their dedication to QCAP's Fuel Assistance Program and clients.

In addition, two QCAP employees, Carole McDonough, Head Start bus driver and Patricia O'Reilly, personnel coordinator, will each be recognized for their impressive 20 years of service at QCAP.

QCAP, a non-profit, multi-service agency, has been working with residents of Quincy since its inception in 1965 to relieve the causes and consequences of poverty, and provide families and individuals with opportunities for self-sufficiency.

Today, the organization serves more than 12,500 families and individuals in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton and Hull and other South Shore communities through such programs as Head Start, Fuel Assistance, Energy Conservation, Affordable Housing, Housing Counseling, Homelessness Prevention, Community Care for Kids, Community Partnerships for Children, Adult Basic Education, the Emergency Food Center and Quincy Family Network.

For more information about QCAP's 35th anniversary celebration and Emergency Food Center fundraiser, or to make a donation, contact Tracy Donahue at (617) 479-8181 ext. 108.

Unlimited Mailing For Councillors Are Over

By CRAIG SALTERS

The days of unlimited mailing for city councillors are over.

A compromise plan creating individual accounts for councillors was adopted by a 6-3 vote at last week's council meeting, putting an apparent end to a squabble which put many councillors at odds with one another and pitted claims of fiscal accountability against the need to keep constituents informed.

Voting in favor of the resolve were Councillors Timothy Cahill, Michael D'Amico, Stephen Durkin, Gregory Hanley, and Patrick McDermott.

Voting against the measure were Council President Paul Harold and Councillors Frank McCauley and Joseph Newton.

The plan calls for each of the six ward councillors to receive $7,000 in public funds each fiscal year to use exclusively for postage, with the three councillors-at-large, who require less mailing, receiving $1,500 each, also exclusively for postage.

The one exception to these numbers is McDermott, who, upset at dollar amounts he called "laughable," imposed a $5,000 limit upon himself.

A councillor can obtain additional funds with a majority vote of the council and the resolve does not preclude a councillor from using other sources of funds, such as mitigation, to cover mailing costs.

Like most compromises, the plan leaves many councillors somewhat satisfied and somewhat disappointed.

"This is a reasonable compromise, and I support it," said Raymond, a strong opponent of any mailing limits for councillors who, he emphasizes, are the elected officials closest to the people.

"It doesn't go far enough" countered McCauley, who pointed out the total dollar amount -- $46,500 -- wasn't much different than council expenditures of the last three years.

A Raymond proposal that night allocated $10,000 annually for each ward councillor as well as a general fund of $5,000, numbers many councillors, most notably Councillor Timothy Cahill, said were no real limits at all.

And Raymond's proposal was itself offered as an alternative to an ordinance put forth by Council President Paul Harold, who had originally proposed that ward councillors receive $3,000 per year and councillors-at-large $1,500.

"I'd like it down more but these numbers ($7,000/$1,500) are more reasonable," Cahill said.

D'Amico, the Ward 4 councillor whose $19,030 in mailing expenses tripled that of the nearest councillor and sparked much debate, said he was comfortable with the new figures and, using cost-saving measures, would be able to communicate just as much with his constituents as in previous years.

And he once again defended his mailings. "The fact is the mail goes out because there are issues," D'Amico said.

Raymond's postage account figures were lowered to the compromise $7,000 and $1,500 by a Durkin amendment. "There should be limits, but don't tie our hands," said Durkin.

A Cahill amendment also tightened the language of the resolve so that unused account funds could not be put to any other use. "We should not be setting up a potential slush fund for councillors," Cahill said.

The new fiscal year begins July 1.

McDermott Faces Up To Raymondi On Postage Cut Challenge

During debate on controversial mailing limits at last week's City Council meeting, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi challenged Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott to, essentially, put his money where his mouth was.

And McDermott took him up on it.

The challenge took place after McDermott, upset at compromise postage limits of $7,000 for ward councillors which, he said, showed "no fiscal responsibility," proposed an amendment to put $5,000 in each ward councillor's newly-created individual accounts.

Raymondi questioned the motives of McDermott and implied McDermott was grandstanding, assured that the amendment was too conservative to ever pass.

"It's a lot like voting on your own pay raise: vote no and hope like hell it passes," Raymondi said.

Raymondi went further, adding that "if Councillor McDermott wants to instruct the city auditor to restrict his account to $5,000, so be it."

Which is exactly what McDermott did, imposing a

PATRICK McDERMOTT

$5,000 mailing restriction on himself even though his amendment failed and he eventually voted for the larger numbers.

"It's laughable what we did tonight if we keep it at $7,000," McDermott said. "I will take the $5,000 and I urge my fellow councillors to join me. Let's prove we can make the cuts, let's go back to the Knights of Columbus, back to the Elks (if we want to communicate with constituents)."

He also added that the massive mailings of recent years had shown a lack of prioritization on the part of the council, de-valuing once important letters from elected officials to the status of "junk mail."

McDermott's $5,000 amendment failed 5-4 with Councillors Frank McCauley, Joseph Newton, and Council President Paul Harold voting along with McDermott.

The final resolution, which passed by a vote of 6-3, allocates $7,000 annually for ward councillors and $1,500 for councillors at large, to be used exclusively for postage.

Previously, councillors enjoyed unlimited mailing privileges.

Spring HOME IMPROVEMENT

How To Make Invisible Wallpaper Repairs

Adhesive, Techniques Make It Easy

Think of your wallcoverings as an investment. You put lots of time into coordinating colors and picking out designs that area just right for your home.

And you worked hard on their installation, making sure they seams lined up and the patterns matched. You thought the job was perfect, until you spotted that bubble near the light switch, that seam lifting above the counter, that small, but significant gouge in the front hallway.

Don't worry. Wallpaper repairs are a snap if you just use the right tools and techniques.

Many home-improvement books can show you how to make simple repairs, but the real secret is in the adhesive you use. Ordinary wallpaper paste is not the answer —it doesn't have the proper "grab" to hold stiff, balky paper. Spot-repair glues are often too sticky and don't allow you time to adjust a new piece to match the wall pattern. The best solution for repairs to all types of wallcoverings, including paper and fabric, are the new acrylic-based adhesives.

Unlike sticky, smelly, difficult-to-clean glues, acrylic adhesives are completely user-friendly. They are odorless, clean up with water, and offer excellent adhesion.

A good example is new Wallpaper Seam Repair, part of the House & Home Restore line of products from Red Devil, Inc. This premium acrylic adhesive repairs torn or peeling wallpaper instantly. It even prevents peeling and seam-lifting in high-humidity areas like kitchens and baths.

Despite its tenacity, Wallpaper Seam Repair cleans up quickly from hands, tools and sponges, using ordinary soap and water. It also comes in a convenient EZ Squeeze Tube with its own built-in dispenser—as you use up the adhesive, a handy knob lets you roll up the empty part of the tube while you squeeze out every drop.

Here are some tips on making "invisible" repairs to common wallpaper defects:

• Bubbles and blisters. Use a razor knife to slit the bubble along a pattern line (this will hide your cut.) Inject a small amount of adhesive and work it all the way under the bubble with your finger. Press the wallpaper down and clean up any excess with a damp sponge.

ACRYLIC ADHESIVE formulated especially for wallpaper repairs allows enough curing time to line up patterns, then holds securely.

• Holes. First remove any damaged paper, scrape away dried adhesive, and use a patching material such as Red Devil's Patch-A-Wall to fill small drywall depressions or loose plaster. Cut a patch of matching wallpaper and tape it over the entire area so that the patterns line up. With a razor knife, cut through both the patch and the wallpaper below it, then remove the patch and peel away the wallpaper within your cut line. When repair is fully dry, use Wallpaper Seam Repair to re-glue your matching patch in place.

• Loose seams. Use a spatula to lift the seam enough to work-in the new adhesive. Follow the steps above to rebond and clean up the paper surface. If the paper has curled, prop a smooth, non-stick weight against the wall until the adhesive dries.

For more information on how to repair damaged wallpaper or buy repair products, contact Red Devil at 1800-4-A-DEVIL.

Board Cancels Cadigan License, Transfers Second To Flynn

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday canceled the common victualer-all alcoholic license held by Kevin Cadigan, former owner of Kevin's at the Heritage, a restaurant on 1495 Hancock St., for failure to conduct business at a licensed premise.

Cadigan closed the restaurant at January of this year.

The board then voted to transfer an all alcoholic license held by Comeau's Sandwich Shop, 54 Winter St. to Daniel J. Flynn, III, who plans to operate The Heritage until such time as a new tenant is found. The board also issued a cabaret license to Flynn.

Flynn owns the building that houses the restaurant.

Chairman Joseph Shea said that Comeau's Sandwich Shop being near the shipyard, and in existence since the 1970's has been less active because the nature of the street is changing, and the inactivity at the shipyard.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi said he supported the transfer.

Shea said that Cadigan who operated the restaurant for more than three years, "ran an excellent business" and that "we were all sorry to see him go." He added that Cadigan has been trying to re-locate either in the city or elsewhere, but had not done so as yet.

Shea said he didn't want to call the board's decision a "negative cancellation" and said he is still in communication with Cadigan in the event he finds a place to relocate in the near future.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, license board member did not vote on the motion because he is related to the Comeau family, owners of the sandwich shop.

Shea asked that Flynn report back to the board the first week in September if a tenant has not been found.

Quincy College Building Bridges With Visiting Irish Faculty

Quincy College students come from the South Shore and South America -- representing over 60 countries.

These shared experiences and global connections benefit all of us and help us to integrate the world into our curriculum.

Quincy College was happy to welcome two faculty members from the North East Institute of Further & Higher Education who recently visited the Quincy College campus from Northern Ireland. The North East Institute is an Associate College of the University of Ulster, which provides a range of courses leading to a University of Ulster award. NEI has three campuses at Antrim, Ballymena, and Magherafelt. The three campuses are within traveling distance to Belfast the Glens of Antrim, and the Causeway coastline.

Gerry Devlin, Quality Assurance Coordinator, and his colleague Mark Little, Head of Art and Design, came to Quincy College to discuss the success of its Continuous Quality Improvement (CQI) process and view installed distance learning facilities and computer labs in Quincy and Plymouth.

Other institutions on their tour included the Pratt Institute in New York and the Falmouth Institute in Falmouth, MA -- both leaders and innovators of the CQI process. They presented a short lecture on their college and its context within Northern Ireland in the Sullivan Labor Management Center.

Highlights from the presentation included a review of awards recently bestowed on their institution due to program development and institution-wide entrepreneurship fostered by CQI, and community development initiatives fostered by the school to increase diversity, awareness, and local participation with each campus' local community.

Sean Barry, Quincy College's Interim President, called for further developing this relationship with the new technology and other innovations in learning, like the Internet. Plans are set to continue building educational programs that connect local students to others around the world as well as in their native homelands. In addition, many local businesses have expressed interest in this developing relationship, further strengthening ties with many on the South Shore.

BACKFIRE

The loud sound of a backfire coming from a car is an uncontrolled explosion of partially burned fuel, which is usually the result of a combustion flame escaping past an intake or exhaust valve. If a burned valve is thought to be the culprit, the technician can perform a dynamic cylinder compression test and a power balance test using an engine analyzer to verify the problem. If the valve is suspected, the performance of a dry compression test and a wet compression test of the cylinder will confirm the suspicion. A compression test determines how much pressure is developed in a cylinder during engine cranking, which serves to indicate leakage due to burned valves or worn rings.

Newton Resolve Addresses Oversized Vehicle Parking

Ward 6 Councilor Joseph Newton wants a task force to study city laws concerning oversized vehicles parked on residential streets.

Newton sponsored a resolve at last week's council meeting calling for a task force to consider amending ordinances dealing with "certain vehicles above the size of a pick-up truck being parked on a residential street in a fashion that prohibits the normal flow of traffic or disturbs the quality of life in the neighborhood."

The item was referred to both the mayor's office and the Ordinance Committee of the City Council.

The proposed task force would be composed of a member of the City Council, the city solicitor, the police chief, the building inspector, and a member of the mayor's staff.

The committee would report to the City Council by June 15.

"We're not talking big pick-ups or SUV's," Newton explained. "This is meant to address vehicles the size of winnebagoes or trailer trucks.

"The idea is to put some teeth in the ordinance so that the police won't have to deal with any gray areas."

Eligible Gold Star Annuity Recipients Sought

The Quincy Veterans' Services Department is attempting to contact eligible "Gold Star" recipients to inform them of a $1,500 yearly annuity being offered by the state.

Quincy Veterans Services Director Henry Bradley explained:

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts through the Department of Veterans Services announces an annuity for the non-remarried spouses --Gold Star Wives/Husbands-- of veterans whose death occurred as a result of injury sustained or disease contracted during active service in time of war, insurrection or combat.

"Other annuity programs available are the Gold Star

Parents Annuity and the 100 percent Service Connected Disabled Veterans Annuity in the amount of $1,500 annually and payable in to equal payments of $750 on Feb. 1 and Aug. 1 of each year. Such payments are due and payable from the date of application only."

Bradley asked that anyone who feels eligible for any of the programs to contact the Quincy Veterans Services Department at 24 High School Ave., or by calling 617-376-1192 for more information and an application.

OLD FASHIONED CARNIVAL FUN FOR EVERYONE!

Consultant Tells Councillors

Quincy Could Be A Tourists 'Must-See'

Quincy has long had the potential — and now the opportunity — to be one of the top "must-see" tourist destinations in New England.

The opportunity to make it a reality says consultant Dan Yaeger is seeing that the right share from the revenue of the city's proposed hotel/motel occupancy tax goes to tourism promotion.

Yaeger was to meet informally with the City Council Tuesday night as The Sun was going to press to support Quincy business leaders in their quest for a 30 percent cut of the tax revenue for tourism.

Seventy percent would go to open space acquisition and preservation, parks and recreation.

The council is scheduled to discuss and vote on the tax allocation at its next regular meeting May 1. Council proposed splits include 85/15 and 90/10.

In 1996, Yaeger's tourism consulting firm prepared a "Quincy Tourism Strategic Plan" which noted:

"Quincy attracted less than 50,000 visitors annually.

"With adequate promotion, Quincy could expect some 260,000 annual visitors who (would) spend $19.5 million directly in the city and generate $33.9 million in local economic impact."

In an April 14 letter and an informational packet sent to City Council Ordinance Committee Chairman Greg Hanley as a preview to his presentation Tuesday night, Yaeger said:

"After the 460-room Marriott hotel at Crown Colony is completed and the full four percent local option room tax is phased in, it is estimated that Quincy will receive $1.1 million in room tax revenues.

"It makes good economic sense to reinvest a portion of those revenues, collected from non-resident hotel guests, towards tourism programs that will increase the tax benefit to Quincy and its residents in the future.

"Tourism marketing is one of the smartest public investments. For every dollar of public funding invested in tourism promotion programs, an average is generated in tax revenues, according to industry sources.

"That means the request for 30 percent of the city's tax revenues (an estimated $330,000 after the full four percent is phased in) would generate $2.6 million in incremental new tax revenues to the city annually."

Yaeger told Hanley that his firm's tourism plan for Quincy in 1996 inspired the creation of the Quincy Tourism & Visitors Bureau which, he said, launched the city's first coordinated tourism campaign.

"Unfortunately, the WTVB ran out of funding after a year and ceased operations. This (the new) proposal will revitalize Quincy's promotion efforts through a new, independent tourism bureau and bring the city its rightful share of the tourism market."

Quincy today does have a Special Events and Tourism Office headed by Rhonda Merrill.

Councillor Dan Raymond proposed the hotel/motel occupancy tax is now calling for a 90/10 percent split.

The 90 percent would go to open space acquisition and historical and seashore preservation and 10 percent to tourism.

But business leaders such as Joseph Mannarino of Quincy 2000, Edward Keohane of the Quincy Partnership, Anthony Agnitti of the Quincy Business Council and Robert Galligan of the Best Western Adams Inn, representing Quincy hotels, say a 30 percent share of the revenue is needed to get a meaningful tourism promotion program off the ground and running and keeping ticking.

Yaeger says that according to the Massachusetts Office of Travel & Tourism, the Greater Boston area attracts 12.2 million visitors annually. They stay in the area an average 2.6 nights and spend an average $371 per person while here.

"And," he says, "41 percent of them come to the area to visit historical attractions. An aggressive tourism marketing effort will tap the market for Quincy."

Yaeger also notes: "Blessed with a wealth of historic sites, a seashore and proximity to a major city, the city of Quincy has the potential to be one of the most significant visitor destinations in Massachusetts and New England.

"Unfortunately, Quincy has never been able to capture its rightful share of the lucrative visitor market place.

"Through the years, lack of organization and lack of funds have made Quincy's tourism promotion efforts sporadic and ineffective.

Now, however, leaders in the city of Quincy have the opportunity to provide both the funding and organizational structure to make Quincy a "must-see" destination for Massachusetts visitors.

Yaeger adds: "Quincy's infrastructure gives it high potential as a tourism destination. The city has the earliest surviving presidential birth sites in the U.S., numerous historic houses and sites prominent in U.S. history and a prestigious National Park Service Historic Site designation. Quincy is located on the seashore just nine miles from Boston and its 12 million annual visitors."

Hanley Proposes 80/20% Split On Hotel/Motel Tax Revenue

Yaeger also earlier sent a letter and informational packet to Hanley as chairman of the Ordinance Committee outlining his support of the business leaders 30 percent request and his proposed independent tourism bureau.

Council proposed splits include 90/10 and 85/15.

The council is scheduled to discuss and vote on the tax allocation at its next regular meeting May 1.

"Based upon information provided by the business community and testimony from public hearings, I am in favor of a compromise distribution of the proposed hotel/motel tax of 80 percent open space initiatives and 20 percent tourism," Hanley said Tuesday.

"The business community has made a very compelling argument for their share of the tax revenue. Mr. Yaeger's proposed budget of $330,000 to fund an independent Tourism Bureau is realistic. However, I do not feel that we need to create an independent organization in order to promote our city."

Hanley noted that the Yaeger Report outlined an annualized Quincy tourism budget of $330,000, which included $100,000 for staffing, $55,000 for overhead and $170,000 for marketing.

"We already have the resource necessary to promote tourism within our city by providing our Events Coordinator Rhonda Merrill with a Tourism Administrative Assistant," Hanley said.

"This would eliminate the overhead of taxes, rent and professional services which already exist in Merrill's budget. All that would remain is the true cost of marketing at $170,000. A revised total of $205,000 would represent 20 percent of the proposed revenue."

Hanley said that when Council President Paul Har- old proposed the creation of an independent development corporation for the shipyard, the business community lobbied to utilize Quincy 2000, an already existing agency as the economic development organization, defeating Harold's plan.

"The same holds true in this case," Hanley said. "Why create an independent body with liabilities and overhead when there is a department already in place?"

"The debate that remains will be taken up on May 1 in the Ordinance Committee and the argument will be how much distribution of revenue and who will manage it."

City Yard Care Conference Saturday

Mayor James Sheets and the Park Department will host the third annual Yard Care Conference Saturday at 9 a.m. at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex.

The complex is located at One Merrymount Parkway, next to Adams Field and the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater. The event is free to the public.

This year's conference will feature guest speakers on a variety of topics that directly relate to the improvement of yard or garden. Topics such as lawn care and pest management, gardening and flowers, tree-care, composting, and others will be addressed. A question and answer session will follow in order to allow attendees to find answers to the specific problems they might have in their lawn or garden.

Featured speakers will include: Bob Almquist, Almquist Flowerland in Quincy, Dave Gasper, Prescription Turf Services; and Daniel Provost, Licensed Arborist and Landscaper, Representatives from Quincy's Park Department and Department of Public Works will also be on-hand to give demonstrations or answer questions.

There will be a number of prizes given away to attendees; Flowers, shrubs, compost bins, and other yard/garden materials will be given away.

"Mayor Sheets' Cleaner, Greener Quincy program extends beyond our parks, playgrounds, beaches, and public properties, we hope that private property owners can maintain their yards and gardens in the spirit of a cleaner and greener Quincy. Our hope is that this Yard Care Conference empowers residents with the knowledge and confidence to tackle the issues that stand between them and a beautiful yard," said Thomas Koch, Executive Director of the park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments.

For more information on the Yard Care Conference, call the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1254.

comparisons from last year. They are:

In 1999, results showed a high count of 88,000 and in the year, 2000, a count of 2,900. The low count in 1999 was 100 and in 2000, it was 60. The mean count in 1999 was 9,559, and in 2000, it was 732. The percent below 1,000 in 1999 was 50; in 2000 it was 72.7. The percent below 2,000 in 1999 was 50; in 2000 it was 90.9.

"Hopefully, these findings will continue throughout the summer and result in fewer beach closings," Sheets said. He indicated that the city has invested almost $8 million in infrastructure work and is attempting to end storm drain pollution of Wollaston Beach.

However, Sheets cautioned that much of the work remains to be done and that the city would continue its efforts until the beaches are open all summer long.

He said that the city has no greater resource than its seashore.

Seaside Gardeners To Host 'Causeway Day' Celebration

The Seaside Gardeners will host the first "Causeway Day" celebration Saturday, May 6 at 8:30 a.m. at Beechwood Community Life Center, East Squantum St.

The event will kick off this season's Causeway maintenance program. Volunteers are needed to help paint, clean and weed and to "adopt" a flower bed.

The Seaside Gardeners are also researching grants and potential funding sources in hopes of establishing a trust fund that will be used for perpetual maintenance of the area. The group is also looking for experienced researchers to help with this effort.

Rain date is May 13. For more information, call 617-328-6818.

Have Home Built Here

Patriots' Spires, Wife New Quincy Residents

New England Patriot Greg Spires and wife Dara have built a house in West Quincy and are just settling in to their new neighborhood.

"There are good schools and teachers here," said Dara Spires of the couple's decision to build in the city.

Spires, a teacher herself in Boston, added, "It's a nice, safe neighborhood, a good place to be."

The couple's new home was recently built by Galvin Construction and sale of the house was brokered by Flavin & Flavin Realty.

"Flavin and Flavin were wonderful to work with," Spires said. She also said that Galvin Construction dispelled the horror stories of building one's own home. "People said we were crazy to do this (build), but it was painless, just lovely," she said.

The Spires, unfortunately, also got to see just how good the city's police force was when their much loved Akita dog was hit by a car and went missing. "The Quincy Police were absolutely phenomenal," Spires said. "They were out all night, searching."

The dog, Spires said, was found and is doing fine. Spires said she has already sent a letter of thanks to QPD Police Chief Thomas Frane.

Even in April, husband Greg Spires, a defensive lineman and former stand-out from Florida State University, has little time to unpack.

He is currently working out and preparing for his third season with the Patriots, a season which, no doubt, West Quincy residents will follow a bit more closely, rooting for their new neighbor.

"We have some good friends here," said Dara. "It's really a beautiful city."

Hearing loss afflicts approximately 28 million people in the United States. Approximately 10 million of these impairments are diagnosed as NIHL (Noise Induced Hearing Loss).

Noise-induced hearing loss is 100 percent preventable but, once acquired, hearing loss is permanent and irreversible. Noise-induced hearing loss is one of the most common occupational diseases and the second most self-reported occupational illness or injury.

May is Better Hearing and Speech Month, and the clinicians of the Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital Network encourage you to take stock of your own hearing and seek help if you have a problem. You have a hearing loss if

- frequently ask people to repeat themselves
- often turn your ear toward a sound to hear it better

- understand people better when you wear your glasses or look directly at their faces

- lose your place in group conversations

- keep the volume on your radio or TV at a level that others say is too loud

- have pain or ringing in your ears

More than 30 million Americans are exposed on a regular basis to hazardous noise levels that could result in hearing loss. In the workplace, reducing noise at its sources is the best possible prevention. The following are just some ways of controlling noise on the job:

- Insulation — Noise-absorbing material, such as polyurethane foam or glass fiber, can be installed on ceilings and walls to reduce noise in a room, used to line the inside of an enclosure, or mounted under the hood of a vehicle to limit the engine noise.

- Quieter Equipment — Equipment should include the quietest components possible. Old equipment tends to be noisier than newer. Employers should consider noise specifications when purchasing new equipment.

- Maintenance — Machines and equipment should be in good repair. Loose, rattling parts, steam and air leaks, and worn bearing and gears all generate unnecessary noise.

- Barriers — While enclosure provides more effective sound proofing, barriers fixed to machinery or placed between worker and the equipment can also help reduce noise.

- Vibration Insulation — Vibrating parts create a lot of excess noise. Placing a compressed, springy material between the vibrating parts of the machine can reduce this noise.

- Mufflers — Mufflers can be installed to limit noise from a motor, air intake, or exhaust.

- Personal Protective Equipment — Earplugs or muffs should be used only as a last resort when better methods do not work to reduce noise or while they are being implemented. Protective equipment is only a temporary solution.

- Rotation of Workers — The amount of time workers are exposed to high noise levels can be reduced by rotating workers through noisy jobs for short periods of time. Like protective gear, worker rotation should never be used as a substitute for real noise control.

These programs should include noise assessments, engineering controls, audiometric monitoring of workers' hearing, worker education, recordkeeping, and program evaluation.

18th Annual Quincy Senior Olympics May 8-13

Registration is underway throughout Quincy and the South Shore for the 18th annual Quincy Senior Olympics, sponsored by Beechwood on the Bay and the City of Quincy.

The Annual Games, designed for adults aged 55 and over, begin Monday, May 8 and continue through Saturday, May 13.

Primary sponsors are Quincy Medical Center and Boston Medical Center. Support sponsors this year are Quincy Rotary, Riverbay Club and Marina Place. Other friends and supporters contributing to the increasingly popular Senior Week are Fallon Ambulance, Olindy's Lanes, Torre Dei Passeri Club and Presidents Golf Course.

Two hundred and fifty seniors are expected to register this year, according to Kathleen Prince, director of Elder Services at Beechwood on the Bay and coordinator of the Senior Olympics Planning Committee.

"We encourage all mature adults (55+) to participate. The Olympics attracts seniors who compete leisurely and who are life-long athletes.

"Activities and events are planned for all interests. Two Spring "warm-ups" (trainings) have been well attended," she said.

The Senior Games will start Monday, May 8 with a Torch Lighting ceremony with Mayor James Sheets and elected officials and culminates with an Awards Ceremony May 13.

The week-long event offers:

Golf, bowling, darts, bocce, billiards, one-mile walk, three-mile walk, one-mile run, half-mile walk, swimming (sprint, freestyle, breast stroke, 100- and 50-yard swims, butterfly), softball game, celebrity volleyball, rotation events (horse-shoe pitch, basketball throw), track and field events (softball throw, javelin throw, running and standing long jump, shot-put).

All interested seniors are invited to join.

The Olympics Planning Committee, chaired by Prince, includes Barry Welch, director of Quincy Recreation; John Keenan, Office of the Mayor; Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay; Tom Clasby, director of Quincy Council on Aging; and Brian Buckley, athletic director of North Quincy High School.

For more information or to register, call or stop by Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St., (617) 471-5712.

Nonagenarians Gearing Up For Senior Games

George Conway, 97, and Ralph Verrachi, 94, both of Quincy, will compete in the 18th annual Senior Olympics held May 8 through 13.

"George Conway and Ralph Verrachi personify the spirit and enthusiasm of Senior Olympians and elders in our community who are interested in learning, in meeting others, and in trying something new," said Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay.

"In early and middle years of adulthood, school, work and family, and care giving becomes one's full-time responsibility," she added. "In later years, there are so many new opportunities, so many choices, so many ways to enjoy our elderhood."

Conway decided 17 years ago at age 80 to get into shape. He began a walking regime at Beechwood on the Bay, which is sponsoring the Olympics, and later started strength training at the YMCA.

Today, Conway is a local and state Olympic champion and this year he'll be participating in the one-mile walk and bowling events.

Verrachi, an active participant and volunteer at Beechwood, will be taking part in his first Senior Olympics. He'll be playing billiards, darts, bowling, bocce and basketball.

Rookies Gaining Valuable Experience For Presidents

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School baseball team seems to be getting younger as the season grows old.

Last week, Quincy could have passed for a junior varsity team — or even a freshman team — in the Brian F. O'Donnell Memorial Tournament at Hull.

Two freshmen started and two more pinched hit as the Presidents (0-6, 0-3) fell to Hull, 9-1, in last Thursday's consolation game, finishing last in the four-team tournament. Hingham topped Scituate, 5-4, to capture the championship later in the afternoon.

Quincy took on Falmouth yesterday (Wednesday) at Adams Field.

The four rookies received some tourney time as four starters were sitting out the third game of a four-game suspension for violating team rules.

After an impressive showing on the hill in the opening round, freshman Rob Muollo got the nod in left field and was joined by fellow classmate Anthony Boyle in right. Mark Dondero and Shaun Gibbons entered the game in the seventh inning as pinch hitters.

"We just don't have enough experience at the varsity level," said coach Michael Draiccho.

Ain't that the truth. The Presidents faced two premier pitchers in the tournament and came up with a two-game total of one run on four hits while fanning 24 times. The freshmen went a combined 0 for 8 with five strikeouts.

"It's simple," Draiccho said. "If you're not going to hit, you're not going to win games."

In the Hull game, it was Joe Capone's turn to pad his pitching stats. The senior left-hander tossed six innings, allowing one run on three hits while punching out 12 Presidents and walking just two. He struck out the side in the fourth inning.

Quincy's Dave Centrella matched up against Capone and turned in a decent performance, although his pitching line says otherwise. The junior went 5 2/3 innings, giving up nine runs on 11 hits while striking out nine and walking five.

"I think he pitched real good," Draiccho said. "He doesn't have a lot of experience out there, but he throws hard. It won't be the last time he's out there."

The Pirates put a run on the board in the first inning when Harry Chao led with a bunt hit, stole second and moved to third on a sacrifice fly. He scored on Ken Sault's dribbler down the third base line which Dan Long threw past first baseman Brad DiMartino.

Centrella gave up a double to Nick Capone (3 for 4, 2 RBIs) and walked Jay O'Hare to load the bases, but escaped the jam by striking out Rob Scully.

After fanning the first two batters in the second, Centrella ran into some trouble as he gave up a triple, hit a batter and then a two-run single. The inning ended when center fielder Tim Pezzulo robbed Nick Capone of extra bases with a nice diving catch.

Hull took a 6-0 lead in the fourth on Sault's two-run single and Nick Capone's RBI double. Quincy made it 6-1 in the sixth with an RBI double from Pezzulo, but Hull added three more runs in the bottom half of the inning with two outs to close out the scoring.

Snug Harbor Wins Dunn Basketball Tourney

The Snug Harbor senior boys' basketball team recently captured its second straight championship in the George Dunn tournament by defeating Parker Gym, 54-45, in the final game of the three-week, single-elimination tournament conducted annually by the Quincy Recreation Department.

The final marked the end of the 25-week winter program held at neighborhood gyms throughout the city. Sean Munchbach scored 14 of his team-high 16 points in the first half to lead Snug Harbor to a 33-18 advantage at the break. But Parker's Brian Deptula netted 12 of his game-high 19 points in the second half, including three 3-pointers, to tie the game at 38-all.

Snug Harbor pulled out the victory with solid free-throw shooting down the stretch. Frankie Kelly scored 13 points, Adams Vecchione and Willie Mandrell each added 8, and Geovany Carraquillo and Malcolm Lynn each chipped in 4 in a balanced offensive attack.

For Parker Gym, Sean Cote scored 11 as he was the only player to break into double figures. Brian Breslin and Dennis Thomson each tallied 5 points while Ricky Crane and James Hocko each

A Thought For The Week

SCOTT DEWARE

Recently I came across a little book entitled, "Life's Little Instruction Book." Five hundred suggestions, observations and reminders on how to live a happy and rewarding life. I would like to share some of the words of wisdom with you. This little book is not without a bit of humor.

Compliment at least three people every day... Be the first to say, "Hello." Say "thank you" a lot... Be forgiving of yourself, and others... Look people in the eye... Treat everyone you meet the way you want to be treated. Don't waste time learning the tricks of the trade. Instead, learn the trade. Never give up on anyone. Miracles happen everyday... When playing games with children, be sure to let them win sometimes... Be tough minded, but tender hearted... Wear out, don't rust out... Measure people by the size of their hearts, not the size of their bank accounts... Keep a secret, but be careful about burdening a friend with your secret... Never tell anyone they look tired or that they look like they feel bad... Resist giving advice to anyone concerning matrimony, finances or their hair style... Remember that overnight success usually takes about fifteen years... Try to always have a friend who owns a truck... Don't be afraid to say, "I made a mistake." Never rain on someone else's parade... Wise words from a tiny book...

Ira Tattelbaum Opens Consulting Practice Here For Family, Closely Held Business

Ira Tattelbaum announces the opening of his Quincy-based consulting practice aimed at assisting family and closely held businesses.

His practice deals with business analysis, strategic planning, succession, and management and financial issues.

Tattelbaum has more than 20 years experience of entrepreneurial, business development, and consulting experience. A product of a family business he opened his first venture as a men's wear retailer in 1975. He went on to found businesses in China and Russia and spent 15 years as a member of a $100 million public company.

At the forefront of trends in each of his endeavors, Tattelbaum pioneered discounting of fair traded national brand men's wear products in the United States and was among the first Americans to import consumer goods from China and export product to the former Soviet Union. In pursuit of these ventures, he traveled throughout the U.S., Europe and Asia where he maintains numerous business relationships built during his career.

As an outsider of the family's publicly traded company, Tattelbaum was an integral part of a team that oversaw the company's transition from family to professional management. He has also served on the board of a toy manufacturer and has consulted start-up companies in various fields.

In 1991, Tattelbaum was cited in articles in the Wall Street Journal, The Boston Globe and the Boston Herald for pioneering work done by an American company in the former Soviet Union. He formed the first 100 percent foreign-owned company in the former Soviet Union and his company was one of only eight chosen to distribute product there for a Fortune 100 American company. Four years later, he sold his equity in the company to fellow stockholders.

Tattelbaum served for two years as vice president of the U.S.-Russia Chamber of Commerce in Boston and for four years as treasurer and vice president of the Citywide Parents Council in Quincy, where he lives with his wife and children.

Hancock Park Food Drive Benefits Coalition

Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, 164 Parkway, Quincy, recently held a food drive to increase community awareness of nutrition and hunger issues.

Staff at Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Quincy, as well as staff and residents at the Allerton House at Hancock Park assisted living residences, collected more than 20 cases of food which were recently donated to the Interfaith Coalition for the Homeless, which serves four homeless shelters in the South Shore area.

Arrangements were also made through West Lynn Creamery to donate 100 half-gallons of milk for distribution to families participating in the Emergency Food Center through Quincy Community Action Program. Additional donations solicited from Welch Healthcare food suppliers, including US Foodservice and Ciarelli's Foods, were delivered to Wellspring Food Pantry in Hull.

"Food banks are an invaluable source of basic food items for children, low income families, the elderly population and anyone else that may have a need," said Ann Marie Downey, a registered dietitian with Health Healthcare and Retirement Group. Hancock Park is part of the Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group.

Council Votes City Wide Condo Trash Pick-Up

By CRAIG SALTERS

A successful pilot program has paved the way for weekly trash pick-up for the city's condominium units.

Listening to condo owner's overwhelming satisfaction with the program, as well as arguments of increased recycling and fairness, the City Council voted 7-2 at its meeting last week to expand the pilot program to the remaining condominium associations of eight units or more.

"Condominium owners are no different than any other homeowner in the city of Quincy and it's discrimination to treat them any differently," Councillor Daniel Raymondi said to fellow council members and the more than 100 condo owners who attended the meeting.

Raymondi, who spearheaded trash pick-up and recycling services for condos, was met with enthusiastic approval from the audience.

Currently, the $58,000 pilot program provides weekly service to 941 condo units; the new resolve, sent to both the mayor and Finance Committee of the council, calls for a $250,000 appropriation in Fiscal Year 2001 to provide weekly service for roughly 3,003 units.

DPW Program Manager Thomas Fabrizio updated the council on the success of the pilot program, which began in October of 1999, saying minor difficulties had been worked out and that his office had received no complaints. Although some condominium associations were still under contract to various service providers, and some larger associations would still require additional pick-ups at their own expense, Fabrizio said there were no logistical problems to providing weekly trash pick-up.

"There's no problem with the department coordinating this service whatever," Fabrizio said.

Rosemary Nolan, DPW program manager and head of the city's recycling efforts, stated the increased recycling resulting from the program would help the city reach target numbers for the Department of Environmental Protection's Municipal Recycling Incentive Program.

The DEP program, which sets increasingly higher recycling goals, pays the city $8 for every ton of recycled material.

DPW Commissioner David Colton also spoke in favor of the proposal. Recalling the days when curbside recycling was thought an almost impossible task, Colton said trash pick-up for the city's condos was just another example of the evolving nature of DPW services.

For the most part, condo owners themselves emphasized two issues: a reduction in condo costs and services for city tax dollars.

"It's a question of fairness," said Neil Murphy of Captain's Cove Condominiums, which was not involved in the pilot program. Murphy said that, even though his association required three pick-ups per week, one weekly pick-up by the city would produce significant savings to residents and greatly reduce the risk of overflowing containers.

Jay Flynn, chairman of the 134 units at 77 Adams Place, said the pilot program cut trash costs by one-third, from $12,000 per year to roughly $8,000, a savings which was being passed on to owners in reduced condo fees.

"We urge you not only to continue but to expand this program," Flynn said.

William Lee of the Village at Crown Colony said that, thanks to the association's powerful trash compactor, only monthly pick-ups would be needed. Therefore, Lee said, the association's $12,000 to $14,000 annual pick-up costs would be reduced to zero.

Having argued for condo trash pick-up on grounds of both fairness and economics, Raymondi, who is also a lawyer, appeared to play the trump card when he cited court cases which ruled failure to treat condominium owners in the same way as other community residents created "an unfair distinction" and did not provide "equal protection under the law" as guaranteed by the United States Constitution.

"We need to avoid costly lawsuits the city cannot win," Raymondi said.

Councillors Timothy Cahill and Frank McCauley, who both voted against the resolution, were two clear voices of opposition in the otherwise chorus of approval.

"We're going down a road we're not going to be able to afford," Cahill warned.

Cahill, who was booed by many in the audience, said the decision would "open the floodgates" for service demands by renters and even the condo owners themselves. "Believe me, you'll be back to ask us to plow your streets," Cahill said. "We'll be forced to raise everyone's taxes to pay for this."

Cahill also said he would not break a "good faith" agreement he made with city homeowners during his 12 years on the council, referring to his promises that support of condominium developments would not result in an overburdening of city services.

McCauley said he was opposing the measure because it would increase the budget and create an unfair policy toward the city's renters, whom he said indirectly paid real estate taxes through their monthly rents.

Door Knocking Begins Looking For Other 30% City's 'Census 2000' Returns At High 70 Percent

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy's response to the April 1 mailing of forms for Census 2000 was an exceptionally high 70 per cent.

Other communities south of Boston came up with responses as low as 55 per cent, much lower than expectations.

Now, more than 100 enumerators (or census takers) have fanned out throughout Quincy, knocking on doors to count the 30 per cent who failed to return the forms.

Dr. Peter Capernaros, director of the U. S. Census Bureau Regional Office in Randolph, labelled the city's 70 per cent response to the mailing "very good."

"It was right on target," he said. "It's a 5 per cent increase over the returns of 10 years ago."

The Randolph office, which handles the South Shore, expects to have the full count wrapped up no later than early July with enumerators working daylight hours, roughly from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Each enumerator has gone through a background check by the FBI and has sworn an oath to maintain the confidentiality of the census questionnaires.

United States
Census 2000

For identification, they are wearing white badges with red and blue lettering and bearing the official seal of the U. S. Department of Commerce of which the Bureau of the Census is part.

Residents need not be concerned about the personal information sought by the enumerators since they are sworn to secrecy and such information will remain confidential for 72 years under the law.

The enumerators earn $13.50 an hour for their efforts and the census is still hiring, a comparatively difficult task in good economic times with less than 3 per cent unemployment.

"We'll never know if we have hired enough enumerators," said Capernaros. "We expect a large turnover so we're still hiring."

A special complication to counting people is the large Vietnamese and Chinese population in North Quincy, $18.3M Budget Includes Hikes For Mayor, City Council Pay Raises To Be Given 'Hard Look'

By CRAIG SALTERS

Mayor James Sheets Monday night submitted a $183,427,366 budget for Fiscal Year 2001, a 6.8 percent increase from last year's final spending of $171,681,988.

The budget includes pay jumps for the mayor and city councillors as well as department heads.

The mayor's salary would be increased from $75,000 to $95,000 and the councillors' from $12,607 to $19,500. The councillors' monthly expenses stipend would double from $200 to $400.

Finance Committee Chairman Frank McCauley, who has already scheduled budget pruning sessions beginning Monday, May 8, indicated the proposed salary hikes were the thorny issue.

"We have to take a hard look at them," he told The Sun. "Right now I'm more comfortable with the mayor's pay raise. It seems comparable to other communities."

As an example, he pointed next door to Weymouth where the mayor receives $92,000.

McCauley said he would "hold over" the proposed raises until the final budget session and review them as a group.

McCauley said he would conduct four finance meetings, all beginning at 7 p.m.,

Resolve Supports Full Benefits For Spouses Of Veterans

The City Council unanimously passed a resolve recently supporting a state bill (S1534) to extend full property tax abatement benefits to surviving spouses of deceased veterans.

The resolve, which was co-sponsored by Council President Paul Harold and Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley, would allow the surviving spouse to continue receiving the full $600 tax abatement upon the veteran's death.

Currently, a surviving spouse is entitled to only a $250 benefit.

"This is consistent with what we've done with other surviving spouse benefits," said Harold, citing the example of letting spouses retain veteran specialty license plates. "This is a priority in our community, given our large veteran population."

Harold said the resolution was a way the city could make itself heard on Beacon Hill. "It's important that the council be on record in support of this legislation," Harold said.

Council Approves 85/15 Revenue Split On Hotel Room Tax

By CRAIG SALTERS

The City Council voted unanimously Monday night to adopt a local room occupancy tax for the city's hotels and motels, with 85 percent of revenues devoted to Open Space Preservation and 15 percent devoted to the promotion of tourism.

The new tax, authored in the form of a home rule petition by Councillor Daniel Raymondi, creates the first-ever fund to purchase open space in the city as well as establishes an annual budget to promote the city's many tourist sites.

If approved by the State Legislature, a one percent room tax would go into effect July of 2001 and increase one percent annually until it reached the legal maximum of four percent in 2004. All told, the new tax could eventually generate close to $1 million in revenue.

The percentages reflect a compromise between many city councillors and the business community, which had favored a 30 percent revenue share for tourism.

"This is an opportunity to form a partnership and address two major issues from the city's last 15 years," said Councillor Patrick McDermott, whose amendment to allocate 30 percent for tourism was defeated, as were amendments to include capital outlays or affordable housing on the list of permitted revenue uses.

Raymondi, who originally proposed 100 percent of revenues be devoted to open space, thanked the business community for its input and added that the expected $150,000 tourism split in 2004 came very close to the numbers proposed by tourism expert Daniel Yeager, who addressed city councillors last week.

"Open space has never been a priority and we need to isolate a funding mechanism," Raymondi said. "Hopefully, this won't be the end all or be all for both open space or tourism."

Councillor Gregory Hanley, who had been on record as supporting a 80/20 split, changed his mind, he said, after listening to Yeager. "I now feel, through leveraged money, we can achieve the same results (at 15 percent)," Hanley said.

The key issue now is creating a tourism plan and deciding just who will be in charge of implementing that plan. Many councillors agreed that Yeager's original request for $330,000 could be shaved by giving the money to existing Quincy agencies, such as Special Events Coordinator Rhonda Merrill or the public/private partnership of Quincy 2000. McDermott, chairman of the council's Business and Economic Development Committee, passed resolves Monday night to begin that planning process.

Reaction from the business community was mixed. "I am disappointed, disillusioned, and discouraged," said Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and a strong proponent of the 70/30 split. "It is very apparent that some city councillors are so smart and confident they do not need the business community's advice or opinions. That these same councillors feel the city so financially secure and stable they do not need to look at the value of investment potential. The business community now sees more clearly where and who support business."

Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000, said he was also discouraged that city councillors did not heed Yeager's claim that every dollar invested in tourism would bring back eight to the city, but he was also happy the city finally had an annual budget for tourism. Said Mannarino:

"I'm somewhat disappointed that we couldn't get the full council to approve our (70/30) proposal, but we're hopeful that, if all the money is spent directly for tourism, it will have an impact."

Mannarino answered a question posed by Councillor Timothy Cahill at Monday's meeting by saying that federal law prohibited Quincy 2000 from using any of its CDBG development money directly for tourism. He also added that Quincy 2000 would work to "have a voice" in preparing a new tourism plan for the city.

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM DELAHUNT met with about 30 Russian politicians for an hour last Wednesday afternoon to discuss topics ranging from the history of Quincy and his district to current foreign policy issues. The members of the Duma, the lower house of the Russian parliament, are taking a two-week course in American federalism at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government. After their short stay in Quincy, they went on a tour of the State House.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving Seeking Unwanted Vehicles

Mothers Against Drunk Driving remind people with unwanted cars that they can donate the vehicles to MADD.

The program, designed to raise funds for MADD, is conducted throughout the state.

MADD will tow most any car free of charge. Cars need to be intact and the Certificate of Title must be presented at the time of pickup.

Besides helping MADD, people donating cars may also be able to claim a tax deduction if they itemize their taxes. The IRS requires the donor to determine the fair market value.

Anyone interested in donating a car may call 1-800-720-6233.

Could Joe Kennedy Have Done It?

What if it had been Joe Kennedy instead of Sotirios Emmanouil?

Would the Fore River shipyard be up and running now?

Ted Kennedy got me to wondering when he mentioned his father and the shipyard while receiving the first Eleanor Roosevelt Award at the recent Democratic State Committee dinner in Boston.

Kennedy noted that the first time the Kennedys and the Roosevelts got together was in 1917 at the Quincy shipyard.

T. KENNEDY

His father, Joseph P. Kennedy, was assistant general manager there, and Franklin Delano Roosevelt the assistant secretary of the Navy.

The shipyard had just finished work on two battleships for the Argentine Navy. FDR was there to oversee the transfer of the two ships.

J. KENNEDY

Kennedy was only 29 and a few years out of Harvard. And Bethlehem Steel had wooed him away from an already successful banking career.

Later, as president, Roosevelt would appoint him chairman of Maritime Board, first chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and then U.S. Ambassador to the Court of St. James in London.

Kennedy had his critics. But no one ever called him stupid.

He apparently liked Quincy, playing golf locally. And he used to get his hair cut by the late Paul Mayo at Angelo's old barbershop on Hancock and Temple Streets in Quincy Sq.

The shop was like a City Hall annex where most of the city's political figures got their hair cut and caught up on the latest political speculation.

When Kennedy left the shipyard to try his hand at making movies in Hollywood he took a number of shipyard associates with him.

Can't help wondering what he would have done with the yard if he was still around and had all the millions of dollars and loan guarantees Emmanouil received in his attempt to re-open the yard.

They might be building ships there today. Mayor James Sheets, Congressman William Delahunt and others still have hope the yard may be back in business.

It's sad seeing it sitting there idle especially after all the money poured into it during Emmanouil's ill-fated efforts.

The yard's future is still a big question mark. Its best chance for a future may be as a mix-use facility with some ship repair work in the mix.

But what a glorious past. The yard was founded in 1884 as the Fore River Engine Co. by Thomas Watson, the man who received that historic first phone call, "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you" from Alexander Graham Bell. Watson, who later moved to Braintree, assisted Bell in the invention of the telephone in Boston.

The world's only seven masted schooner, the Thomas W. Lawson, was built there in 1902 but foundered during a storm five years later off the Cornwall Coast for Great Britain.

Bethlehem Steel took the yard over in 1914 and went on to build some of the great fighting ships of World War II including both USS Lexingtons, both USS Quincys, and the USS Massachusetts. Employment reached 32,000.

And, later, the yard built huge luxury liners and the USS Long Beach, the first nuclear-powered surface ship.

They used to call the Quincy shipyard Uncle Sam's Navy right arm.

It had some good years under General Dynamics including the Apollo ships that helped track man to the moon.

Then, in 1986 the yard was shut down and out of business except as a site for a sludge facility and later, the home of the USS Salem as a Naval Shipbuilding Museum and tourist attraction.

Can't help wondering, though, if a go-getter like Joe Kennedy could have gotten it back into the shipbuilding business.

PAUL HAROLD isn't running for mayor, but you might say there is one in the family:

Weymouth Mayor Wymouth Mayor David Madden.

Harold's uncle, Ed Smith, is married to Madden's mother, Rose. The two wed after the deaths of their spouses.

Smith is well known in Quincy as a retired teacher and administrator with the Quincy public schools.

EVERY GOLFER'S DREAM -- a hole-in-one -- has come true for Quincy Atty. George Burke.

Burke sank his first one recently at the Squirrel Run Country Club in West Plymouth using a 7-iron on the 131 yard 16th hole.

His playing partners were retired State Police Capt. Bob Cummings and Lt. Bob Masuret and Tom Whyte.

Cummings and Masuret were assigned to Burke's office when he was Norfolk County District Attorney and they have remained close friends.

George hasn't stopped smiling since the ball dropped into the cup.

many of whom have an insufficient command of English.

"We're aware of the makeup of the population in Quincy," said Capernaros. "We tried to get enumerators who speak Chinese and Vietnamese to count people in those neighborhoods."

An accurate count of the number of folks living in Quincy in the year 2000 is particularly important since the amount of federal money the city will get depends on the census returns.

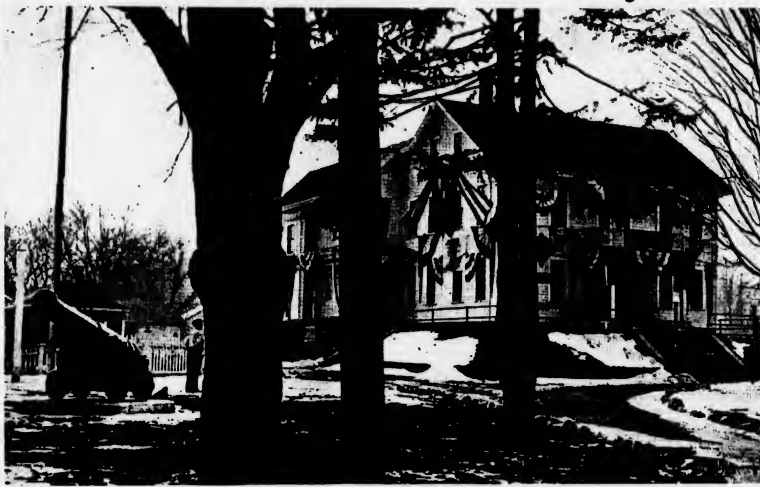

It has been calculated that for every resident the enumerators will miss Quincy will lose $1,118 a year for the next 10 years when Census 2010 comes due or $11,180 per missing person.

by 10,000 people. as estimated in 1990. the loss would add up to a total of $11,180,000 in federal funding for education, health, highways, housing and other programs.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1940 view of the old Morrisette Legion Post 294 home on the corner of Miller Street and Furnace Brook Parkway in West Quincy. This Legion post was named in honor of Cyril P., the first Quincy serviceman killed in World War I. In 1940, the Morrisette Post along with Quincy Post 95 and Wollaston Post 295 hosted the National Convention of the American Legion in Quincy. Thomas Burgin was Mayor and George H. Bonsall was president of the convention committee. The building as shown here was presumably decorated for that occasion. The Morrisette Post sold this site several years ago to a Saturn automobile dealership and is currently setting up a new home in South Quincy.

Giarratani Stands His Ground

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Whoa! Hold on to the horses. Apparently not everyone in Quincy likes the philosophical bent of my published letters. Kind of refreshing to know. If no one disagreed with my opinions, I would be concerned.

I knew when I took on the USS Salem I might stir up some negative feelings, but me thinks it might be just a tinge over-reactive to say that none of my letters over the years are of "any interest or educated value to anyone."

I stand by my remarks and had to chuckle when I was lumped with Jane Fonda. The USS Salem is not the US Flag or a litmus test for patriotism. The USS Salem is also not a tourist attraction for the City of Presidents, and a dead shipyard hardly the venue to showcase anything off.

As a Vietnam-era veteran and a public communications officer for the DAV Post 13 in Dorchester, I have a right to express my opinions even if everyone disagreed with my views.

I still believe the USS Salem would sail much better over at the old Charlestown Navy Yard next to the USS Cassin Young and Old Ironsides. The USS Constitution, after all, is the biggest tourist attraction along Boston's Freedom Trail.

To the letter writer, I apologize if I hurt your feelings or memories of the USS Salem but I really can't believe you haven't found at least one of my letters of value over the years.

Bottom line: As my Uncle Joe from Charlestown, who served in the US Navy during World War II, often said,

"Never stop saying what you believe no matter what they say about you."

I guess when it comes to my letters, some folks need to skip Page 5 when they see my name there.

I may have a long-sounding Sicilian name but when it comes to expressing an opinion or two, I am who I am, Charlestown Irish to the core. My only sin according to Henry Bosworth at The Quincy Sun is I take far too long to say it.

St. Ann's School Says 'Thank You!'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
On Saturday, April 1 the Noel Henry Irish Showband entertained a sold-out crowd at St. Ann's School in Wollaston. Joining the band, to entertain, were approximately 25 talented dancers from the Forbes School of Irish Step Dancing.

The fundraiser was a success due to the hard work of the families of St. Ann's School and generous donations from many, many businesses. The following businesses provided supplies and/or gift certificates for this second annual St. Patrick's Dance/Fundraiser:

Abbey Travel, Abigail's Crossing, Bad Abbotts, Celtics Limited Partnership, Common Market, Creative Promotions/Julie Lewis, Custom House Restaurant, Eugene Thomas Salon, Finelight Photography, Finians, Forbes School of Irish Step Dancing, Four Star Paper Products, Fowler House Café, Gerard's Restaurant, Greenhills Bakery.

Hairplace One, Irish Cottage, Irish Village, Irish Emmigrant, Lynne Gilcoyne-GNC Printers, Mason's Texaco, Michaels, Murphy's Pub, Noodle Kidoodle, Peach of Mind

Salon, Play it Again Sports, Presidential Liquors (Quincy), Ed Roche Architecture, Roche Bros. Supermarket, Sarsfields, St. Moritz Club, Star Markets, Stop & Shop Supermarkets, The Nutshell, XO Trattoria.

Many thanks to all for a huge success.

Quincy's Yesterdays Elderly Housing Announced For Quincy Point

By PAUL HAROLD

Rev. Bedros Beharian, pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church, announced plans for a $2 million elderly housing complex on the Southern Artery near South Street.

The 168 unit-building would be built and managed by Quincy Point Congregational Church Homes, Inc.

Rev. Beharian noted the need for elderly housing in the city, where 16.4 percent of the population was age 60 and over. Quincy Housing Authority Director Gerard White re-emphasized the need, stating that a total of 1,000 units were needed to meet senior housing demands.

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who was chairman of the city's Industrial Development Commission, said he would sponsor the rezoning of the area necessary for the housing plan to go forward.

5,000 VIEW LOYALTY PARADE

An estimated 5,000 people lined Hancock Street for the Loyalty Day (May 1) parade and ceremonies, sponsored by the George F. Bryan VFW Post. The event was dedicated to the late Rev. Thomas Tierney, former curate at St. John's Church and for many years the organizer of parades in the city.

Some 1,500 people marched in the parade that culminated in ceremonies and speeches in front of United First Parish Church. Among those speaking were Congressman James Burke and Arthur McLean, Americanism chairman at the Bryan Post.

STERLING SCHOOL DEDICATED

School Committeeman Charles Sweeny presided over the dedication program that included Fire Lt. Nicholas Malvesti who was a student and athlete under Sterling.

MOST COMMON SOCCER INJURIES

Soccer has increased in popularity greatly in recent years. Thousands of young and older people are participating in different programs in the South Shore. The game is being played outdoors and indoors on various playing surfaces. It is an exciting and physically demanding sport. A well-trained soccer player may be among the most fit of all athletes since the sport requires intense running, jumping, strength, fast reflexes and the ability to absorb, sometimes, significant body contact. Therefore, like any competitive sport, players are at risk of being injured.

Several studies have identified the most common sites of injuries among soccer players. These include the ankle, eyes, groin, knee and nose. The injuries vary from sprains to strains to contusions (blows resulting in bruising and pain). Interestingly the foot itself is prone to musculoskeletal injuries but, these seem to be, in general, relatively minor. In fact, most injuries appear to be relatively minor and respond well to treatment such as analgesics and physical therapy. There are other less common but important injuries such as trauma to the face, mild brain injury (concussions) and heat-related problems. The injuries do increase in prevalence in proportion to the age of the participant. It appears that the game is being analyzed closely and steps such as the required use of shin guards and other safety measures are being enforced at all age levels to prevent injuries.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 617-773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

Aldo Della Chiesa Art Exhibit Opens At Historical Society May 18

Quincy Historical Society will have a special exhibit of the paintings of Aldo Della Chiesa at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

The exhibit will open at the Historical Society's annual meeting, Thursday, May 18 at 7:30 p.m., at which his son, WGBH personality Ron Della Chiesa will speak.

The annual meeting is open to the public. The exhibit will continue on display Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. through Aug. 26.

Aldo Della Chiesa — a Quincy native who preceded his brother, long-time Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa, as a city councillor — graduated from Massachusetts College of Art, studied at the Sargent School, and for many years taught art and was department head at Braintree High School.

During these years he did many paintings, but chose not to exhibit widely. In the years since his death in 1973 his works have attracted considerable interest. In collaboration with the Della Chiesa family, the Historical Society is presenting this first-ever exhibition dedicated to his art.

Ron Della Chiesa notes: "It is fitting that the Quincy Historical Society is the setting for this exhibit — in the city my father was born in and loved. My mother, Florence, my wife, Joyce, and I take great pride in seeing my father's work displayed in this wonderful exhibition."

ALDO DELLA CHIESA as a young art student.

RON DELLA CHIESA, radio and television personality.

The exhibit is supported in part by the Massachusetts Cultural Council and the Quincy Arts Council and is presented with the cooperation of the Quincy Art Association and the City of Quincy Parks Department.

Aldo Della Chiesa had a lifelong love of art that manifested itself throughout his many careers. The son of an Italian immigrant stone carver, Della Chiesa was born in 1903 in Quincy and graduated from Massachusetts College of Art, now Massachusetts College of Art, where he studied with sculptor Cyrus Dallin and with Ernest Major, pupil of John Singer Sargent.

Della Chiesa, in a long career in art education, served as head of the art department at Braintree High School and continued his own painting, doing numerous landscapes, marine settings and other works, which he exhibited locally.

In 1936, Della Chiesa was elected city councillor from Quincy's Ward 3 and subsequently became Quincy's first elected official to join the armed services in World War II. He was succeeded as councillor by his brother Amelio, who went on to serve 12 years as mayor. Following his retirement from Braintree schoools in 1955, Della Chiesa continued painting until shortly before his death.

This summer's exhibition at Quincy Historical Society marks the first complete retrospective ever presented of Aldo Della Chiesa's work — from his early student days in the 1920s to his last paintings from the 1960s.

Ron Della Chiesa is well known to Boston music lovers as host of WGBH FM's Classics in the Morning, Jazz Songbook, and live broadcasts of the Boston Symphony. He also hosts MusicAmerica and Strictly Sinatra for Plymouth's WPLM FM.

Ron made his radio debut at age 10 on a children's program in his hometown of Quincy. A Quincy High School graduate, he attended Boston University's School of Public Communication, where he worked at the then student-run WBUR FM. After military service, he landed his first full-time job at Boston's WBOS-FM. Subsequently he held the simultaneous posts of music host and program director at the then all-classical WBCN-FM, while also doing television announcing for Channels 4 and 7.

Della Chiesa joined WGBH in 1966 as a news announcer for Channel 2. In 1969, he switched to WGBH FM where he hosted two classical music programs: Prelude and Morning pro musica. Before long he found himself hosting an afternoon classical show, an afternoon jazz show, a late-night jazz show, and an overnight show, GBH After Hours.

Della Chiesa has continued to explore the relationship between musical forms, expanding his lineup to showcase live performances. Attracting an impressive roster of guests, he is as likely to be talking painting with his friend Tony Bennett as discussing coloratura with soprano Phyllis Curtin. He hosts many events around Boston, and serves on the board of numerous local arts organizations. He and his wife Joyce, a gourmet chef, live in a renovated Victorian home in Dorchester.

Baked Potato Casserole

My love of potatoes started as a child when my grandmother, whose eyesight was diminishing, still had the fortitude to teach me how to fry potatoes sliced on a cheese grater and cooked in a black frying pan.

Since then, I have discovered many ways to eat potatoes. One in particular is done in the oven, but sliced in the same way.

Baked Potato Casserole
two or three potatoes (depending on the amount you wish to make) (sliced thin either on the grater or by hand

2 medium onions sliced
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 cup warm milk

Preheat oven to 425 degrees

Slightly butter a casserole dish. Layer some of the potatoes first, then the onion, and part of the shredded cheese. Continue layering until done and top it with the remaining cheese.

Pour the cup of warm milk all over the top of the mixture. Bake for about 30 minutes until top is brown and sides are bubbly. It's the best and goes so well with chops, steaks, or fish.

Free Child Identification Program Saturday

This weekend the Massachusetts Freemasons, The Massachusetts Dental Society, the City of Quincy, Massachusetts Crime Prevention Officers Association, and the Quincy Citizen Police Academy will be hosting the CHIP Program.

The program will be held at the Quincy Masonic Building, 1170 Hancock St., Saturday, May 6, from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The program includes a video of your child, fingerprinting and a toothprint, all free of charge.

Toothprints provide another means of identifying a child that fingerprinting alone may not guarantee. Developed by a pediatric dentist, toothprints are a permanent record and method of identification. DNA samples can be used for scent tracing by FBI recovery dogs who scent salivary proteins. Taking toothprints is simple and painless. Your child simply bites down on a specially-designed wafer.

Hope to see you there.

Two NQHS Students Attend Biotech Convention

Susanna Liu, 17, and Peter Tam, 16, both juniors at North Quincy High School, attended the BIO 2000 Biotech Convention at the Hynes Convention Center.

Their project was one of 20 that was selected in the New England area to be displayed as part of the BioGENEius Program for high school students. Entitled "The Virulence of Bacteriophages T1 and T2," the project was an experiment to test the E. Coli viruses T1 and T2 under different amounts of UV light exposure.

As part of the BioGENEius Program, Peter and Susanna, with a group of other students, met Senator Edward Kennedy and Peter Lynch, who presented each student with an award at a luncheon.

Susanna and Peter, accompanied by their science teacher, Mrs. Mary Young, also attended the Plenary session later that day. Speakers included Charles Felbaum, President of Biotechnology Industry Organization; Roger Beechey, President of the Donald Danforth Plant Science Center in St. Louis; Eric Lander, Director of the Center for Genome Research at MIT; and Christopher Reeves.

Peter and Susanna were also able to view the exhibits that were set up by various local, national, and international biotech companies. These exhibits offered pamphlets informing the type of research they were conducting, job openings, products, etc.

Peter and Susanna obtained a greater understanding of the world of biotechnology.

Drug Court Conference Helps Committee Move Forward

Members of the Steering Committee for a proposed Drug Court attended a recent conference in Jacksonville, FL, as they work towards a Drug Court model tailored to the needs of Quincy and Norfolk County.

The conference was held in Jacksonville because that city's Drug Court is considered a great success and a model for other communities across the nation.

The Steering Committee includes: Judge Charles Black, Presiding Justice of the Quincy District Court; Quincy Police Chief Thomas Frane; Michael Walsh, Chief of Probation at Quincy District Court; Anthony Gemma, Assistant District Attorney of Norfolk County and Grant Coordinator; Audrey Cosgrove, Assistant District Attorney of Norfolk County; and Atty. Kevin Kirby of the Quincy Defense Councillors Association.

The trip was made possible, said Gemma, by a $17,900 Planning Grant awarded by the Department of Justice which requires committee members to attend educational conferences on the various models of Drug Courts.

Gemma said the next step of the committee would be to apply to the Department of Justice for an Implementation Grant, the deadline for which is in late February/early March of 2001.

Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating, the main proponent behind the Drug Court along with Judge Black, said the idea had interested him since his days as Judiciary Chairman while in the state senate.

Essentially, Keating said, the Drug Court targets non-violent, first-time drug offenders and uses a combination of treatment and monitoring to make sure they don't become repeat offenders.

"It's a form of coercive counseling," said Keating. "There used to be the idea with drug addiction that, unless that person made an internal change, nothing you did would make a difference. Current federal studies have shown exactly the opposite."

Keating said the Drug Court in Norfolk County would be especially designed to suit the needs of the area. For instance, besides targeting only first-time offenders, which Keating pointed out was the most effective use of limited resources, the Drug Court would not entail a separate physical building, as in some communities, but would be more a Drug Session within the existing court.

"For Norfolk County, early intervention represents our best chance of success," Keating said. "Our proposal is very effective and puts us in a different direction from many of the other Drug Courts."

Keating added that the greatest success so far had been the extraordinary amount of cooperation between departments, such as the Probation Department and the Sheriff's Department, cooperation essential for the program's success.

Gemma had much praise for the Jacksonville conference and for the idea of a Drug Court in general. "It was very well done," said

Gemma of the conference, adding that Jacksonville offered not only their own example but extensive videotapes of how Drug Courts were handled across the country.

Gemma pointed to many studies showing the effectiveness of Drug Courts versus the traditional court system, including a 1997 study by the federal government which showed 71 percent of Drug Court clients since 1989 either completed programs successfully or were still part of a program. The average Drug Court, Gemma said, had roughly that same 70 percent success rate (no repeat offenses), as opposed to 10 to 15 percent for the traditional court system.

Chief Frane said the Drug Court, especially in Norfolk County, would clearly separate first-time offenders from other groups, automatically excluding domestic abusers, violent criminals, or repeat offenders. "Clearly, we will arrest and jail the people who sell and manufacture drugs," said Frane. "But this program is geared toward those with addiction."

Frane said he was also satisfied the program offered a good mix of support and sanction. "In my opinion, this needs to be a post-plea arrangement after admission to sufficient facts," Frane said. "You will enter into a contract where the judge will stay the sentence pending completion of the program."

"If you mess up, if you fail a test, they'll put you in jail."

SL SENIOR LIVING

by Laura Andrus, Director of Marketing

THE VALUE OF A RELIGIOUS LIFE

Attending religious services may be a factor in enjoying a longer life. That is the conclusion of a psychiatrist at Duke University, who studied 4,000 people aged 64 years and older over a six-year period. He found that people who attended services weekly were 46% more likely to be alive during the six years of the study than those who did not attend. When such factors as health practices, physical condition and demographics were taken into account, it was found that attending religious services had an effect on longevity equal to giving up smoking. People who attend religious services regularly were physically and mentally healthier, had larger social support networks and more confidants and lived healthier lifestyles.

HOME IMPROVEMENT

The Fastest-Growing Evergreen

(NAPS)—Robert Frost once said, "Good fences make good neighbors." If you value—and seek—privacy, when erecting a privacy screen, don't overlook one that may make your neighbors green with envy: a fast-growing evergreen conifer.

One of the fastest-growing of all conifers is the Thuja X Green Giant, which grows three to five feet per year. Elegant-looking and uniform in shape, the Green Giant was the 1998 Pennsylvania Horticulture Society's Gold Medal Plant Award winner. It's cloaked in dense, dark, evergreen foliage clear to the ground, making it the conifer of choice for a privacy screen.

The Green Giant is a tough plant that is easy to grow. It tolerates almost any soil, is resistant to damage from ice and snow and able to withstand drought once established. It's also deer and bagworm resistant and is a good replacement for the disease-prone Leyland Cypress. It grows best in full sun, but will also perform well in medium shade. It eventually will grow to 30 to 50 feet in height and a slender 10 foot wide span.

This type of evergreen has a pleasant smell and the foliage is a deep, lustrous green color.

Tips for Adding A Redwood Deck To Your Home

(NU) - Planning to add a deck to your home? Many Americans are doing just that now that good weather is here.

Deck building isn't difficult, but if you're not handy with tools and lumber, your best bet is to work with a contractor. Your deck can be as simple or as complex as you wish to make it. The care taken in planning, choosing materials, double-checking measurements and adding personal finishing touches will go a long way in making your deck project look professional.

The California Redwood Association — one of the nation's most experienced experts on decks, fences and other outdoor projects — offers these tips for building a new redwood deck:

- Materials. Choose your materials carefully. Redwood is a popular choice for decks because it has the natural beauty and color of wood. It has minimal shrinking and warping and is easy to saw and work with. The heartwood grades are resistant to decay and insects.

It's important to build your deck out of quality material, such as redwood.

There are many grades of redwood available for deck construction. The knotty grades—Construction Heart and Construction, Common, Deck Heart and Deck Common—provide an ideal combination of price and performance for decks as well as fences and other projects.

- Planning. The first step in building a deck is to survey your yard and decide upon the best location. Consider wind direction, the amount of sun or shade desired, availability of water and electrical outlets, and other fixed conditions.

- Timing. Pick the time you build carefully, and don't rush into the project. Remember: A new redwood deck is a major purchase, one that will affect your property resale value.

- Build to Code. Be sure to check local building codes and regulations to determine what guidelines and restrictions you must comply with.

- Choose a Builder. Unless you're going to build the redwood deck yourself, check references and hire only a licensed, experienced deck contractor to do the work. Get a building permit to insure that the deck is inspected for proper construction and attachment to the house.

Additional information on deck building can be found in the booklets "Redwood Deck Construction" and "Landscape Architecture."

To order the package for $2.50, write to the California Redwood Association, 405 Enfrete Dr., Suite 200, Dept. NUD-0, Novato, CA 94949. For general redwood information, visit Web site at www.calredwood.org.

Parents/Child Workshop Starts May 10 At Adams Shore Library

The Parent/Child Workshop, a five-week program for parents and children from 1 to 3 years of age, will get underway Wednesday, May 10 at the Adams Shore Branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 519 Sea St.

It will continue each Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. until June 7, featuring experts in speech and language development, gross and fine motor skills, childhood nutrition, and locally available resources for families with young children.

Each workshop will be conducted by a community resource professional who will share the latest information in their fields as well as answer specific questions. Age-appropriate toys, crafts and books will be available for the children, with plenty of time for play.

Limited registration is required and Quincy residents only may sign up by calling 376-1325 or stopping by the Adams Shore branch library.

The program is sponsored by the Thomas Crane Public Library and the Quincy Family Network with funding from a grant by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

Child ID Program Saturday At Quincy Masonic Building

Massachusetts Freemasons invite children, age 18 and younger to participate in a comprehensive Child Identification Program at the Quincy Masonic Building, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy Saturday, May 6, from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Each child will have a brief videotape interview, will be fingerprinted by police personnel, and will have a Toothprint™ made by professional dental personnel.

All materials are given to the parents for safe-keeping. No copies are kept on file and the program is free to all.

The program is part of a statewide CHIP event being held at various locations throughout Massachusetts May 6.

It is estimated that more than 50,000 children have already participated in Child Identification Programs (CHIP) conducted by Massachusetts Freemasons in cooperation with the Massachusetts Dental Society and the Massachusetts Crime Prevention Officers Association.

The Toothprint™ impression is relatively new means of identification where the child bites down in a wafer, making a permanent, archivable record of their teeth. Toothprints were developed by Dr. David Jesini of Framingham, a pediatric dentist who developed Toothprints as another means of identifying a child that finger prints alone may not guarantee.

According to Peter Banks, director of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, when a Toothprint is taken, sufficient proteins remain in the saliva on the wafer from which a DNA test can be successfully performed for yet a second means of identification from the Toothprint.

MASSACHUSETTS FREEMASONS, in cooperation with the Massachusetts Dental Society and the Massachusetts Crime Prevention Officers Association, will hold a comprehensive Child Identification Program at the Quincy Masonic Building, 1170 Hancock St., on Saturday, May 6 from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

He also said that, since the Toothprint wafer is sealed in a "zipper"-type plastic bag, enough scent remains for a trained dog to identify and track it.

Masonic Child Identification programs are held periodically throughout Massachusetts and may be sponsored by any group but are generally sponsored by local Masonic Lodges as part of their community service programs. Many school officials have requested that the programs be brought into the school system in their municipalities.

More than 1-million children are reported missing in the United States each year. There are more than 100,000 attempted abductions by non-family members for the same period, and more than 3,000 Americans remain identified.

May 6 has been proclaimed Massachusetts Masonic CHIP Day by Governor Paul Cellucci. For more information regarding the CHIP program and the date and location of the nearest Massachusetts Freemasons CHIP program, call 1-800-882-1020.

McCauley: 'Pay Raises To Be Given Hard Look'

to discuss the proposed budget.

Meetings will take place: Monday, May 8; Wednesday, May 10; Tuesday, May 16; and Tuesday, May 23.

An additional "wrap-up" meeting will be announced at a later date.

McCauley hopes to have the budget, which needs to be approved no later than June 15, ready for a vote at the council's June 5 meeting.

The bulk of the budget increase, reports the Mayor's Executive Secretary John Keenan, comes from both union and non-union salary raises, a $2.5 million commitment to what is now Quincy Medical Center, and a dramatic increase in health insurance, which is also related to the bailout of the hospital.

The budget also includes four percent salary increases for many of the city's unions, including its teachers, firefighters, and public employees. It also includes raises for some 65-75 non-union employees, including upgrades for the department heads, who Keenan said had not been given upgrades in five years.

In terms of new jobs, the budget calls for a clerk of the works, three new drivers for the city's Trans-Van program, new library employees to staff the expanded Crane Library (which will be open Sundays), a recently-created sixth police captain, an assistant data collector, and added Parks Department Personnel to maintain Quincy Public School grounds.

The new budget also includes such items as a $120,000 increase for the city's new condo trash pick-up program and a $75,000 increase for a comprehensive Fire Study to determine the future needs of the Quincy Fire Department.

There is also a $2,900,892 increase for the city's schools, a $896,695 increase for MWRA costs, and an $849,253 increase in the city's debt service.

Keenan emphasized that last year's budget proposal, which was originally set at roughly $165 million, was a truly exceptional "bare bones" budget because many expensive issues - union contracts for the teachers, firefighters, and public employees, the bailout of Quincy Hospital, the state budgetary crisis -- were still outstanding and would require later appropriations. "Last year's budget didn't completely reflect the city's needs and we knew that in July," Keenan said.

Fiscal Year 2001 runs from July 1, 2000, until June 30, 2001.

Contest Winners Announced Leo Kelley Honored At Evergreen Program Tenth Anniversary

State Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Durand paid a visit to the recent 10th anniversary celebration of Quincy's Evergreen Program and presented Leo Kelly, its chairman, with the state's Green Seal Award for his environmental contributions.

The award, usually reserved for schools and organizations, was given to Kelly in recognition of Kelly's role as founder and chairman of the Evergreen Program, which recycles old Christmas trees while providing new trees to Quincy residents for planting.

An estimated 19,000 new trees have been planted in the city since the start of the program.

"It was a beautiful day," said Kelly of the celebration which took place at the New City Hall Atrium and was also attended by Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments. "People got a chance to have fun and also see the history of the program."

The day, Kelly said, featured cake and refreshments as well as a display of the trees planted about the city, pictures of which residents had sent in as part of an Evergreen Program Celebration drawing.

The highlight of the event was the drawing of the contest winners, who won prizes donated by various individuals and sponsors.

Cash gifts were donated by Jay Cashman, who has a sponsor of the Evergreen Program all ten years of its existence.

Prize winners include: Robin Boutin, $300; Joshua Wallace, $200; Laura Doherty, $100; Carl Goodman, LEO KELLY, chairman of the Quincy Evergreen Program, here flanked by State Secretary of Environmental Affairs Robert Durand and Evergreen Program Coordinator Margaret Milne, received the state's Green Seal Award for his role as founder and chairman of the ten-year recycling and tree-planting program. Durand presented the award to Kelly during an Evergreen Program anniversary celebration at City Hall.

Mayor's Basket; Daniel Amato, Chairman's basket; the McCarthy family, a gift certificate from Mantis Florist; Wayne Batson, a 2-4 foot tree from Western Maine Nursery; and Jason Amato, a 2-4 foot tree from Western Maine Nursery.

Other prizes, such as wrapping paper, were also awarded during the event.

Advice For Parents In Today's World Of Media Violence: 'Don't Ban But Minimize And Monitor'

By CRAIG SALTERS

Lesley College Professor Nancy Carlsson-Paige was the keynote speaker at the 2000 Family Conference "Parenting in Today's World" held Saturday at Beechwood Knoll Elementary School and sponsored by The Quincy Coalition for Children and Families' Community Partnerships and Family Network Councils.

And her address -- "Raising Children in a Media Violence-Saturated World" -- confirmed what the more than 100 Quincy parents already knew: that parents were between a rock and a hard place when it came to protecting their children from the flood of media messages, some more harmful than others.

"Even if you try to keep these things (the messages and violent toys) out of your house, they will enter through the commercial culture," said Carlsson-Paige, who has studied the influence of media violence on children for more than 15 years and has co-authored four books and many articles on the subject.

Carlsson-Paige presented a litany of examples to support her argument that, for strictly commercial reasons, "there has been an increase in violence, gore, and grotesquery in children's programming in the last 15 years."

Consider: An action toy from the movie "The Mummy" where the mummy is impaled and his intestines spill out; professional wrestling dolls carrying a decapitated woman's head or with lipstick on its underpants; a wrestling doll from the "Banger" series which screams a vulgar word when struck against a hard surface; or the "Angela" doll from the "Spawn" series, where the super-thin, super-bust action doll is clad in little more than a leather bikini.

The audience of concerned Quincy parents offered their own examples, from the increased sexualization of characters such as "Poison Ivy" from the Batman series to "South Park" to "Pokemon" to a "Talking Kelly" doll which says "shopping is fun" and "math is hard."

And Carlsson-Paige stilled the crowd when she brought up a situation in Texas where a seven-year old boy, emulating perfectly a wrestling move of one of his action figures, accidentally killed his three-year old brother.

Carlsson-Paige is also disturbed by the increasingly complicated amount of "cross-feeding" in children's advertising, where favorite TV shows become toys, videos, movies, pajamas, prizes at fast-food restaurants, or clothing, so that the child is completely saturated with what is essentially a commercial product.

And Carlsson-Paige calls the very idea of marketing to children unethical in itself because kids have an almost impossible time distinguishing between fantasy and reality. "Young kids think completely different than the way we think," Carlsson-Paige said. "They don't see deeply or have any context. They base their judgment on what they see."

As a result, said Carlsson-Paige, children make little distinction between the violence of cartoon characters or actors and violence itself. Said Carlsson-Paige:

"Little kids get confused between fantasy and reality because, at this stage, that's the child's developmental job. It (violence) becomes something in their world, and they try to figure it out, and they do it. The media industry is portraying violence as glamorous and fun before they're even able to understand it."

Although much of the audience agreed with the professor's dire assessment on the state of media violence for children, many were more interested in what could be done to stop it.

"Don't ban," was Carlsson-Paige's immediate response, explaining further that children would inevitably get the wrong messages somewhere else while shutting down the lines of communication between parent and child in the process.

Instead, Carlsson-Paige offered these suggestions:

• Minimize and Monitor: Limit the repetitive, violent play as much as possible and try to intervene to move bad play into good play. For instance, adding a cardboard box hospital could turn a ferocious jungle battle into a rescue mission.

• Talk and Reassure: "Talk to your children as early as possible and listen really hard," said Carlsson-Paige. "Ask good open-ended questions (What do you see?). The stronger the lines of communication, and the stronger the community, the better chance you've got, because we can't do it all alone."

Carlsson-Paige ended on a positive note to parents: "These TV programs show winners over losers, the use of force, but there you are living with your children, so you have a wonderful opportunity to show them a different example."

Carlsson-Paige blamed the rise of violence in children's programming on the 1984 gutting of FCC regulations restricting such practices which took place under the Reagan administration.

WORK Inc. To Provide Jobs For Disabled Individuals At Hanscom Air Force Base

WORK Inc., one of New England's largest providers of employment training and placement services for people with disabilities, has entered into a federal government contract with the Defense Commissary Agency (DeCA) at Hanscom Air Force Base in Bedford.

Under the contract, WORK Inc. will manage the commissary and provide employment opportunities for individuals with disabilities, said WORK Inc. President Hank Cheney.

WORK Inc., a Quincy based non-profit agency, serves over 1,000 people with disabilities, including individuals with mental retardation, chronic mental illness, and those with multiple disabilities. People who are deaf also often turn to WORK Inc. for employment assistance.

The agency provides job skills training and job placement assistance and is also the largest direct employer of people with disabilities in New England, providing both a paycheck and practical work experience. The organization contracts with public and private sector clients throughout the region.

"This new contract will provide over 40 employment opportunities for individuals with disabilities living in towns near the base," Cheney said.

Part-time and full-time jobs available fall into three categories: shelf stocking, janitorial and warehouse positions. All jobs provide a salary ranging from $8.91 to $12.52 per hour and are night shift positions.

Contract goes into effect May 1. Individuals interested in the upcoming job opportunities may contact Susan Buckley at WORK Inc. at 617-691-1516.

'Open-Ended' Toys Best For Kids, Says Expert

Despite all the interactive graphics, laser lights, and non-stop action promised by modern-day toys, the best toys for children are still blocks, clay, paint, and the occasional cardboard box.

Or so says Nancy Carlsson-Paige, a professor at Lesley College and an expert in children's social development, the keynote speaker at Saturday's 2000 Family Conference at the Beechwood Knoll School.

Taking a page from Jean Piaget, 20th century Swiss psychologist and pioneer in children's developmental studies, Carlsson-Paige made a clear distinction between repetitive, "single-purpose" toys, which offer only imitation, and "open-ended" toys, such as clay, where a child can invest his or her imagination into the play.

A "single-purpose" toy, Carlsson-Paige said, would be a movie action figure where the identity has already been established and the action, such as karate kicking or talking, has already been programmed by somebody else.

A cardboard box, on the other hand, can become a pirate ship, a hospital tent, an oven, or a business desk, depending on the imagination and experience of a particular child.

And this imaginative play is more than just fun, explained Carlsson-Paige, since the child will be developing key analytical and conceptual skills needed for school and coping with the world in general.

"Play is the central resource for kids to work through their own experiences," Carlsson-Paige said. "It can give them a sense of mastery and control over their surroundings."

Carlsson-Paige is the author of four books on child development, including "Who's Calling the Shots" (New Society Publishers, 1990), which explores strategies for parents to channel children's play into positive and stimulating activity.

100,000 people on the South Shore are now benefiting from a recent transfusion.

First-Time Homebuyers Seminar June 3

Tiger Home Inspection will offer a free "First-Time Homebuyer" seminar Saturday, June 3 at Eastern Nazarene College, 23 East Elm Ave., from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Space is limited to 10-20 people and is on a first-come, first-serve basis. To reserve a seat, call Tiger Home Inspection at 1-800-628-4437.

The seminar is designed to help first-time homebuyers understand what to look for when purchasing a home. Topics to be covered include: (1) average life expectancy of major components in a home, including refrigerator, furnace, gutters; (2) what a home inspection will tell about the condition of the property you are buying; (3) buyers' and sellers' responsibilities during a transaction; and (4) common household repairs.

"Buying a house is an expensive investment," said Joseph Rizzo, CEO of Tiger Home Inspection. "A home inspection provides an accurate, realistic assessment of that property's condition so that the homebuyer can make an informed decision."

"We don't advise clients as to whether they should purchase a property, but we do provide them with a report that helps them make an informed decision," Rizzo added.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Age-Old Complaints, New Natural Remedies

(NU) - Having a hard time getting rid of that dreadful cold? Are you having trouble making those irritating pregnancy-related stretch marks disappear?

If so, you're in luck. Believe it or not, there are ways to fix or even prevent common beauty and health problems such as these without surgery or medication.

Natural remedies like herbs and vitamins are the key to correcting common health and beauty complaints if you know what to take. Whether you want to look younger, increase your sex drive or relieve dry skin, there's a remedy for just about everything. Best of all, they're completely natural, you won't go broke using them and they can be found conveniently online.

The only problem is that most people are misinformed about vitamins and herbs and don't have the time or expertise to decipher the magnitude of information out there on the market.

That's why eNutrition (www.enutrition.com) has narrowed down the selection and put together a list of some of the best natural remedies for some of the most common complaints:

Brittle hair/nails: This is commonly a sign of protein deficiency. Try Protein Powder or Horsetail, an herbal source of the mineral Silica.

Lack of energy: Chinese Ginseng increases alertness, reaction time, motor coordination, elevates your mood and reduces fatigue. It can also help with depression when fatigue and stress are contributing factors.

Stretch marks: Use Vitamin C with Bioflavonoids. eNutrition's product Mother's Skin Tone Oil contains this vitamin.

Dry skin: Taken internally, the essential fatty acids found in Evening Primrose Oil or Flax Seed Oil relieve dry skin.

Joint pain: Try Ashwagandha, also known as Indian ginseng. It has an anti-inflammatory quality and has an all-over balancing and strengthening effect on the body and its functions.

Frequent colds: Try Astragalus to strengthen your immune system.

Nausea or morning sickness: Ginger is a powerful antioxidant used to stimulate circulation and digestion that will make you feel better. It also heals wounds.

Memory: Try Rosemary. It increases blood flow to the brain, supporting brain function and improving memory.

Sweet tooth: Stevia is used as a sweetener in lieu of sugar and has none of the side effects. It is also very helpful for people with diabetes.

Preventing Falls

By SHARLENE WING

Injuries or complications from falls are the sixth leading cause of death. Hip fractures are the greatest danger, but you can also strain, sprain, or fracture bones from a fall.

Your vision, posture, strength, flexibility, safety of your environment and any medications that you take can influence your risk of falling. Monitoring your environment for potential hazards and improving your balance skills decreases your risk of falling and sustaining a serious injury.

Tips for Prevention:

- Start with your posture by standing tall. Keep your chin tucked, chest up and shoulders relaxed back and down, stomach in and your spine in good alignment. Keep your ears, shoulders, hips, and knees all lined up. Practice by standing tall against the wall. When you are sitting be sure to sit straight in chairs that give good support. Sit facing straight to your activity. Do not slouch.

- Have regular vision checks. As we get older, it is common for our vision to change. Having your eyes regularly checked will reduce the risk of missing a potential hazard due to poor vision.

- Evaluate your home for safety. Ask yourself these questions in each area of your home. Are surfaces slippery? Are step edges easily visible? Are there secure handrails? Is the path free of obstacles especially near the bedroom and bathroom? Is the lighting sufficient late in the day or at night? Are throw rugs and carpets secure with no curling corners? Are there thresholds? Are there non-slip mats in front of sinks to absorb spills? Are telephones easily accessible? Are storage areas easily reachable? Are chairs sturdy (no wheels) with armrests for easy transfers from sitting to standing? Are there sturdy handrails to hold in the bathroom around the toilet and in the bathtub? Are they secure? Is the surface of the tub non-slippery?

- Are you taking medications? If you take medications for your heart or high blood pressure you should have a conversation with your doctor about potential effects of dizziness or drowsiness. Dizziness or drowsiness can decrease your ability to recognize and respond appropriately to hazards.

- Exercise more. Many risk factors for sustaining a fall are due to the physiologic effect of aging. These effects can be changed for the better by increasing your level of activity and adding exercise to your daily life.

Discuss your concerns and do a safety check in your home with an objective family member. Evaluate each of these risk factors for you or your home.

Presidents Seek That Elusive W

By CHRIS POISSON

With 11 days rest and four starters returning to the lineup, you would think the Quincy baseball team would have been well-rested and energized for Monday afternoon's game.

Instead, the Presidents turned out to be a team rustier than a bike left out in the rain.

Quincy, which had last played April 19 in the consolation game of the Brian F. O'Donnell Memorial Tournament in Hull, committed 10 errors as it fell to Plymouth South (5-3, 2-2), 13-3, on the road.

The four starters returned to action after serving their four-game suspension for violating team rules.

Quincy (0-7, 0-4) hosted Bridgewater-Raynham yesterday (Wednesday). Today (Thursday) it hosts Falmouth at 4 p.m. in a game that was rained out last Wednesday. Monday it will square off against city rival North Quincy.

"We just made some bad mistakes," said coach Michael Draiccho. "At some point, we have to make plays."

Junior John Lupo started on the hill and lasted only 3 1/3 innings as he was a victim of the defensive miscues. Quincy took a 1-0 after the top of the first, but junior Dave Centrella committed two errors at third base that allowed Plymouth South to score two runs in the bottom half.

The Presidents tied it at 2 in the second but, once again, Plymouth South grabbed the lead. Junior Mark Robertson coughed up three balls at shortstop and Plymouth South took advantage by scoring four runs.

Plymouth South added a run in the third, three runs in the fourth and three more in the sixth to round out its scoring. Quincy scored its third run in the sixth.

Robertson injured his ankle in the sixth inning when he was hit by a line drive while pitching, and will most likely miss several games.

North Looks To End Drought

By CHRIS POISSON

Despite all the rain in April, the North Quincy baseball team managed to find itself in a serious drought.

On Monday, with the rain cleared out, the Red Raiders ended their drought, but still wound up with the same result — their fourth straight loss.

Although North Quincy snapped its three-game scoring skid, Barnstable (3-5, 2-2) pounded North Quincy's pitching staff on its way to a 21-6 drubbing at Adams Field.

After a promising 3-0 start, North Quincy's season is quickly heading south as it fell below the .500 mark (3-4, 1-3). Falmouth shut them out, 5-0, last Tuesday.

The Red Raiders played Braintree Tuesday in a game that was rained out April 20. Yesterday (Wednesday) they traveled to Plymouth South. Tomorrow (Friday) at 7 p.m., they take on B.C. High at home and Monday they battle Quincy in a city showdown.

Junior Keith Doherty (1-2), who had not allowed a run in 11 innings, couldn't make it out of the third. The left-hander lasted only 2 2/3 innings, allowing 13 runs on 11 hits.

Doherty should've had a 1-2-3 first inning, but Barnstable reached him for four runs as his defense didn't help him out, although it won't show up in the books.

Senior T.J. Bell, who started in place of senior Dan O'Toole, missed two foul pop-ups at first base that allowed the leadoff batter to reach on a single. With a runner at first, third baseman Chris Doherty moved in and the next batter singled past him. Had Bell got the out, Doherty would have been in position to field the grounder for the second out.

The third batter hit a single to center that sailed over the head of senior co-captain Joe Flynn, who misread the ball by taking a couple of steps in, allowing the first run to score.

North Quincy got a run back in the bottom half when senior Rob Celata drilled an RBI double that short-hopped the right field fence, officially ending the 21-inning scoreless string.

In second, Barnstable went up 6-1 when Flynn misplayed another ball in center that turned into an RBI triple. North Quincy cut it to 6-3 in the bottom half. Senior Chris Lockhead, who reached on a walk, scored when senior John Gavin reached on an error. Celata added an RBI single.

The Red Raiders scored three runs in the fourth, highlighted by senior Chris Walsh's two-run double, to make it 15-6, but that was as close as they would come.

Mite B's Win Waterville Valley Tourney

The Quincy Mite B travel team captured the Waterville Valley Tournament crown with a 5-1 triumph over Stoneham in New Hampshire recently.

Quincy took three of four games in the tourney led by goalie Jeff Giordani's stellar play between the pipes with two shutouts.

Seamus McKenna scored the first goal unassisted. Kevin Keefe tallied the second with an assist from Bobby Fontana. Zac Helfrich scored when he tipped in a blast from Joe Vialpando.

Derek Murphy scored with assists from Keefe and Andrew McCarthy. Matt Rodriguez netted the final goal.

Quincy also faced Stoneham in the third game and whipped them, 7-0, as Giordani picked up the shutout. Murphy scored first with assists from Kevin Shea and Fontana.

Keefe followed with an assist from Wayne Milford. Rodriguez tallied the third goal as McKenna and McCarthy notched the helpers. McKenna and Milford each struck twice to close out the scoring. Peter Eleey had an assist on a McKenna goal.

Quincy crushed South Boston, 11-0, in the second game of the tournament as Giordani picked up his first shutout. Keefe, Milford and McKenna each scored a pair of goals. Murphy, Kevin Magoon, Rodriguez, McCarthy and Vialpando added goals.

Eleey, McKenna, Fontana and Milford recorded assists.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 3-2 loss to Nashoba. In the third period, Milford scored Quincy's first goal with an assist from Fontana, and Vialpando tallied the other goal unassisted.

North Girls Place Fifth In Class A Relays

The North Quincy girls track team relied on field event dominance to score a school record 30 points, placing fifth at Saturday's Class A State Relays at Brockton's Marciano Stadium.

If the high jump team had not been disqualified for failing to clear opening height, the Red Raiders might have won.

North Quincy traveled to Barnstable Tuesday and hosts Falmouth today (Thursday) in a make-up game from April 4. Saturday, the freshmen and sophomores take part in the annual Carver Invitational.

Cambridge Rindge & Latin dominated on the track, scoring 38 points to win. Silver Lake finished just ahead of North Quincy with 32 points. Laker wins in the high jump, discus and javelin proved to be the difference.

"We planned to score heavily in the field events, that's our strength," said coach Geoff Hennessy. "We're young. We'll be a force a year from now. Only four seniors figured in the scoring, but there's lots of freshmen waiting in the wings to take over."

Lisa DellaCroce, Lena Yuen and Ellen Trang finished second in the discus, and Maureen Holleran, Lauren Sleeth and Julia McGunigle took second in the javelin.

Erin McFarland, Kellie Conley, Linda Nguyen and Allie Lacey took third in the 4 x 800, while the trio of Sherie Demonte, Yuen and DellaCroce grabbed third in the shot-put.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Can it not be said progress or failure is mainly due to proper, improper or sometimes an utter lack of thinking? Surely it is true that new ideas and powerful thoughts can affect your own destiny and in some cases even the destiny of mankind in general. Men like Alexander, Napoleon and Hitler had thoughts which led to wars of conquest. They brought only destruction. Other men with other thoughts brought progress, prosperity and happiness. And so it is with all of us as individuals...

Our thoughts of today can create a better or worse tomorrow... Proper thoughts not only add purpose, they create new incentives for life itself. Is it not true if our thoughts are filled with faith, cheerfulness, gratitude, encouragement, happiness, love and friendship—we avoid negative and destructive thoughts of greed, despair, fear and vulgarity? Are these not compelling reasons to channel our thoughts toward the good things in life?...

Dolan Funeral Home Contributes Memorial Trees

The Dolan Funeral Home of Milton and Dorchester, through their affiliation with the Lofty Oaks Association in Bethlehem, N.H., contributes memorial trees for those families they have served.

The trees are planted in public lands in Massachusetts. Many times, the spring planting ties in with either Earth Day or Arbor Day. Often they are planted by youth groups (4-H, Boy or Girl Scouts, etc.). The tree plantings provide a valuable learning tool for the future.

The Dolan Funeral Home is aware that it takes about 400 trees one year to offset the pollution caused by one automobile and that trees provide a habitat for animals and cleanse the water and air we breathe.

This firm has long recognized the importance of community involvement and has expanded their role to fit the needs of the community. The memorial tree program is a positive contribution to both their community and the environment.

The Dolan Funeral Home, along with several hundred affiliated members of Lofty Oaks Association nationwide, has been providing memorial trees for their own state, since 1981.

ress. He is also a participant in a three-year Templeton Oxford Seminars in science and religion.

For more information about the lecture, call the Special Events Office of Eastern Nazarene College at 617-745-3714.

Eastern Nazarene College will host evolution and theological ethics specialist Stephen Pope Monday, May 8 at 1:45 p.m. in Munro Parlor on the campus of ENC.

Pope's topic will be "Science and Religion from a Catholic Perspective."

He will be responding in part to a lecture given by renowned historian of science Stanley Jaki, who presented a recent lecture at ENC entitled "Six Days or One Big Bang."

Professor Pope is the author and editor of two books, with a third in progress.

QHA's Mather Updates Council On Hope VI

Jack Mather, executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority, updated the City Council Monday night on the status of the QHA's HOPE VI application, the linchpin of the QHA's comprehensive plan to revitalize the Germantown neighborhood.

The application, which is being developed with ABT Associates, must be submitted to the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) by May 18.

Mather said the QHA could expect a response by late August or early September.

If awarded, HOPE VI would contribute $33 million to a roughly $100 million project designed to "deconcentrate large pockets of poverty" in the area and create a balance of affordable, market-rate, and assisted living homes in the community.

The rest of the money, Mather said, would be leveraged from city, state, and private sources, with the current city contribution estimated at $3 million for infrastructure.

In the course of his update, Mather said he was confident of securing the additional funding needed from a variety of sources, such as state tax credits, low income housing credits, Mass Highway funds, home grants, and even private mortgages.

Specifically, HOPE VI funds would be used to demolish the 180 units at the Riverview Development and eventually replace them with 210 units of both public and private housing.

Other projects, using a variety of funds, include the modification of 60 of the 275 units at O'Brien Towers senior complex to create assisted living units and the razing of 32 of the 400 units at the Snug Harbor Development to create more parking and space.

Throughout the city, 67 new affordable housing units would be constructed, again as an effort to "deconcentrate" the areas of poverty in the city.

"It is my opinion that we have to break through the pockets of poverty and have a neighborhood of balance," said Mather. "This will be the largest infusion of public and private resources in the history of that neighborhood and probably any other neighborhood in the city."

Mather emphasized that the plan called for many support services for the Germantown neighborhood, adding that it was time "to invest in the residents as well as the bricks and mortar."

Councillors Frank McCauley and Daniel Raymond took the lead in questioning Mather, not so much criticizing the project as wanting to know more details from Mather, noting that a summary of the application had been handed to councillors during, not before, the meeting.

Raymond was particularly concerned that, although displaced residents would have portable Section 8 housing vouchers, it would still mean up to a four-year displacement from their homes, schools, and communities. "What happens to those families? What happens to those kids," Raymond asked.

He even predicted that, voucher or no, some families would not be able to afford to move back to a revitalized Germantown.

McCauley echoed some of Raymond's concerns and wondered why buildings only 50 or so years old, which McCauley said had received much in the way of "modernization funds" over the years, would have to be torn down.

Mather responded that the buildings were past any "modernization" stage and that, more importantly, HOPE VI represented a chance to correct some of the community planning errors of the past.

"These buildings aren't just distressed physically, but emotionally, socially," Mather said. "To continue to just put Band-Aids on the development just doesn't make sense."

Mather also highlighted the "very public nature" of the HOPE VI process which, he said, had garnered much support from Germantown organizations and residents.

"This is just the beginning. We want to continue our dialogue with the City Council throughout the entire process," said Mather.

According to Mather, the 55 market-rate homes to be constructed at Riverview would finance the 10 additional affordable housing homes and the 65 homes together would generate $2.6 million in new tax revenue.

The HOPE VI federal program, designed to replace "unsalvageable" and hopelessly distressed housing developments, goes out of existence in 2002.

THIS BUILDING ALONG East Howard St. was part of the renovation of the Fore River shipyard under Sotiros Emmanouil that was never completed in his unsuccessful plan to put the yard back into the shipbuilding business. In the top photo, the building has that brand new, completed look to it. But looks can be deceiving. Middle photo is a rear view of the building facing the waters of Fore River. The bottom photo is a side view facing South St. The Justice Department recently estimated that there is at least $13.7 million in high-tech shipbuilding equipment exposed to the elements and could be damaged. This building, which is wide open to the elements, has equipment in it. Senator John McCain's Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee will hold a hearing involving the ill-fated shipyard project, May 16.

At May 16 Senate Hearing Sheets Welcomes McCain Look Into Shipyard

By CRAIG SALTERS

As Senator John McCain (R-Arizona) prepares for committee hearings which will investigate the troubled Fore River Shipyard, Mayor James Sheets says he welcomes them.

"I'm glad that he is," Sheets told The Quincy Sun Tuesday. "I think that the actions of both MHI (bankrupt shipyard owner Mass Heavy Industries) and MARAD (U.S. Maritime Administration) should be looked into. John McCain is a fair and honorable man and not the type of man to come in with any agenda."

But Sheets made clear a very fine point: that the May 16 hearing before the Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee, of which McCain is chairman, will look into the financial dealings of the shipyard as part of a much larger concern: the re-authorization of MARAD itself.

"They're looking to re-authorize MARAD in terms of granting guaranteed loans," Sheets said. "The Quincy Chapter 11 filing

McCain announced last week that he would investigate the $55 million in loan guarantees, $47 million of which are outstanding, made by MARAD to MHI and its owner, Greek ship-

McCain expressed doubt that the federal government would ever receive the $47 million which was paid to Fleet Bank when the bank called in MHI's loan in February.

Mayor Defends Pay Raises For Dept. Heads

Mayor James Sheets defends the raises included in his $183 million Fiscal Year 2001 budget, especially those for the city's department heads.

Under the current plan, the city's department heads would receive 3.5 percent pay raises on top of a four percent raise on January 1, 2001.

The mayor's salary would also be increased from $75,000 to $95,000 and city councillors' salaries would be increased from $12,607 to $19,500.

"Our department heads have not had a raise in five years," said Sheets, who pointed out that, over that same period of time, the salaries of union employees working for the department heads had gone up roughly 15 or 16 percent.

"We're losing people," Sheets said. "We've lost almost our entire engineering department, a department which saves us hundreds of thousands of dollars because we don't have to contract out for road, sewer, etc."

As examples, Sheets cited the names of former Engineering Department employees Patrick Brennan, Sean Hardy, Peter Hoytt, and Chi Man.

Sheets added that the proposed raises would only bring Quincy's department heads in-line with neighboring communities, warning, "If we don't pay our department heads reasonable salaries, we're going to lose them."

Sheets also said the city did away with car allowances (roughly $1,500 per year, Sheets said) for department heads, as well as for himself and executive secretary John Keenan, and "rolled that money into the base pay."

"That makes the raises appear larger than they really are," said the mayor.

The proposed raises, Sheets said, were the direct result of a Compensation Review Committee com-

Only $5,000 Cut In First Budget Session

The first budget session of the City Council's Finance Committee took place Monday night and saw a $5,000 cut from the proposed appropriation for unemployment compensation. The approved cut, requested by Councillor Frank McCauley, chairman of the Finance Committee, brings the new recommended amount to $40,000.

All in all, the two and one-half hour session dealt with 25 budget items, with two items, dealing with the Law Department and Recreation Department, bumped to the next meeting scheduled for Wednesday night at 7 p.m.

McCauley also requested that $20,000 be cut from a reserve for appropriations, that $5,000 be cut from a Tax Title Foreclosure appropriation, and that $25,000 be cut from the Data Processing budget. All three proposed cuts failed by various majority votes.

As promised, McCauley held over all non-union proposed pay upgrades for the final budget session, which has yet to be announced.

A budget discussion on the annual audit of Quincy College was held over at the request of Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who expressed concerns over reports that the audits were continually late and that federal fines were possible.

A roughly $2.5 million appropriation for Quincy Medical Center was held over at the request of Council President Paul Haro who requested a report as to just how much the federal government has contributed so far to the QMC bailout.

Club's Name Change A 'Hot Water' Issue At License Board

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The changing of the name of Hot Water at Marina Bay to The Water Club virtually came under "hot water" Tuesday as Ed Kane, owner of The Waterworks Club also located at Marina Bay, told the License Board that the change will be "confusing and a conflict."

Kane, who once managed Hot Water, told the board that he spends about $125,000 a year to advertise Waterworks and that The Water Club will be taking advantage of his advertising. He said he fears it will be "lost advertising."

Calling it a "public safety" issue, Kane said parking was "his biggest concern." He said on any given Sunday, where 200 to 300 cars are trying to circle the area and if five percent to the wrong parking lot, with the names Waterworks and The Water Club, there wouldn't be enough spaces.

Kristie Hendricksen, owner of Siro's and now the management company for The Water Club told the board that when Kane was manager of Hot Water, "no one came". She added she didn't know "why Kane was so concerned" about parking, since she has the same parking problems, and is still doing "a ton of business."

Kane said when young people are driving and looking for Waterworks, and if they take the wrong turn and park in another area, they might go to The Water Club instead.

In addressing the parking problem, Chairman Joseph Shea, while stating that he didn't want to "whip it to death" nonetheless said that in his dealings with Jack Gillan, traffic engineer, he was always told that there is adequate parking at Marina Bay.

Police Chief Thomas Frane said he didn't "anticipate any parking problems"

Finally Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, seemingly agitated, said "where people park is not this board's problem." He added, he was "fed up with the board getting sucked in about the parking."

Gorman said parking at Marina Bay is no different than parking at the South Shore Plaza in Braintree or the Hanover Mall. He said people going to McDonald's or any other store park where they want to. He added that the Plaza does not have designated parking spaces.

Gorman said that owners of businesses including those owning condos at Marina Bay "should work it out--don't come here, it's not our place."

Finally, on a motion by Walter White, building inspector who said he didn't think the changing of the name was in any conflict, and seconded by Police Chief Thomas Frane, the board voted unanimously and granted the change of name.

Rita Ougoorlian, formerly of Siro's will be the manager of The Water Club. Ougoorlian said the restaurant will have a "more casual fare" and gave the board the new menu.

She said they plan to open to 236 seat restaurant as soon as approval is given by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission. (ABCC).

City Celebrates Arbor Day With A Tree Planting At Hancock Birth Site

The Park and Forestry Department, in conjunction with Massachusetts Electric, the Quincy Historical Society and Central Middle School, celebrated Arbor Day with a ceremonial tree-planting at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

A handsome fern-leaf beech tree was donated by Massachusetts Electric to be planted at the site where John Hancock was born. The tree will grow to be 60-80 feet tall and could have a trunk five to seven feet in diameter. The tree was planted directly adjacent to the bust of John Hancock at the Adams Academy site, home of the Quincy Historical Society.

Students from Central Middle School were given a brief lesson on the importance of trees and the significant history of the site. Massachusetts Electric Arborist Jan Ramsey also had an informative question and answer session with the students.

"I wish to thank Arborist Jan Ramsey, Principal Frank Santoro of Central Middle School, and Joyce Baker of the Quincy Historical Society for helping us highlight the significance of Arbor Day. It is important that we instill in our youngsters an appreciation of the significance of maintaining urban trees as a vital part of our local environment and an important way to maintain our quality of life," said Tom Koch, Executive Director of Park, Forestry and Cemetery.

The Arbor Day holiday was originated in Nebraska by J. Sterling Morton in 1872. Over the past two years, the Quincy Park and Forestry Department has celebrated Arbor Day by either planting a tree at each elementary school or distributing a sapling-tree to every fifth-grader in Quincy.

Memorial Plaques Available At Quincy Medical Center

You can remember a loved one or honor a friend by putting their names on the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary plaque in the Hunter Hall of Founders at the hospital.

Nameplates are $85 each and become a permanent part of the Auxiliary plaque.

The Hunting Hall of Founders recognizes the contributions of the many individuals, businesses and organizations who have provided financial support to Quincy Medical Center over the years. It is named for Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting, a member of the medical staff of Quincy Medical Center from its inception in 1890, who became the first Chief of Staff when the City of Quincy assumed responsibility for the hospital in 1919.

Proceeds from nameplate contributions help support the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary, which raises funds for equipment and services benefiting patient care at Quincy Medical Center.

To place an order for a nameplate, call Natalie Fossati in the hospital gift shop at 376-5509.

The Meanest Mother

Do you remember that mean mother?
The real mean one!

She first appeared here 29 years ago and we still get requests to bring her back for Mother's Day.

It was 1971 when we first printed an article entitled "The Meanest Mother" as a Mother's Day tribute that year.

For many readers some parts of the article stirred fond memories of their own mother.

The author, as far as we know, was anonymous then and to the best of our knowledge still is.

And we still get requests to reprint the article.

And sometimes we also get complaints from a few readers who take issue with a line or two in the article.

Times have changed since 1971 when the Vietnam War was still tearing this country apart. And the way some of us see things has changed, too.

But, overall, we think the article is still pretty much appropriate today and a tribute to all the "mean" mothers everywhere.

It follows:

I had the meanest mother in the whole world.

While other kids ate candy for breakfast, I had to have cereal, eggs or toast. When others had cokes and candy for lunch, I had to eat a sandwich. As you probably guessed it, my supper was different from the other kids, too.

But, at least I wasn't alone in my suffering. My sister and two brothers had the same mean mother as I did.

My mother insisted upon knowing where we were at all times. You'd think we were on the chain gang.

She had to know who our friends were and what we were doing. She insisted that if we said we'd be gone one hour that we be gone one hour or less -- not one hour and one minute.

I am nearly ashamed to admit it, but she actually struck us. Not once but each time we did as we pleased.

Can you imagine someone actually hitting a child because he disobeyed. Now you can begin to see how mean she really was.

The worst is yet to come. We had to be in bed by nine each night and up early the next morning. We couldn't sleep until noon like our friends.

So, while they slept, my mother actually had the nerve to break the child labor law. She made us work.

We had to wash dishes, make beds, learn to cook and all sorts of cruel things. I believe she laid awake nights thinking up mean things to do to us.

She always insisted upon our telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, even if it killed us. It nearly did.

By the time we were teenagers, she was much wiser and our life became even more unbearable. None of this tooting the horn of a car for us to come running.

She embarrassed us to no end by making our dates and friends come to the door to get us.

I forgot to mention, while my friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old fashioned mother refused to let me date until the age of 15 and 18. Fifteen, that is, if you dated only to go to a school function and that was only once or twice a year.

My mother was a complete failure as a mother. None of us has ever been arrested. Each of my brothers served his time in the service of this country.
